Weber's 759 score for three games will be the goal for the high school age Explorers who take part in "Sports that last a Lifetime," the national sports and physical fitness program of the Boy Scouts of America.

The Explorer fitness program covers the fields of bowling, golf, swimming and physical fitness tests, according to Wayne Barker, Explorer advisor for the Lake Agassiz council.

In competing against Weber's score, an Explorer is allowed a handicap based on his average which is subtracted from 200 and multiplied by .80, Barker said. Each winner is presented an appropriate recognition piece.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

Another First

On Thursday evening I was in the Crookston Central gymnasium and, along with a number of wrestling fans, witnessed the first District 31 wrestling tournament. It's a certainty that this sport will continue to grow and this tournament will become an annual event.

The Prowler squad, and it was to the credit of coach Ed Krystosek and his assistant Dale Folger, gained the finals—all 12 of the boys. Six of the Prowlers were seeded into the district finals, with the seeding being based on the boys' season's record. The other six Prowlers gained the finals by scoring victories in semi-finals matches. The Prowlers will have six wrestlers participating in next week's Region Eight meet at Bemidji.

But to get back to my theme that it was a first in high school sports, this District 31 tournament, calls to mind that I have been in on a number of high school sports in their opening tournament. I can recall the first regional tournament, which was held in the Moorhead armory, with Thief River Falls, Crookston, Hancock and Moorhead competing, and which which was won by the Moorhead Spuds.

I recall watching the first Region Eight hockey tournament played at the local arena, and which was won by the Prowlers on a 3 to 1 win over the Roseau Rams. And the first District 31 baseball tournament is of recent history, being held in 1947 and won by the Crookston Pirates.

But to get back to the high school sport of wrestling, and to predict that it will have a booming future. It's one of the few team sports wherein the contribution of the 95-pounder is as vital to his team's success as in the performance of the heavyweight member of the squad.

Woods Memorial won by the Americans

In the first day of competition in the State-Dominion bonspiel, which will be concluded on Sunday afternoon after a three-day run, the seven-match rivalry between the Canadian and American rinks for the Woods Memorial Trophy, was won by the Americans, 4 to 3.

On the noon draw on Friday, the Henry Monson rink at Grafton defeated the Henry Nortoft rink of Winnipeg, the Gordy Earl rink of Winnipeg defeated the Wally Tunberg rink, the Lloyd Adam rink of Winnipeg defeated the Lynn Thompson rink of Grafton, and the local club's Ardell Liden rink defeated the Ed Armstrong rink of Winnipeg. On the 3 p.m. draw the Skippy Knutson rink edged out the Laurie Pollard rink of Winnipeg (this is the rink that was skipped by the late Charlie Woods), and the Ted McDonald rink of Winnipeg defeated the John Ferguson rink of Park River.

Starting the 5 p.m. draw, the Woods competition was in a three-all tie, and it was up to the Rich Jorde rink to defeat the Herb Lizette rink of Winnipeg. And the Jorde foursome, Curtis Boitem, Darrell Bakke, Olaf Jorde and Rich Jorde, after a slow start, giving up a pair on the first end, scored a win.

Hoping for the Warriors

All the hockey fans in Region Eight will be hoping that coach John Hopkins and his Warroad Warriors will defeat Greenway of Coleraine in that Region Three hockey playoff game at Roseau tonight, Saturday.

But it will apparently take more than high hopes to defeat this Coleraine club. Much of the Region Seven talk, outside of rating International Falls as the untouchables, was about Hibbing and Duluth East and Virginia. But Coleraine played the highly-touted Falls sextet pretty close in the Region Seven finals, losing by a 5 to 3 score.

The only unfortunate thing about cheering for the Warriors is that if Warroad should defeat Coleraine, and gain the state tournament as the Region Three entry, they will play Roseau of Region Eight in a first-round game at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, February 24.

Warroad Falls 5-0 To Champ Roseau

Coach Oscar Almquist's Roseau Rams won their sixth successive Region Eight high school hockey title on Wednesday night when they defeated the Warroad Warriors, 5 to 0, in the finals of the tournament concluded at Roseau. The regional title was the 13th that the Rams have won in the 22 years of Region Eight tournament competition.

The Rams, as representatives of Region Eight, will participate in the state high school tournament next week, and will play their first-round game on Thursday evening, February 24, meeting the Region Three entry, at 7:30 p.m.

In a consolation game, played following the championship game, it was a youthful Prowler squad that scored a 3 to 2 win over the Hallock Bears. Coach George Schleff used a Prowler squad that consisted of under classmen, having two freshmen, 11 sophomores, and four juniors in action.

Hallock, on Kim Mattson's deflected goal in the opening period, gained a 1 to 0 lead, and that lead was held until the 0:13 mark of the second period when Billy Dicken blasted a shot past the Hallock goalie. Dicken, on a hard drive from just inside the blue-line, gave the Prowlers a 2 to 1 lead at the 8:30 mark of the period.

The Prowlers upped their margin to 3 to 1 at the 7:59 mark of the third period when Gary Lavalley, on an assist from Dan Brouse, beat Hallock's young goalie, Phillips, from close in. The Bears came back with a goal at the 10:31 mark when a Prowler clearing pass was intercepted by Mattson, and he set up Jeff Pederson who scored from point-blank range, cutting the Prowlers' winning margin to 3 to 2.

Older Drivers Given Tips on Safe Driving

Passing years take their toll and, sometimes they do it so gradually that persons are not aware of the change. Deterioration of vision, hearing or reaction develops almost unnoticed until a person is faced with an emergency that he is no longer equipped to handle. The result is an accident that the driver may have avoided easily a few months or years earlier.

This is one of the reasons that the accident rate of drivers 65 and older, in terms of miles traveled, is exceeded only by the rate for drivers under 25 years of age.

Following are some of the problems that face an older driver in today's traffic:

a) As age progresses, hearing and eyesight are less keen.

(b) Judgment is slower. It takes longer to recognize traffic situations and to make the necessary decisions.

(c) Physical dexterity is weakened. Older people haven't the same ability to act with speed and decisiveness in an emergency.

(d) Older drivers are susceptible to injury and death. What would have been a minor accident some years ago, could mean injury or death now.

(e) The older driver is apt to forget that the volume of traffic is increasing all the time and that new rules and regulations are being continually introduced.

To meet these problems, the state highway department suggests the following points, designed to make driving safer:

(1) Get your doctor's frank advice about your driving. If he advises you to avoid heavy or fast traffic or night driving, follow his advice.

(2) Keep yourself fit and well. Drive only when you feel up to it.

(3) Don't drive after taking medication unless your doctor says it's safe to do so.

(4) Be alert at the wheel. Try to anticipate any sudden or unsafe actions by other drivers, pedestrians or children.

5) Keep up to date on traffic laws and rules of safe driving. Help on this subject is willing given by the Minnesota Highway Department, safety organizations, or the National Safety Council.

(6) Have a driving instructor check your driving and make suggestions. He can help you polish up your driving. He can also help to improve your driving knowledge and inform you about current laws and procedures.

(7) Plan every trip—short or long—before you set out. Avoid heavily traveled or high-speed routes. Stay away from routes or zones that bother you.

(8) Don't obstruct faster moving traffic by unreasonably slow driving. If you are impeding traffic behind you, pull off the highway and allow it to pass. Better still: choose another route or a less busy time of day or week.

(9) Keep your car and its equipment in safe condition. Take your car to a trained mechanic for regular check-ups.

(10) Keep your windshield, headlights and your eye glasses clean. Dirt on any of these surfaces interferes with your driving vision—especially at night.

(11) Install and use safety belts in your car.

Highway Patrol Officers Present Safety Programs

Minnesota highway patrol safety education officers made 2,520 public appearances before 334,900 youths and adults last year to promote traffic safety in the state, the patrol reports.

They also made 154 radio and television appearances and manned booths at 251 county and local fairs.

There is one safety education officer in each of the 10 patrols districts in the state, and in their educational work they cover all phases of traffic safety promotion. They show films, give talks and conduct meetings before students, youth and adult groups, law enforcement officers and civil defense officers. They also instruct and install school and bus patrol boys and girls.

During 1965, the officers made 769 appearances before 201,257 students, instructed and installed 25,942 school and bus safety patrol boys and girls and taught bicycle safety to 27,663 children.

They appeared at 258 meetings of youth groups with a total attendance of 43,162, made appearances at 651 adult group meetings that comprised a total audience of 36,633, and made eight appearances before police and civil defense agencies.

Highway patrol safety officers are available for organization meetings and programs anywhere in the state. Requests for personal appearances should be made to the Minnesota Highway Patrol, State Highway Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

Reeve, Johnson Attend Meeting Of Counselors

Among more than 500 counselors attending the general midwinter conference of the Minnesota Counselors' association in St. Paul recently were Robert Reeve, Lincoln senior high school counselor, and Orall Johnson, Franklin junior high school guidance director.

Topics of discussion on human development included a number of federal projects currently in operation in the state. Purpose of the spring and winter conferences of the association is to permit counselors to study and keep informed regarding educational and vocational developments that affect the state's school children.

Congratulations to the Future Farmers of America

Dairy Farming here in Minnesota represents a large investment in equipment and man hours. Many of our local FFA Chapter members are connected with dairying.

It is indeed a pleasure for us to join the firms on these pages in saluting these young men.

ONE YOUNG FARMER. . . .

. . . GROWING UP!

It makes a father feel good when his son wants to follow in his footsteps. The steps are getting longer in farming today, but the trained and experienced youth can take longer strides.

We are encouraged by the number of young men who are making a success of farming. Many of them have vocational agriculture training and FFA experience. And, of course, we're always glad to lend a helping hand.

Future Farmers Week

Members of the Future Farmers of America chapter in Thief River Falls are joining with FFA members throughout the nation this week in the observance of national FFA Week. The observance is designed to call attention to the FFA organization and its work in preparing young men for future successful roles in agriculture.

Appropriately enough, the 1966 theme for FFA Week is "Agriculture Is More Than Farming". Today, more than ever before, the meaning of the theme is true in America. Fewer farmers and larger farms have created need for additional goods and services in entirely new fields of agriculture. There are opportunities to serve agriculture in any of these fields.

When we think of vocational agriculture and the FFA, however, we like to think of the young men who are actively interested in farming. It is true that not all of these people will be able to farm, for a number of reasons, but those who have the opportunity will be embarking on a career which holds the potential for many personal rewards and gratifications.

Just a week ago it was our privilege to participate to some extent in the Minnesota Jaycees Outstanding Young Farmer awards program held in Thief River Falls. We were able to meet a number of young men who, in spite of the gloom-casters and negative thinkers, have made a success of farming during a period when farming in general has not been prosperous. For these young men, and the Future Farmers of America, the years to come hold untold promise.

Already there is talk of food shortages and world famine. In the United States the wonders of technology have enabled fewer farmers to produce more and have created surpluses which depress prices. There are indications that growing population and increased need for food will soon bring farmers a more equitable price for their food production, and farming will once again become a generally profitable business.

We salute the FFA and its program to prepare young men for fields in agriculture. Farming is a time-honored institution and the farm businessman of today is an expert in his own right.

Wealth and Poverty

The American people have been handed the stupendous bill which they are being asked to pay in return for being the world's foremost economic and military power. This cheerful news is handed down to us editorially by the Christian Science Monitor, which says:

"One out of every six or seven dollars which the American economy is expected to produce during 1966 will be required to meet this mammoth $112.8 billion sum for federal government costs. It will, in fact, be nearly 15 per cent higher than the largest yearly expenditure during the height of World War II."

And the Monitor goes on to say,

"One of the largest percentage increases in the budget (some 85 per cent) is for federal educational programs. Wisely used, such sums could return many times their value in later years in wealth, national progress and human happiness. But, like the antipoverty program, with which it is so intimately connected, the swiftly growing educational program needs a great deal of study and replanning to be made more efficient. So, in fact, do virtually all of the programs in this huge budget."

These increased costs will be spread over the country as painlessly as possible, most of them in the form of sales taxes and other taxes that will reduce the buying power of the many more dollars we will be handling. A few shrewd financiers will anticipate the end results and survive the inevitable period of adjustment owning the kind of property that has value in itself.

A few will survive with rich holdings of debt-free property. The majority, most of whom considered themselves rich, will find themselves with bundles of valueless paper. That is what happened in Germany when that nation went through the financial wringer.

New Breed of Experts

The following editorial appeared in a recent edition of the Oklee Herald:

THERE IS AN old saying, which says "Shoemaker, stick to your last," which keeps coming to mind when we see how certain people comport themselves to make headlines and television circuits.

For instance, there's the best-selling baby doctor who seems to have a compulsion to pound pavement whenever there's a civil rights demonstration going on. There's the apprentice professor from New Haven who seems to think that teaching college history makes him a diplomat, qualified to discuss peace terms with Ho Chi Minh. There's the lady anthropologist who turns up as an authority on patriotism, her thesis being that it's as dead as a dodo. Then there are the gee-tar plunkers who can provide instant answers to questions that puzzle Washington, the Vatican, and the United Nations.

We think they are entitled to their opinions. We will listen to Dr. Spock with rapt respect if he wants to tell us how to diaper a youngun, and we will accord similar respect to Margaret Mead if she wants to discourse on the brassiere-less Balinese. For all we know, Staughton Lynd may be a wizard on the Trojan Wars or Trojan Horsemen, and Pete Seeger may know all the words to "She'll be Coming 'Round the Mountain."

But why this specialized knowledge or skill gives these people a license to practice omnisicience escapes us.

The most ridiculous manifestations of cockeyed expertizing became evident on some of the recent 'teachins.' Many of the brain-launderers were a strange lot, indeed, with the weirdest of academic credentials. If the colleges and universities to which they are accredited don't fire them other steps are indicated.

Discouraging Progress

Senator Mike Mansfield, who recently was accompanied by four other members of the Senate in a visit to South Vietnam, returned to Washington with anything but a hopeful report as to the prospects for the outcome of the war in which we are now involved. Mansfield and the members of his party brought back reports that are anything but encouraging. These reports prompted the following editorial comment by the Wall Street Journal.

"Militarily, the Senator finds the lines in South Vietnam about the same as they were at the outset of the greatly enlarged U. S. commitment. Nor is there any predictable limit to the further military build-ups that may be required, because instead of a defined military line the U. S. is pressing against one that is in effect open-ended. The enemy is all over the cities and countryside and not even confined to South Vietnam.

"The fighting could extend to all Southeast Asia; it's already lapping over into Laos and Cambodia while pressures mount in parts of Thailand.

"Politically within South Vietnam, the Saigon government is only at "the beginning of a beginning" in mobilizing popular support. Politically in the world, the U. S. stands too nearly alone for comfort.

"With such sizable American forces deployed, it is difficult for the U. S. to keep up the idea that it is in Vietnam in merely a support capacity. Since the war is unpopular almost everywhere, the longer it goes on the greater the strain on relations with allies in both the Far East and Europe.

"It is not enough, although true, to say we are in Vietnam to resist Red Chinese expansion. The question that has to be tackled before too long is whether the U. S. is inflicting more injury on the Communists or itself on this particular battleground:

"If the answer is that the Communists are getting the worse of it, then the U. S. can go about its business and take in stride the verbal abuse it is recovering at home and abroad. If the answer is that the U. S. is in danger of damaging itself more than any conceivable gains would warrant, then the national interest would require a reexamination of policy.

"The questions grow in importance, not only because of the unenviable appearance of the existing situation but because Vietnam policy for years has seemed characterized by drift. With the stakes becoming large, the American people should have assurance that their government has some reasonably clear objectives and estimates as to the course of the war.

"Few except the critics from the New Left profess to have answers, but that is part of reason Congress might play a more active analytical role. Our need is not hysterical outcries against America's involvement but serious thinking about America's interest.

"Congress, we think, should make its contribution, in the hope of ensuring that this open-ended war has some foreseeable and honorable end."

Is This Ethical?

The Waseca Herald editor asks "Is This Ethical" when he makes the following comment in a recent editorial:

A photographer has been hired to snap (very favorable we suppose) pictures of New York Mayor John V. Lindsay. In the old days this would be done by the political party to which the mayor is affiliated. That day of political honesty appears to be done.

In this instance the $35 a day photographer is to be paid from Federal Anti-Poverty funds. Here we have the complete breakdown of the two-party system; a Democratic administration agency attempting to build up the popularity of a Republican mayor.

This stinks to high heaven but it becomes even worse when one considers the photographer. She is a socialite being paid from Federal Anti-Poverty funds. The poor thing.

Interesting Opinions . . .

"The one thing that might have been expected from Secretaries Rusk and McNamara on Vietnam was a little modesty about their policies, for they have a great deal to be modest about, but they have been reacting to criticism as if they had somehow been right all along and this is a bad sign."

Cold Weather Poses Problems for Drivers

Cold weather presents numerous and different problems from summer or even normal winter driving conditions, notes the Minnesota highway department. Severe cold taxes the moving parts of an internal combustion engine considerably more than normal temperatures, and because of this vehicles must be in good running order to avoid the costly and annoying problems which may result from cold weather and lack of care.

The engine oil must, above all, be clean. The oil should also be of lighter weight, and the very best guide to this is the manufacturer's recommendations, which are usually accompanied by a temperature chart.

Dirty oil is not only heavier, because of the dirt accumulation, but tends to stiffen and congeal in severe cold. This in turn aggravates the problem of starting the car to increased friction and resistance of the moving parts in the crank case.

The electricity supplied from the battery is largely channeled throught the starter which turns the engine over. The rest of the electricity is put through the distributor to the spark plugs. Since battery output is cut down considerably in cold weather, the electrical system must be in good working order to provide ample spark to the cylinders. Deposits on the points, improper electrical timing, faulty condenser or worn spark plugs can prevent a vehicle from starting in abnormal cold, while presenting no serious problem in normal weather.

Gas line freezes present another problem in winter weather; however, keeping the fuel tank close to full will eliminate condensation which causes the majority of fuel line freeze ups. If a freeze up does occur, a container of fuel de-icer poured in the tank should take care of the ice block in a matter of moments.

A car should not be driven immediately after being started in cold weather. If the vehicle is not properly warmed before driving, severe wear can result in the cylinders due to lack of lubrication and the rest of the car's parts such as the transmission and axels may break due to stress in the intense cold. By warming up the vehicle parts are sufficiently heated to avoid these problems.

The majority of these tips are simple common sense, but above all else, if there is a problem with your vehicle which you do not understand, consult a trained mechanic. It is his business to know the answer to automotive problems and it may be cheaper to engage him rather than attempt to solve the problem yourself.

Many of these problems can be avoided by simply keeping the vehicle in good order at all times through regular maintenance checks and sensible driving habits.

BLF & E Vice President To Meet with Union Tonight

Howard G. Kenyon, vice president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen is meeting with local officers of the rail union in Thief River Falls today to discuss major job and wage goals for 1966. A general meeting for brotherhood members and all firemen and engineers has been set for 7:30 p.m. in the Eagles hall, with local lodge officers to meet with the vice president prior to the general meeting.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (BLF&E) has launched moves on all major railroads for the restoration of jobs for locomotive helpers (firemen), wage hikes of 25 per cent and other improvements, Kenyon noted in an advance news release prepared for the meeting.

"Among our goals in 1966 is settlement of the long-standing dispute over employment of locomotive helpers (firemen) through the American system of collective bargaining," the union officer stated. He asserted that the BLF&E was determined to settle the issue through the "bargaining process" in order to "protect the basic labor-management relationship in our nation" and to provide the public with an "acceptable degree of safe railroad operation."

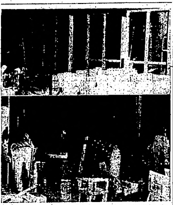
Kenyon noted that the two-year arbitration ruling that allowed railroads to remove up to 90 per cent of locomotive helpers (firemen) from freight and yard locomotives expires March 31, 1966. The brotherhood has announced it will insist that all jobs be staffed with a fireman unless a new agreement is reached in the meantime.

The union has served formal notice on all major railroads to initiate collective bargaining on: Restoration of most jobs for locomotive helpers; reemployment of separated helpers and reimbursement of those unfairly treated under the compulsory ruling; and institution of a joint training program for helpers.

The vice president charged that the train accident rate has soared since firemen were removed from nearly 50 per cent of freight and yard locomotives. He also said, "Compulsory arbitration also brought gross mistreatment of employees who were prevented from striking in self-defense against management-mistreatment. Men with 10 or more years service were denied seniority and job rights. Many had their earnings slashed and were forced to work at terminals far from their homes."

"The brotherhood and its members feel strongly that compulsory arbitration has impaired public safety and damaged the economic life of thousands of railroad employees," Kenyon said in the prepared release. "Only the railroad industry benefitted with a saving of approximately $250 million in wages of separated helpers."

On the economic front, the BLF&E officer said the union served demands on railroads January 3 for a 25 per cent wage increase, cost - of - living wage adjustments, night shift differential pay, supplemental pensions and other improvements.



WORK is progressing satisfactorily on the new Thief River Falls public library, located on the former Sande property at First street and Main avenue. The lower photo was taken from the center facing east, and shows bricklayers at work on another partition. The new library is to be substantially completed by March 1, with final completion within 30 days after this date.

Filing and Loan Maturity Dates On Crops Noted

Time between the final filing date for price-support applications and the loan maturity date on 1965-crops of several commodities will be about one month, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced.

In several instances during prior years, there has been a space of several months between the final availibility date for loans and the loan maturity date.

For the 1965-crop programs, the two dates have been brought closer in order to give farmers more time in which to make a judgment on the disposal of their crops. Producers of price-supported commodities now will be able to secure price-support coverage through loans or purchases on eligible quantities at any time between harvest and about one month before the loan maturity dates.

The new schedule of dates by which price - support application need be filed, and the loan maturity dates, respectively, is as follows:

Barley, March 31 and April 30; flaxseed, April 30 and May 31; oats, March 31 and April 30; rye, March 31 and April 30; and wheat, February 28, and March 31.

Loan maturity dates are unchanged from those for 1964 crop date for filing price-support applications for most commodities.

14 Sentenced Here As Result of Shoplifting

Apprehension of two young men earlier this month on a tip from a local businessman has resulted in 14 youths being implicated in petit larceny or possession of stolen property. The 14 boys appeared in Thief River Falls municipal court at a special session Friday, pleaded guilty to the charges and received sentencing at the regular municipal court session Monday. Cases involved a number of instances of shoplifting in the city during an extended period of time.

Charges were filed by the local police department following the apprehension of Richard Bushee, rural East Grand Forks and Paul Reimer, Cass Lake. The two youths were noticed by a local businessman as they left their car carrying unwrapped clothing items, later identified as taken from the businessman's store.

As listed by Mrs. Patricia Thompson, clerk of the municipal court, the persons tried and their respective sentences were as follows:

Richard Bushee, rt. 1 East Grand Forks, petit larceny, sentenced to 60 days at the St. Louis County Work farm, with the sentence suspended and Bushee placed on probation for 12 months; restitution is to be made with 60 days. Bushee was previously in court on February 7 on a separate charge of petit larceny and served 20 days in jail.

Paul Reimer, Cass Lake, petit larceny, sentenced to 45 days on the St. Louis County Work farm with the sentence suspended and Reimer placed on probation while in school and for a minimum of six months. He is to make restitution within two months and to serve two weekends each month during March, April, May and June in the local jail. The Library Corner

by Flora Allison

How very fertile is the human imagination! Pick up a copy of Rene Guillot's "African Folk Tales" from the library shelves and get a slant on the primitive imaginings, the story - telling inventiveness of the peoples of that far-away continent. Among these stories is the African version of the story of creation, in which Aziza, possessor of hands that wrought miracles, fancied new and highly improbable creatures and then created them. Other tales equally fascinating are to be found in this fanciful collection. Pick it up when you're browsing.

The much-requested "Memorable Quotations of John F. Kennedy", a compilation by Maxwell Meyersohn, has now been added to our printed treasures. Included in this book is the speech which the late president was to have delivered at Dalls the day he was assassinated. Re-aquaint yourself with utterances which have marked the man of destiny as a man of ready wit, sharp perception and enduring warmth.

"Treasury of the Familiar", Books 1 and 2, edited by Ralph L. Woods, is a reaching backward into the past for words of half-forgotten songs, poems, ballads; there may lie half-obliterated in your memory, fragments of these treasures. Here, now, is the answer to that puzzling, "How did that song go again"? Happy reminiscing!

"Chinese Journey" is a portrait in word and picture of the many faces China wears today: the ugly and the beautiful, the majestic and the lovly. Graphic photography by Goun Kessle, some of the photographs in black and white, many in glowing color, team with the narration of author Jan Myrdal to take the wraps off the often-enigmatic giant of the Orient. The book is one of the later acquisitions of the library, ready for you to open and ponder. It is an altogether satisfying peek behind the fast-crumbling Great Wall, and with the increasing role of China in the affairs of the world, a most timely and informative work.

Retracing the rugged trails blazoned by Lewis and Clark is literally possible in our time, and from the comfort of air-cushioned wheels. Calvin Tomkins, a staff writer for the New Yorker Magazine, gives vivid dimension to the historic feat of the intrepid explorers as they penetrated the unknown and uncharted vastness of the West. Maps point out recreational facilities, camp sites and vantage points for viewing the often-spectacular scenery which must have stirred the trail-blazers, too, with wonder, and caused them to stop and marvel. This updating makes for meaningful sojourning for the "Travel America" set of today. Use it as a travel guide, for historical data, or merely for armchair-dreaming.

A recent adjunct to our ever-growing supply of books is a number of volumes on the role of parents in a free democracy. A gem in this collection is "What To Tell Your Child", about death, birth, divorce, illness, a stay at the hospital (either for the child or a family member), a move to a new location—just some of the many disruptive influences in the lives of children, the crises which parents are so often at a loss to explain. A how-to-say-it book to help you find just the right words for these occasions.

Other helps in this field are "These Are Your Children", "An Introduction to Child Study", "Childhood and Adolescence" "Man's Search for Himself," "Values and Ideals of American Youth", and another new and great one, "As the Twig is Bent," by Diane David, as well as "Prejudice and Your Child", one of the more timely issues of the day and a penetrating search for the answer.

These and others add to the wealth of problem-solvers available to parents. They are here on our shelves, which are crammed to the walls with a wide diversity of materials on any subject of general interest. And your reading appetite for what's new in fiction never had it so good. This goes for the entire family, from the love - to - be - read - to toddler, through beginning readers, the juniors, young adults, the bread winner, and the Queen of the kitchen. Have you paid us a visit lately? Do drop around and tuck a good book under your arm. Get the reading habit; you'll become addicted. And you'll be glad you did.

State Recreation Plan Is Approved

Announcement this week that the U. S. Department of Interior has approved Minnesota's statewide out door recreation plan authorizes the state conservation department to consider project applicatons from local governmental agencies wishing to participate and receive funds under the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act program, according to Wayne H. Olson, commissioner of conservation.

Olson, the state's liaison officer administering this cooperative federal-state program in Minnesota said federal grants totaling $1,672,268 are now available on a matching basis for the acquisition and development of outdoor recreation areas.

The plan, prepared and submitted by the Department of Conservation, is a pre-requisite to receiving such funds.

Fifty per cent of the total grants are to be set aside for use by local units of government while the remaining half is earmarked for recreaton sites under state jurisdiction.

For the apportionment of the local funds the state will work through local liason agencies established by the 87 counties and three cities of 100,000 population or more. All other units of government will work through the designated local liason agency.

In order to qualify for funds, it will be necessary for each local liaison agency to have an acceptable comprehensive outdoor recreation plan to show evidence that a plan has been contracted for, is being prepared, or will be prepared by Dec. 30, 1968. Details on how counties and municipalities may apply will be sent to the local liaison agencies.

Project proposals must meet the priority needs identified in the statewide plan approved by the office of the Secretary of Interior.

The plan indicates that Minnesota's most urgent public recreation needs include, 1) suitable recreation land in and around large urban areas, (2) preservaton of rapidly disappearing wildlife lands (primarily wetlands), and (3) development of recreation areas to meet the requirements of an expanding population with more leisure time, more money and greater mobility.

Features of the plan include emphasis on flood plain zoning as a means of setting aside future outdoor recreation areas while at the same time discouraging the building of facilities subject to extensive damage from flood waters.

It advocates long-distance hiking, bicycling and horseback riding trails. A "Height of Land" trail is proposed which would follow the Continental Divide for 735 miles across northern Minnesota.

The plan emphasizes the need to capitalize on Minnesota's potential as a boating state. It urges the designation of portions of certain rivers as "canoe routes" such as those under consideration by a rivers recreation use study now being made by the state.

A system of approximately 2,544 miles of rivers and streams is proposed for study as possible canoeing and recreational boating route rivers.

The importance is stressed of preserving certain rivers such as the St. Croix in their natural, free-flowing state. The status of the St. Croix is now pending federal legislation for establishing a St. Croix National Scenic Riverway.

The plan proposes the establishment of a 1,723-mile statewide program of scenic roads and parkways compatible with the proposed nation-wide program.

It accents the importance of federal, state, county, municipal and private programs in meeting the recreation needs of the state. It emphasizes the need for cooperation between all recreation agencies in creating a balanced statewide recreation program.

Olson said, "The intent of the act is to add to rather than replace state and local outdoor recreation funds. It is geared to helping preserve the nation's public outdoor recreation resources and is aimed at serving the needs of the nation's growing population."

Edward Peterson Gains Promotion With State Farm

North Central office of State Farm Insurance has announced the promotion of Edward Peterson to general superintendent of claims at the home office in Bloomington, Ill. He is the son of E. O. Peterson of Thief River Falls.

Peterson has been with State Farm since July 24, 1950, and after some years as a claims representative in Detroit Lakes and Hibbing was promoted to claim superintendent in Metro Minnesota division at the regional office in St. Paul. Since May of 1961 he has been divisional claim superintendent in the Minnesota rural division.

Peterson is a graduate of the University of Minnesota law school and is a member of the Hennepin county and Minnesota State Bar associations. He holds the rank of commander in the U. S. Naval reserve.

The Petersons live in Coon Rapids and have two daughters, Tracy and Sara.

Relatives, Friends May Apply for Medicare Program

A relative or friend should apply for medicare on behalf of any persons over 65 unable to apply by himself, suggests Clifford Kittelson, district manager for social security.

Since March 31 is the deadline to apply for the voluntary medical insurance benefit, the time is short. There will not be another opportunity to apply until October of 1967. Coverage for those who enroll then will start with July of 1968.

A person who wants to apply on behalf of someone else may either write or visit his social security office to make the arrangements. The Grand Forks office is on the third floor in the Red River National bank building.

Proof of age such as a birth or baptismal certificate is necessary. The applicant should bring in whatever evidence of age is available.

The social security office will want to see the naturalization papers for a foreign born claimant who became a citizen. A person not naturalized may have other papers relating to his arrival in the U. S. that may be helpful in establishing his entitlement for medicare.

State Employment In January Rises From '65 Figure

Robert J. Brown, state employment commissioner, reported that Minnesota's January nonfarm wage and salary employment of 1,067,200 was up 46,400 (4.5 per cent) from a year ago.

He also said that the seasonal December-January decline of 27,900 jobs this year was considerably less than the average employment drop of 3,800 over the last five years.

At the same time, Brown reported that total unemployment in the state in January was the lowest for the month since January of 1952 and that the rate of unemployment last month, at 4.3 per cent, was the lowest for any January since 1947.

The total of 62,600 unemployed last month, though up 6,700 from December, was 17,900, or 22.2 per cent, below the level in January a year ago, according to Brown.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q—At the time my husband died, I could not locate his discharge papers and therefore did not receive a burial flag. May I get this burial flag now?

A—Yes. A flag will be issued if circumstances at the time prevented your receiving the flag prior to interment. The applicant must personally sign and set forth the circumstances on the application.

Q—What is the final deadline for World War II GI loan applications?

A—Individual World War II veterans face their GI loan deadline 10 years from the date of discharge or release from service plus one year for each three months of active wartime service. However, the final deadline for all World War II veterans is July 25, 1967. Veterans discharged from service because of a service-incurred disability will be given until July 25, 1967, despite lack of qualifying length of service.

Q—I receive a nonservice - connected pension from the VA. Can I also receive Social Security benefits when I reach age 65?

A—A veteran may receive a nonservice - connected pension, if otherwise eligible, as long as his income without dependents does not exceed $1,800 or with dependents $3,000 per year. Ninety per cent of social security benefits are counted as income.

Q—I receive a nonservice - connected disability pension from the VA amounting to $30 per month. If I no longer live with my wife will I lose any of my pension and if so, how much?

A—If you and your wife live apart and you are contributing to her support, your pension payment will not change. If you and your wife live apart and you do not contribute to her support, you will be considered a single person — without dependents—and your maximum income could then not exceed $1,800 per year. Your exact pension will depend on your individual income.

Q—I am a veteran of World War II with a 50 per cent service-connected disability. I have four minor children but I have never notified the VA about the fourth child since I thought the VA would pay nothing extra for children beyond the first three. Now a friend of mine has told me VA will pay additional compensation for any number of children. Is this ture?

A—Yes, but this additional compensation for dependents is paid only where the disability is evaluated at 50 per cent or more. It is always wise to inform the VA of changes in dependency status. Send a copy of the birth certificate of your fourth child along with your inquiry to the VA regional office.

Q—I read in the newspaper that my monthly compensation rate will be higher because of a law recently signed by the President. Do I have to apply for this increase?

A—No. The increase authorized by this recent legislation will be adjusted automatically by the veterans administration.

Q—My son will be drafted into service soon. How does he apply for the insurance now being offered to individuals on active duty?

A—Each individual entering the armed forces will be automatically covered by group insurance unless he states in writing that he does not wish it.

Langen Commends Youth at Shows Event

"Whether you're exhibiting a can of peaches or showing a baby beef, you're developing the type of competitive spirit and leadership ability that will be demanded by the world of tomorrow," said Congressman Odin Langen Saturday before the farm youth banquet at the Red River Valley Winter shows in Crookston.

"The spirit of competition in these contests is what really develops leadership ability," Langen said. "The winners cannot relax for a minute because there are others right behind them who are ready and prepared to take their places. It's like a basketball team. The first five learn to operate at peak performance because they know the boys on the bench are just waiting for a chance to get into the game. This is the spirit that built America and it's the spirit that will keep her strong."

Congressman Langen said the nation and world will demand full measure of the talents being developed by our rural youth through their experiences on the farm, in school and in club work. "You are the leaders in your schools and in the organizations to which you belong. Tomorrow you will be the leaders in your communities, state and nation, and the demands will test your talents and leadership ability to the very limit."

Langen said the major problems facing mankind for many years still remain problems and need solutions. "Your forefathers built the greatest nation on earth where six per cent of the world's population earns half of the world income, but we have not learned to pay our government bills as we go along. We have developed the greatest degree of technological excellence in history, but we have not learned to live with our fellow man. We can send a rocket to the moon, but have not learned to stop 40,000 people from being killed on our highways every year. The American farmer has forged the greatest food production unit in the world, but we have not yet figured out how to make farming a paying proposition except in time of war. And two-thirds of the world is still underfed.

"These and the many other problems that make up the inadequacies in this nation and the world represent demands for your talents, your perseverance, your competitive ability. The demand for your talents will far outdistance the supply, so your horizon will certainly offer great opportunity. Yours at times will be a difficult but good future."

"You are not only the hope of the hungry world," Langen concluded, "but you are the natural resource that will keep our nation strong, that will continue the nation's position as a world leader. Using your excellent moral and educational background to the best advantage, you will face the future with confidence. The years ahead are in your hands and you have it in your power and ability to make them great."

Darrow Lundeen Herd Highest in Pennington DHIA

Orville Peters, supervisor of the Pennington County Dairy Herd Improvement association, lists the following herds as the top ten in the association for the month of December:

	Pounds Milk	Pounds Fat
Darrow Lundeen	1,199	43.8
Dale Svendsgaard	1,266	43.5
Wallace Reierson	1,127	41.5
Myron and Mylo Carlson	992	41.0
Albert Koop	1,037	39.6
Harold Sabo	1,038	38.0
Martin Hanson	972	30.7
Clarence Swanson	1,012	34.8
Donald Erickson	944	34.7
Paul Morknassel	850	34.1

Herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. The amount of milk or butterfat produced is averaged out over all the cows, giving the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for the month.

If too many dry cows are included in the herd, the average for that month may be low even though the cows which are milking have high production.

There were 24 herds on test with a total of 712 cows and an average of 29.7 cows per herd during December in the Pennington association; 91 per cent of these cows were milking. The average amount of milk produced per cow was 838 pounds which tested 3.8 per cent fat, an average of 31.8 pounds of butterfat per cow.

Eleven cows produced over 500 pounds butterfat during the testing year, in a 365-day or less lactation. They were from the following herds:

	Pounds Milk	Pounds Fat
Mordy Morrison	16520	558
Mordy Morrison	14310	539
Mordy Morrison	17360	.627
Clarence Swanson	15280	636
Clarence Swanson	14200	539
Harold Sabo	15120	501
Albert Koop	16640	636
W. & L. Hamrich	13090	571
Clyde Christensen	13710	555
Clyde Christensen	18100	615
Clyde Christensen	13440	506

There were a total of 14 owner-sampler herds on test in December with a total of 277 cows, 87 per cent of which were milking.

Federal Income Tax Questions Answered

These questions most frequently asked by taxpayers on federal income tax matters with authoritative answers are provided by the office of the district director of Internal Revenue, St. Paul.

Q—Where can I get the additional forms needed to complete my tax return, such as proof of exemption, sick pay and medical expense statement?

A—These forms are available at your local Revenue Service office, or you may write the District Director, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101. Banks and post offices also carry most general-use forms.

Q—Can I deduct tuition and other educational costs for my children?

A—No. These educational expenses are not deductible on an individual return.

Q—Do I have to list my wife's social security number on our joint return?

A—Only if your wife had separate income such as wages, dividend, interest or other income which is included in your joint return. Failure to include your wife's social security number where her income is reported on a joint return will delay the processing of your return, and any refund due.

Q—My son received an $800 college scholarship last fall. Does this mean I cannot claim a dependency exemption for him?

A—No. Amounts received as a scholarship are not included in determining total support for your son. If other requirements are not such as the support and gross income tests, you can claim a dependency exemption for your son for 1965.

Q—Can I deduct the cost of going to the doctor's office for treatment?

A—Your expenses directly attributable to transportation primarily for and essential to medical care may be claimed as medical expenses. This includes amounts you pay for gas, oil, parking fees, etc., or taxi, bus, train or plane fares. You may deduct five cents for such travel instead of the ac- for such travel instead of the actual cost of gasoline, oil, etc.

Q—My wife is still working, but I am retired. Can we still file a joint return?

A—Husbands and wives can file a joint return, even if one of them has no income.

Q—I didn't get a Form W-2 from one of my employers. What should I do?

A—Contact the employer and ask for your wage and tax statement. If you cannot get it, file your return on or before April 15 without the Form W-2. Use estimated figures if necessary, and include a statement with the return explaining why the Form W-2 is not attached.

Q—In working on my 1965 tax return I find that I owe about $100 Can I pay this tax in installments?

A—No. Any tax due must be paid on or before April 15.

You can avoid this situation this year by arranging with your employer to increase the amount of income tax withheld from your wages each payday, or you may file a declaration of estimated tax on or before April 15 and pay the additional tax in quarterly installments.

Q—If you have a capital loss, is it true that you can carry it over as long as you need without losing any tax benefits?

A—Yes. The 1964 law provides that capital losses may be carried forward indefinitely, until they are used up. Previously, capital losses could be carried forward only five years.

DFL Precinct Caucuses Set in Marshall County

DFL precinct caucuses will be held Tuesday, March 1, in Marshall county, Birger Andeen, DFL county chairman, announced today. All local precinct caucuses will be held in wards and townships, and all DFL participants are urged to attend.

To be eligible to attend the DFL caucuses, participants must be eligible voters or eligible to vote by the time of the next general election; be in agreement with the principles of the party as stated in the party constitution and have voted with the party or intend to vote with the party in the next election.

"It is most important that all DFL'ers support their party by attending the caucuses in their precinct," Anden said. "The precinct caucus is the true way of getting real grassroots participation in the political process, and good attendance insure a truly democratic selection of delegates to the county, district and state conventions."

In Marshall county, the DFL convention will be held March 20 at 8 p.m. at the Newfolden fire hall. District conventions will be held the weekends of April 17 and 24. The state DFL convention will be held June 17, 18 and 19 in the Twin Cities.

Prowlers Score 98 in Crushing Halstad Team

Rolling up their highest point total of the year (scoring at a pace of better than 20 points a period), coach Whitey Olson's Prowlers defeated the Halstad Pirates of District 30, 98 to 48, in an interdistrict basketball game played here Saturday night.

The Prowlers will bring their home schedule to a close on Saturday night when they meet the Climax Vikings in a District 31 conference game. If the Prowlers are to continue to hold the number one rating in the district standings, a win over the Climax Vikings is a "must". In addition the game will mark the final home appearance of such boys as Bruce Saustad, Mark Stromberg, Tommy Cummings and Jeff Gustafson, Prowler seniors on the squad.

In Saturday night's high-scoring tilt, the Prowlers raced away to a 24 to 11 lead at the end of the first period, with Cummings looping four field goals and four free throws into the west basket.

The Prowlers continued to blaze in the second period, racking up 28 points, Cummings, before he was taken out of the game with 3:23 of the period remaining, had hit on five field goals; and Karl Poppenhagen dropped in four field goals and a free throw as the Prowlers had a 52 to 24 lead at the half.

In the third and fourth periods, it was Wayne Liden who took over aggressive and hard-driving guard scoring three field goals and a pair of free throws in the third period, and adding five field goals and a gift shot in the fourth period.

Boundary Waters Open to Fishing

Although Minnesota's inland waters closed to fishing of walleye, northern and bass on February 15, lakes and streams forming the Canada, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin remain open to later dates, it was pointed out today.

State fisheries supervisor Hjalmar Swenson said fishing on Minnesota-Canadian boundry waters remains open until April 14 except for bass and Minnesota - Wisconsin boundry wters are open until March 1. Minnesota-South Dakota and North Dakota borders waters will be open until February 28.

The fishing season on walleye, northern and bass will also re-open earlier on North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin border waters. In these waters the season will open on April 30 while inland boundry waters will open May 14.

Anglers should consult their 1966 Fishing Synopsis, said Swenson, for information on what are classed as boundary waters and for details on limits and other regulations.

Knutson Rink Gains States-Dominion Win

Thirty-two rinks began tossing stones on Friday in first-round play in the 10th annual States-Dominion bonspiel held at the fairgrounds curling arena. And when the final rocks had been cast on Sunday afternoon, the local club's Harland (Skippy) Knutson rink had won the Hartz Wholesale event, the premier event on the 'spiel. The Knutson rink—Rudy Rude, lead; Si Hanson, second; Ev Amundgaard, third; and Knutson, skip—defeated the Hank Monson rink from Grafton, 10 to 4, in the finals.

The Wilson Bros. event, the 'spiel's second event, was won by Hal Haluptzok rink of Bemidji. The Haluptzok rink was a fathers-and-sons foursome, with Hal Haluptzok at skip, son Mark at second; and Scotty Baird at third, and his son Scott at lead. The Bemidji foursome edged out the Bruce Brueckner rink of Winnipeg's Fort Rouge club, 5 to 2, in a low-scoring game. The ten-end game was featured by four blank ends, with the Winnipeg rink being blanked for seven successive ends.

The Noper's Motel event, the third event, was won by the Jim Langtry rink of Winnipeg's Fort Rouge club. This event's finals was not concluded until 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, and was decided by the margin of one stone, with Langtry defeating the local club's Hans Newman rink, 6 to 5.

In a seven-rink competition, between American and Candian rinks, and for the Charlie Woods memorial trophy, the American rinks, by a four to three margin, won the inaugural competition. Members of the late Charlie Woods rink, and fellow members of Winnipeg's Granite club, provided the trophy which will be up for competition every year.

In scoring their "surprise" win in the bonspiel, the Knutson rink won five successive matches. They opened with a win over the Laurie Pollard rink of Winnipeg, then defeated the Hans Newman foursome in a second-round match, and in the quarter-finals the Knutson rink defeated the Jon Larson rink, a former States - Dominion winner, and in the semi-finals they defeated the Bill Darichuk rink of Winnipeg's Grain Exchange.

The Hank Monson rink — with Hank Monson at lead, Don Dolan at second, Glenn Gilleshammer at third, and Ray Holt at skip — reached the finals by sidelining four Canadian rinks. The Monson foursome defeated the Henry Norloft rink, Jim Langtry rink, Lloyd Adam rink and Jimmy Paw rink, all of Winnipeg.

The line scores of the event finals of the States-Dominion bonspiel.

Hartz Wholesale event (first event):
Hank Monson 011 001 010 X — 4

CLAIMING the Charlie Woods memorial trophy offered by the Granite Curling club of Winnipeg at the State-Dominion bonspiel held in Thief River Falls last weekend is Curtis Swanson, left, president of the Thief River Falls Curling club. At right is Laurie Pollard of the Granite club. The trophy is awarded on the basis of the first seven matches in the annual bonspiel between American and Canadian rinks. United States rinks won the trophy this year by winning four of the first seven draws.

"Falls" Favored To Win Again in Hockey Tourney

Coach Larry Ross' International Falls Broncos, champions for the past two years (the Falls defeated St. Paul Johnson, 7 to 3, in the 1964 finals and scored a 7 to 0 win over Bloomington in last year's tourney finals) will be heavily favored to win the state high school hockey title for third successive year in the tournament that opens on Thursday afternoon in the St. Paul auditorium.

The eight-team tournament field was completed on Saturday night when, in a Region Three playoff game at Roseau, Greenway high school of Coleraine nipped the Warroad Warriors, 3 to 2, in an overtime game.

The pairings for the state tournament opener on Thursday is as follows:

1:30 p.m. - South St. Paul (Region Two), vs. White Bear Lake (Region One).

3:00 p.m. — International Falls (Region Seven), vs. Bloomington Kennedy (Region Six).

7:00 p.m.—Roseau (Region Eight), vs. Greenway of Coleraine (Region Three).

8:30 p.m. — Minneapolis Roosevelt (Region Five), vs. St. Paul Johnson (Region Four).

The semi-finals are slated for Friday evening, with games at 7:00 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. With the state championship finals scheduled for 8:30 p.m. on Saturday.

Local radio station KTRF will carry the games in which Roseau, the Region Eight champion, participates, and will also broadcast the state championship finals.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

A Cinderella Rink

The boys "behind the glass" laughed as Harland (Skippy) Knutson and his rinkmates—Ev Amundgaard, Si Hanson and Rudy Rude—settled into the back and began to throw stones in the tenth annual States-Dominion bonspiel last weekend. But as the Knutsons continued to move through the first event, the laughs began to subside.

In every match Skippy and Ev and Si and Rudy were up against highly-rated rinks, and were picked to lose. But they defeated Winnipeg's Laurie Pollard, the local club's Hans Newman and Jon Larson, Winnipeg's Bill Darichuk, and in the finals, the Hank Monson rink of Grafton.

The Knutson rink had the uncanny ability of collecting a cluster of stones to break up matches that were even-stephen. In their third-round match against the Jon Larson rink (a one-time States-Dominion winner), the Knutsons cracked a six-ender. And in the finals against the Monson foursome, the Knutson quartet rolled up a four-ender on the ninth end, and the Monson rink conceded the match.

As Bobby Eckren, the third on the Larson rink, said, "This Knutson rink is a deceptive outfit". And that's about as true a description as can be found—they were the bonspiel's gay deceivers.

And as another wag stated, "It is not only surprising that the Knutson rink can curl so well, it is surprising that they can curl at all."

In Their Last Bow

Saturday night's basketball game here, against the Climax Vikings, will mark the final home game of the 1965-66 season. And it will also be the final game on the Lincoln high school court for four a coach Whitey Olson's Prowlers. Mark Strofberg, Tommy Cummings, Bruce Saustad and Jeff Gustafson are the seniors on this season's Prowler varsity squad, and when next year comes around these boys will have been graduated.

And they will bow out before the home fans in an important game. The Climax Vikings, one of the district's five Class A teams, have the reputation of being "spoilers", and knowing that the Prowlers need a win on Saturday night to continue to hold down first place in the conference standings, they will go "all out". The vikings have three veterans from last season in Bill Keller, Brian Amundson and Dave Brokke, and such reserves as Tom Christofferson and Greg Lund have moved into starting roles this season.

The American Hockey Squad

The squad that will represent the United States in the world hockey tournament, March 3-12, left Minneapolis on Tuesday enroute to Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, where the tourney will be held.

Dick Heyliger of Colorado Springs the former University of Michigan coach, will handle the American squad during the tournament.

The squad as announced by team manager Wayne Dornack of Rochester is as follows: goal—Rod Blackburn, Minneapolis, and Tom Yurkovich, Rochester; defense—John Mayasich, Green Bay, Wisc.; Brad Teal, Rochester; Bob Currie, Minneapolis; Dave Metzen, South St. Paul; and Don Ross, Grand Forks; and forwards—Larry Stordahl, Roseau; Len Lilyholm, St. Paul; Ken Johannson, Rochester; Emery Ruelle, Waterloo, Ia.; Henry Therrien, Kimberly, Wisc.; Marsh Tschida, St. Paul; Dick Roberge, Johnstown, Pa.; Lyle Porter, Muskegon, Mich.; Roger Maisonneuve Ft. Wayne, Ind.; and Ron Naslund, Minneapolis.

Most of these players have been playing in the United States Hockey league this season. And many of them, too, are well-known to local hockey fans. Such players as Teal, who is a former Prowler; Ross and Stordahl, former Roseau Rams; Mayasich and Yurkovich, from Eveleth; Johannson, from Edmonton, Canada, and via Warroad and the North Dakota Sioux; and Naslund from Minneapolis Roosevelt, have been on the arena ice here.

This is a veteran squad, with most of the players in their mid and late twenties or early thirties, and that will be an advantage in the world tournament. The other teams, such as Canada's youthful Nationals, have been in training as a unit for several months. And the Russians, and the Czechs, and the Swedes, have ben engaged in a series of exhibition games. If the United States squad finishes third or better they will have performed creditably.

5 Warden Supervisor Positions Are Created

Minnesota conservation department today announced completion of another step in its organizational changes with the appointment of five game wardens supervisors to head up law enforcement activities in a new regional organization.

The new regional game warden supervisor positions have been assigned to Jerome Liemandt, Mathew Blaeser, Richard Tarte, Earl Lhotka and Joseph Alexander. The five men have all been with the department for several years as game wardens or game warden supervisors.

At the same time the department announced the appointment of Don Ledin, assistant supervisor of game, to the position of regional game manager to a new region which will have Brainerd as its headquarters.

This expand the number of game management regions from four to five. Under the new organization plan, all sections within the game and fish division will have the same regional boundaries.

Previously the game warden service had 10 regions, the fisheries section had five regions and game section had four regions. The new system is expected to facilitate coordination and reduce costs of operation.

Ted Shields, state game and fish director, also announced that Maynard Nelson, research biologist, has been appointed to the position of game research supervisor. Nelson, a noted authority on pheasants, has been stationed for several years at the Madelia research facility.

Liemandt has been a game warden since 1948, once headed up the department's hunter safety program and has been stationed in the western Twin Cities metropolitan area since 1961. He has been assigned to the Brainerd region.

Alexander has been with the department since 1957. His most recent post was Bigfork in northern Itasca county. His regional headquarters will be at Caterville.

Lhotka has been a game warden supervisor at Duluth for many years. He joined the department in 1947. His new headquarters will be Grand Rapids.

Tarte is presently a game warden supervisor at Bemidji which will now become the head quarters for a region under the new set-up. He has been a department employee since 1948.

Blaeser's previous duty was assistant chief game warden at department headquarters in St. Paul. He will now head up the St. Paul region. He has been with the department since 1943.

Shields said the men were all chosen following Civil Service examination.

Savings Bonds Interest Rises

United States savings bonds are now a more attractive investment than ever before, according to Rollin O. Bishop, chairman of the Minnesota savings bonds committee in commenting on the increase in interest on Series E and H bonds to 4.15 per cent.

Bishop pointed out that the new rate applies from Dec. 1, 1965 to all savings bonds, old and new.

"That means," he said, "that between 30 and 40 million Americans who now hold more than 49 billion dollars worth of Series E and H bonds will automatically increase their earnings."

Under the new rate announced by President Johnson, Series E bonds will return $100 for each $75 invested after a maturity period of seven years. The rate increase in the case of H Bonds, which are bought at face value, will be reflected by larger semi-annual interest payments.

Engineer Group Notes National Engineer's Week

National Engineers' Week is an annual observance sponsored by the National Society of Professional Engineers to "bring to the attention of the American people the role of the engineer in society, and his vital function in furthering safety, technical progress and public welfare". The week of George Washington's birthday is traditionally chosen since the first President of the United States was himself a notable civil and military engineer.

There are now more than 500,000 individuals in the United States who are working in some phase of engineering. This June, an additional 35,000 from the graduating classes of the nation's engineering schools will join this vast technological community. Employment forecasts indicate that the job prospects for these young engineers should be excellent.

Current observance of National Engineers Week is intended to direct attention to the contributions made by the nation's trained professionals and to the requirements for the future. Engineers have helped provide more and better products for the consumer—ranging from food, clothing and housing to cigarette lighters and bobby pins.

Engineers are in the forefront of the war on disease and famine. They have had a hand in just about every physical improvement that has made life easier. Their skills have given the nation awesome military strength. Now they are probing space with rockets and satellites. Modern engineering has many ramifications and refinements, all contributing to a better life and a strong nation.

Interested young people or their parents may obtain a free booklet which gives the basic facts about engineering. The booklet, "Engineering . . . A Career of Opportunity," is available from the National Society of Professional Engineers, 2029 K Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C.

AAA Gives Tips To Buyer Before Used Car Purchase

The man in search of the used car to buy is one of the world's most suspicious gentlemen. This attitude, the Minnesota State Automobile association (AAA) suggests, has been bred by tales of woe from friends who have been hoodwinked into buying a "lemon." Friends who are statisfied seldom bother to talk about the deal.

The used car business is a broad field and there are bound to be shysters in it, just as there are in other forms of business, so the first rule of thumb in buying used car is to select a reliable dealer.

If you see what appears to be a good, clean automobile, don't be too concerned about the mileage registered on the odometer. The way a car has been driven and maintained is often far more important than the number of miles it has been driven.

Once you've decided on a car you might like to buy, give it a test and a checkup before you sign on the dotted line. Make the road test more than a spin down the block and back. See if you can't keep it overnight for more intensive road testing.

Ask the dealer for the name of the former owner and check with the former owner for information on how the car handled.

If you're not familiar with the inner workings of an automobile, take it to a neutral garage mechanic for a thorough checkup. He'll know what to look for.

The points he will check will include, but won't be limited to, the things normally looked at during a routine tune-up and safety check—wheel alignment, brakes, lights, windshield wiper, battery, etc. The mechanic also can tell you whether any difficulties he detects can be remedied inexpensively or will require major garage work.

After you're convinced this is the car for you, get all the facts put in writing, and read before you sign. Make sure all the blank spaces concerning price and trade-in are filled, and any special agreements noted fully. Keep a copy of the contract for yourself.

So, AAA advises, in buying a used car, remember these basics:

1. Select a reputable dealer.
2. Test the car thoroughly.
3. Have it checked by a mechanic.
4. Read before you sign.

U.S. Would Aid Cuba Under U.N. Proposed Grant

"It's time for the United States to declare a dollar blockade to Cuba so that American taxpayer funds don't contribute to the export of communist subversion throughout the Western Hemisphere," declared Congressman Odin Langen today.

Langen's comment was in reference to plans by a United Nations agency to provide Cuba with over $3-million for the University of Havana and an agricultural research station. The United States contributes 40 per cent of the funds used by the U. N. special agency.

"That means $1.2 million of U. S. money would be used in the project," Langen said. "And what will they teach at Havana 'U'? More subversion of the hemisphere, of course, because the university branch to be helped is headed by Russian and Cuban military personnel."

Langen noted that Brazil and Paraguay have strongly objected to helping Castro through the U. N. "For good reason," Langen said. "Brazil and Paraguay are both principal targets of communist subversion, directed from Cuba. Just last month the communist tricontental congress on subversion was held in Cuba and was formally designated as the headquarters of communist subversion in Latin America, Asia and Africa. If we contribute funds to this unwarranted U. N. project we will be underwriting that subversion."

There's a Difference

From the Industrial News Review comes this interesting comparison:

To an observer standing somewhere west of the Mississippi River, the New York transit strike presented an interesting phenomenon. Subway trains were just as dead as when the massive power failure struck New York a short while ago, and yet the reaction in some respects was significantly different —although in both instances, the nation was presented with the spectacle of a paralyzed metropolis.

The first paralysis originated with an unforeseeable breakdown in a public power system in Canada. The second, by people deliberately walking off their jobs for days in an essential service.

When the dramatic power failure occurred, authorities at all levels of government were quick to question the competence of management and promised stern investigations. The investor-owned electric companies will be spending months satisfying the regulatory authorities and the public that everything possible was done to alleviate the power failure which lasted a matter of hours and to ensure that it is not likely to occur again.

But as the trains and buses lay quiet during the transit strike, there was no official clamor for an explanation. There was no taxpaying private enterprise whose competence could be questioned by investigators. Subways and buses are public business in New York.

The latest incident has shown once again that the people of New York City have a remarkable ability to accept philosophically the hardships of city life. It also shows there are virtues in private enterprise, not the least of which is a certainty that when something goes wrong with its performance, an explanation to the public will be forthcoming.

Federal Foolishness

Among the most ridiculous proposals which may ever be considered by Congress is the Rampart Dam proposal for Alaska. Studies are being made on a proposal to construct a huge dam on the Yukon river—creating a deep-water reservoir larger than the states of Massachusetts and Rhode Island combined. Conservation authorities say it is estimated the reservoir behind the dam would flood seven million acres—2,400,000 acres of which are high density duck breeding habitat.

Purpose of the dam, its proponents say, is electric power in excess of 34 billion kilowatt hours—enough to supply the power needs for 10 million homes. Alaska's current total estimated population—exclusive of military personnel—is 230,000.

The nearest city to the proposed dam site is Fairbanks—about 100 miles away. Anchorage is 300 miles from the site, Nome is more than 400 and Juneau, the capitol, is nearly 700 miles away. Huge costs of wheeling power produced at the dam—particularly in severe weather and over terrain that is difficult to traverse at best—to population centers is beyond comprehension.

Those who favor the dam say the cost of power from the dam would be as low at four mills per kilowatt—the biggest power bargain in America. But to spend the estimated $1.3 billion required for the project when there are no people to use the power would not be any bargain. Estimates on federal costs are usually conservative—so the $1.3 billion figure may be considered a minimum expenditure. Since it is estimatel that 25 years would be required to complete the project, it could be obsolete before the work was done. Nuclear power plants have been developing at a rapid rate.

The dam doesn't make sense from any standpoint when weighed on the scales of cost and need. The proposal should not even be introduced in committee. Yet there are fears that a push will be made for the project in 1966. Perish the thought! The government has enough past mistakes to correct this session without taking time to make even bigger ones.

Tax Forms Too Dull?

Find it a chore to fill out income tax forms? The editor of the Fergus Falls Journal has some suggestions that might make the annual task a little more interesting His ideas follow:

Income tax forms are in need of some changes. It is not that they are so unduly difficult, but they become boring in their similarity year after year. The figures change, but the terms and sections and items are all too alike.

Something ought to be done about it. For one thing, the income tax people might throw in an unexpected item for a deduction in an occasional year. Even if it didn't work out to be any great help financially for the taxpayers, it might give a little challenge and stimulate the reading of the instructions. For that matter, who is ready to pass up even a small nugget of a deduction when the figures say you're about to owe something instead of having a rebate?

Some other year there might be a surprise in the credits for dependents section. Or you might be given a chance to cash a U. S. Savings Bond without having a pay out on the interest earned. This could all serve to bring a bit of suspense in preparations to fill out that best known of all federal forms, Form 1040.

There are other possibilities. A chance could be offered for each to take credit for his share of the interest on the federal debt. That would be quite a choice deduction. And as long as many don't have much chance to take credit for depreciation on machinery or equipment, this avenue could be opened up by granting some depreciation on currency. Currently the dollar buys only about nine-tenths as much as it did a decade ago. That is certainly a stiff enough depreciation to warrant a tax break.

Then, considering how many gamblers there are among us, the IRS might take a sporting chance with some by offering a double or nothing deal on balances owed or owing, after withholding. This procedure might, of course, be a confusing factor in the setting up of the national budget, but then the budget is in a pretty confused state right now. Maybe a bit more confusion wouldn't really be noticed.

Working Together

Mention has been made before in this editorial space of the fine educational facilities which Thief River Falls has to offer. The community can be proud of its four public elementary schools, two private elementary schools, separate facilities for junior and senior high schools, vocational school and junior college. These schools combine to provide an excellent educational atmosphere for the city.

Two of the schools—vocational and junior college—are now engaged in definite consideration of sites for expansion. There is much at stake in the proposals being considered, and no amount of thought and planning will be too great in reaching the final conclusions. Because of this, every effort should be made to have all governmental agencies concerned working together to achieve the desired objectives.

Let us take a case in point for consideration:

(1) The junior college was started this year in temporary quarters in the Lincoln senior high school building. The state junior college board, together with the local junior college advisory committee and the Thief River Falls city council, are concerned with site acquisition for a permanent junior college. Plans call for the city to acquire the site and make it avialable to the state junior college board.

(2) The area vocational-technical school has shown steady growth and now is cramped for room. The Thief River Falls board of education, together with the vocational division of the Minnesota Department of Education, is seeking a site for possibly building a separate vocational school. Primary concern revolves around the welding and auto body classes which are conducted in rental quarters. The department of education has indicated to the local board of education that no new vocational programs will be approved for Thief River Falls in rental quarters. If vocational education is to be expanded here, new construction seems to be a necessity.

There seems to be agreement between the junior college administration and the local board of education that the junior college and vocational school could very well complement each other. For this reason, it would be desirable to have the junior college site and the proposed new vocational school site in close proximity. Such a plan would also provide a considerable saving of public funds through sewer and water extensions, public access and roads for only one area.

With such long-range planning necessary, it seems fundamental and elementary that all agencies involved should meet together and discuss their objectives and problems. To the best of our knowledge, this has not explained why such a meeting has not taken place.

Grown men with man-size responsibilities serve on the governing bodies of the units involved. It should be their obligation to do whatever possible to see that the public interest is protected to the greatest possible extent. We do not feel that this can be accomplished when the school board, city council, department of education, junior college advisory board, state junior college board and perhaps the county board of commissioners each go their separate way and can only guess at what the other agencies are doing.

We believe that all agencies involved—and particularly the junior college advisory board, board of education and city council—should hold a group meeting very soon. And since the city council has agreed to provide land for the junior college, it would seem that this body should take the initiative in arranging such a meeting.

No community has benefitted from its local governing groups acting individually in land use and building. Here is an opportunity for some centralized thought on extremely important transactions. We sincerely hope such a meeting will be arranged in the immediate future; it can do no harm and certainly would have potential for immeasurable good.

Otter Tail Power Company Sets New Safety Record

The nearly 900 employees of Otter Tail Power company set a new safety record for the year 1965, according to D. R. "Bud" Poole, director of safety and claims for the company.

Only four chargeable disabling injuries were reported for the entire year, resulting in the best accident record since Otter Tail began keeping records, Poole said. The next best year was 1959, when Otter Tail employes suffered six disabling injuries.

Following guidelines established by the National Safety council, Otter Tail must report any employee injury which results in that employee being unable to return to his next regular shift.

"The safety and well-being of the employee has been emphasized for many years," said Poole. "Beings and availability of the newest and best safety equipment for our people has definitely helped. Yet it's the individual employee's attitudes and efforts in working safely which have been the largest single contributing factor in our establishing such an enviable record."

Watch That THUMB!

Peter loves to "fix things," even though he sometimes gets hurt in the process. Yesterday he pinched his finger with the pliers. Today, he'll probably end up by banging his thumb with the hammer. But tomorrow he'll be right back at it again . . . learning the hard way!

From childhood, we learn best by personal experience. Our natural curiosity makes it difficult for us to accept advice from others. We want to find out for ourselves . . . and life has some hard lessons to teach us. Among other things, we have to discover that material possessions are no guarantee of happiness . . . and that money can't buy love, or health, or peace of mind.

Religious faith is another aspect of life that must not be left unexplored. Christianity has been tested by time . . . and it stands ready to be tested by YOU. Don't miss the greatest experience of all. Visit the church of your choice this Sunday.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . .
ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

ANOTHER MESSAGE ABOUT MEDICARE
FROM MINNESOTA BLUE CROSS!

If you are over 65 . . . or have parents who are, the following facts are vitally important to you!

The Medicare Law provides certain benefits for health expense protection to most persons over 65. However, it is important to bear in mind that if you are not now receiving a pension check from either the Social Security Administration or the Railroad Retirement Board, your enrollment in Part A of Medicare (hospitalization) is not automatic. You must file with the Social Security Administration. All persons age 65 or older must apply for Part B (physician's services) of Medicare, before March 31, 1966. We recommend that you apply for this coverage.

Generally, these are the benefits for which you are eligible under PART A of MEDICARE:

A. Part A of Medicare provides benefits for hospital care. It provides up to 60 days of care per illness, with the patient paying the first $40 . . . plus 30 additional days of care, with a $10 per day deductible paid also by the patient. Part A provides other in-hospital and out-patient diagnostic benefits — some of which involve co-insurance, deductibles and other limitations.

Generally, these are the benefits for which you are eligible under PART B of MEDICARE:

B. Part B of Medicare is the voluntary, medical, surgical (physician's care) part of Medicare. After a $50, calendar year deductible, it provides 80% of charges for physician's services and other medical items not provided by Part A of Medicare. This protection costs you just $3.00 a month, with the Government paying a matching share.

YOU WILL WANT TO CONSIDER THE ADDITIONAL PROTECTION OF MINNESOTA BLUE CROSS-MII

Since both Part A and Part B of Medicare leave gaps, you no doubt will want to supplement your personal health program. Blue Cross and MII will soon be announcing details, procedures and rates of their programs to supplement Medicare benefits. These programs will provide you with the complete protection you will want to have, to meet the cost of hospital, medical expenses.

Watch for the announcement!

I wish a good many would read the article, "Wedding Gifts Have Increased" by Charles M. Guthrie in the Minneapolis Tribune. A good many of these lovely brides need to learn what a bar of soap is used for, perhaps, a scrub brush, too. Most of us old-timers had to use the wash board too and the old sad irons on a hot kitchen stove.

"South Pacific" To Be Presented By LHS Musicians

Rodgers and Hammerstein's "South Pacific" has been selected as the operetta to be presented this year by the Lincoln high school music department. The music and art departments are joining efforts in the production of this highly acclaimed Broadway musical play.

In view of the fact that Lincoln musical events characteristically draw capacity crowds, the operetta is scheduled for a three-night run. Tentative production dates are March 25, 26 and 28. The show will be presented in the high school auditorium.

This show portrays the often humorous and sometimes dramatic adventures of a group of seabees and corps nurses stationed on an island in the South Pacific during World War II. French planters and Tonkinese natives add to the entertainment. The plot centers around a romance between Ensign Nellie Forbush, a Navy nurse, and Emile de Becque, a French planter.

Director of the opperetta is Bryant Ulseth, high school music instructor. Solo performers will be backed by the school chorus, and also by the orchestra, directed by James Solsten. Scenery is being constructed by the art department.

Leading cast members include Karen Ferber as Ensign Nellie Forbush, Bruce Parnham as Emile de Becque, Mary Kraemer as Bloody Mary, Elaine Mortenson as Liat, Howard Hirdler as Luther Billis, Greg Larson as Lieutenant Cable, Iven Ose as Captain Brackett and Mike Gulbranson as Commodore William Harbison.

Committee chairmen include Janet Flom, publicity; Emily Hoel, costumes; Tami Steen, choreography; Bonnie VeVea, make-up, Cathy Steitz, hand props; Iven Ose, stage props; Mike Gulbranson, sound; Mark Hanson, lighting; Paul Stokke, sets; Elaine Mortenson, programs; and Laurel Rude, art and painting.

File Correct Tax Return, IRS Urges

Federal tax returns received are running approximately 40,000 ahead of previous years, according to George O. Lethert, district director of Internal Revenue.

"We appeal to Minnesota taxpayers to file complete and correct returns," Lethert said. Many of those filed cannot be processed because of ordinary errors. These mistakes often delay refunds for the taxpayers."

The following advice is offered for current filers:

Wait until you have received all wage Forms W-2, and enclose all of them with your return.

In reporting income, all interest received, even if it is less than $10, is taxable.

Many telephone calls question a tax deduction for auto license fees. These are not deductible in Minnesota.

"And, when you file, be sure you have reported social security numbers, and have signed the return," Lethert added. Then mail your return to the District Director, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101."

ASCS Accepting Applications for Govt. Cost Shares

Patrick W. Culkins, office manager of the Pennington County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation service announced today that requests for federal cost-shares under the 1966 agricultural conservation program are now being accepted by the county ASCS office. It is anticipated that the signup period will extend through the month of March, 1966.

Producers who plan to request federal cost-shares for new seedings, seeding plots of grain for wildlife habitat, pits, or ditching are encouraged to call at the office and file a request at their earliest convenience.

Culkins said that the requirements of a soil test for practice A-2 and B-1 have been relaxed or modified to the extent that any soil test made after January 1, 1963 would be recognized. He stated further that there was a limitation on the amount of funds that could be expended on practice C-9 in 1966, and that the County Committee has determined that those producers who were approved for the ditching practice in 1965 but could not complete the project due to excessive moisture in 1965 would receive first consideration if they filed their requests indicating their intentions to carry out the practice in 1966.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Rustvold and Jeffrey of Fargo, N. D., spent the weekend visiting relatives in Thief River Falls.

New Provisions Announced for Wheat Program

Under the wheat and feed grain programs, farmers may plant wheat on feed grain acres as one of the options available for maximum flexibility in individual operations, according to Winton Knutson, chairman of the Pennington County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee.

Those farmers who decide to exercise this option will sign up in both the feed grain and wheat programs. The signup period for the program is now under way at the ASCS county office and ends April 15.

A farmer with a 100-acre wheat allotment and a 100-acre feed grain base, for instance, who decided to produce the maximum acres of wheat under both programs by substituting wheat for feed grains would follow these provisions:

After signing up, he would divert to conservation uses other cropland equal to 15 per cent of his wheat allotment. In addition, he would devote 20 per cent (20 acres) of his feed grain base to conserving uses. He would then have 180 acres (the wheat allotment plus 80 feed grain acres) that could be devoted to wheat.

He would be eligible for 100 per cent of parity for the projected yield production on as much as 45 per cent of his wheat allotment, or 45 acres. In addition, he would be eligible for price-support loan on all the wheat produced on the 180 acres — or he could sell the wheat on the open market if he desires.

Other options are also available under the voluntary wheat program.

For instance, by signing up for the minimum diversion under the program, the wheat grower would have the option of overplanting the wheat allotment by 50 per cent or of substituting wheat for oats and rye, or of planting the entire wheat allotment (without substitution). Winter wheat producers also may divert to 50 per cent of their allotments for payment, an option not available to spring wheat growers.

Details may be obtained from the ASCS county office, Knutson said.

He was married March 2, 1911 to Ramona Foss in Crookston. That same year he also assumed the duties of Clerk of Court and was still acting in that capacity at the time of his death.

Local Courthouse To Close Today For Storhaug Rites

The Pennington county courthouse will be closed today (Monday) from 1 p.m. until 3 p.m. to allow attendance at funeral services for Henry Storhaug, clerk of district court, who died Thursday.

One of the most long-awaited moves in this city's history was made by the Thief River Falls city council at a special session Wednesday night, when the city fathers voted to purchase a portable hydraulic dredge for cleaning the Red Lake and Thief Rivers. Plans are to commence the silt removal project shortly after ice leaves the river this spring.

Three road machinery manufacturing firms submitted bids for the council's consideration. Amount of each base bid was as follows: Ellicott Machine corporation, Ellicott Dragon, -$58,480; Zecho Equipment company, Dixie Dredge, $68,880; and Road Machinery & Supply, Ammco Dredge, $64,526.

The Road Machinery firm also submitted an alternate dredge bid in the amount of $49,567 for a lightweight Ammco dredge. After opening the bids Wednesday afternoon and hearing from representatives of each of the companies, the council voted to purchase the lighter Ammco dredge along with $6,064 worth of floating pipe, bringing the total purchase price to $55,631. Delivery of the machine is expected on or about May 1.

The dredge purchased is powered by a Caterpiller D-333TA diesel engine with a continuous horsepower of 180. The machine is built on a floating barge and removes debris with a rotating cutter and deposits it on the shore via a floating discharge pipe. Dredging will entail construction of dikes along the shoreline behind which the river bottom material, consisting of about 75 per cent water, will be deposited. Drainage routes will be constructed in the dikes to allow fish to escape and water to flow back into the river.

In considering the various bids, the councilmen wondered if in purchasing the lighter dredge they would be "sending a boy out to do a man's job." They concluded, however, that since the matter to be removed was mostly silt, the lightweight dredge would be sufficiently powerful. This conclusion was backed by a guarantee from the manufacturer.

The move was made after about 25 years of deliberation and grappling with the federal government, chiefly the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers. Having exhausted all possibilities of obtaining federal financial aid, the city government will now undertake the formidable project of cleaning the silt-filled river with its own resources. Money was earmarked for the project in the 1966 budget, and additional funds may come from assessments made to benefitting property owners.

In other action, the council heard the third reading of an ordinance providing for two regular meetings of the city council each month, amending rule 29 of section 2.101 of the municipal code. It was moved to adopt the ordinance, which will become law following legal publication.

City Attorney Robert Wurst told the council that he would attend a hearing in Washington, D. C., this week at which the senate commerce subcommittee will hear grievances from local airlines presented by LASAC (Local Airlines Service Action committee).

It was resolved to pay bills amounting to $4,887 to Lee Plumbing & Heating for installation of heating equipment in the library and $3,910 to Prichards Brothers for construction work at the vocational school shop.

Weather Forecast Indicates March Entry Like Lamb

Judging by present weather conditions and the immediate forecast, it appears that March will "come in like a lamb" this year. A low pressure area in northern Canada has caused the wind to blow from the south and southwest bringing spring-like temperatures to the upper midwest.

This weather, although pleasant, has brought some problems. Rain mixed with snow fell Sunday in Thief River Falls. This, along with thawing and refreezing, has made highways in the area extremely icy during night hours.

Forecast calls for mostly fair skies over the entire state today and fair to partly cloudy tonight, with increasing cloudiness tomorrow. Continued mild temperatures are predicted. Highs today will range from 35 to 48; lows tonight in the 20's.

Temperature and precipitation readings recorded at the Thief River Falls airport are as follows: 34 and -18 on Wednesday; 27 and 12 on Thursday; 30 and 0 on Friday; 31 and 2 on Saturday; 35, 24 and .20 inch of rain and melting snow on Sunday; and a low early this morning of 25.

The Library Corner

by Flora Allison

Once again, the season of Lent is upon us. Christians and Jews alike, though their beliefs are foreign to each other in many aspects, turn to the searching of the inner man, the renewing of the values which make the spiritual heritage of all of us the priceless and fragile thing which it is. It is a time for turning churchward from daily cares, and for concentrating on the deeper appraisals of life. Our public library is ready too, to assist you. . .and it is OUR library, you know. . .everyone's; all you need to enter and to borrow is a library card, free to all local residents, and available at a slight charge for those not in the county. There is a large choice for your contemplative hours, no matter what your religious affiliation. And in these days of ecumenism, what better way to learn how the other fellow thinks, and believes!

Look for L. W. Youngdahl's "The Ramparts we Watch"; Fulton Shen's "Lift up Your Hearts"; and "Love one Another." A. Weatherhead's "A Plain Man Looks at the Cross" is full of meaning; there are thought-provoking books such as "Soldiers Without Swords", by John Wishey, a condensaton of the book featured in Reader's Digest some time ago; John Nobel's "I Found God in Soviet Russia", which has also enjoyed wide publicity. Others for contemplation are "Guidelines to Courageous Living," by Lowe; "The Holy Land", with 30 color plates depicting the locale of the story of Jesus's life and death; "Everlasting Man," by G. K. Chesterton; "Think Spiritually", by John Mile Jr.; "The Voice of the Master", Gibran; Lin Yutang's "From Pagan to Christian"; "With God in Russia", by Fr. W. Ciszek; the revealing, childlike "Journal of a Soul," by the late Pope John XXIII; "The Psalms for the Common Reader," by Mary Ellen Chase; "The Man, and the Book Nobody Knows", by Bruce Barton, and "The World's Great Religions", authored by E. K. Thompson; "One God, the Ways we Worship Him", by Fitch, and above all, the Holy Bible, in several versions.

Elizabeth Goudge's "A Book of Comfort" contains beautiful religious poetry. "They Knew Jesus" by George Cornell; is a profile, in simple terms, of Biblical persons: Simon, Judas, Paul, Thomas, Martha, and others, who lived and walked with Jesus, and there are studies of his enemies as well.

"First Easter" by Catherine Marshall, the wife of Peter Marshall, is as delightful and spiritual as are her husband's works. "The Silver Chalice," by Costain, is also especially timely in this season. It is the penetrating, absorbing story of an artisan, bought from slavery, whose task of love it was to create a fitting receptacle, a casing, for the cup used by Jesus at the Last Supper. His assignment led him into encounters with sorcery, persecution, love, and the ire of Nero. Incidentally, a monumental motion picture grew out of this fascinating novel.

Other spiritual reading can be found among the works of the famous Minnesotan, Margaret Culkin Banning; A. J. Cronin; Lloyd C. Douglas (The Robe); Lagerkvist's "Barabbas", Peter Marshall "First Easter" and "Prayers of Peter"; "Song of Bernadette", Werfel; "Dearly Beloved" by Anne Lindbergh; "Easter Book of Legends and Stories" by A. I. Hazeltine. The youngsters will delight in that other facet of Easter, the legends of springtime and new life which the season symbolizes. These are found in abundance, and among them are such favorites as "Easter Chimes" by W. Harper; "Good Stories of Great Holidays" by Olcott; "The Egg Tree", "The Country Bunny and the Little Gold Shoes", by Heward; "Tekla's Easter" by Budel; "The Easter Bunny that Overslept!" by Friedrich, "The Easter Kitten" by Janet Konkel, and "Eastertime" by Schenk.

Juniors, the sandlot baseball set, have not made use of the library to the extent that they might. There's much of interest here for them, no matter what their reading tastes. Among books which tie in with the Lenten season is "Quest for the Dead Sea Scrolls", by Palmer. What boy wouldn't thrill to the mystery of the suspenseful detective story in which are elements of intrigue, the possibility of ancient smuggling operations, and the drama involved in a search for the true meaning of the key to an ancient culture? Here too is the challenge of delving into secrets which might go back to Christianity's very beginnings. The Scroll are said to be the greatest manuscript discovery puzzle of our time. Hand-drawn illustrations enhance the story, giving it the touch of realism kids of this age find so captivating. We have another volume on their level also, something to deepen the meaning of the holy season for them. Not restricted to this group only, by any means, it is one of the set covering many countries of the globe. It pictures in the splendor of color such Scriptural settings as the Sea of Galilee, Garden of Gethsemane, Jerico; the Jordan, River of the first baptism, also called the Hallowed River; The Dead Sea; Grotto of the Nativity, in the oldest church in the world; Nazareth, Little Town of Bethlehem, and King Solomon's Mines, to mention only a few.

After church services in the morning of any day of the week except Sundays, why not drop around and read here at one of the tables, or take home something to enrich your day in the world which is exclusively your own? Your castle, the center of your private life or that life with your children and family! You'll enjoy many of these books together.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

Features from the Kitchen of

MRS. DONALD RUPPRECHT

For the homemaker who is skeptical about trying an unusual recipe, it is sometimes beneficial for her to know the person who has tasted the recipe and the results obtained. For her this recipe corner is helpful as it generally contains recipes from people in the area.

Today's recipes are from Mrs. Donald Rupprecht of rural Thief River Falls who received prizes for both of these entries at the recent Pennington County Seed and Feed show held in Thief River Falls. In the Corn division her Coconut Macaroons won the championship award while her Haystacks, a potato candy, won a ribbon in the Potato division.

COCONUT MACAROON

2 egg whites
One-eighth teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1 cup shredded coconut
2 cups corn flakes
4 drops almond flavoring
2 cups corn flakes

Method: Beat egg whites and salt until stiff but not dry. Add sugar and beat thoroughly. Gently fold in the coconut and cornflakes which have been crushed bwtween the hands after measuring. Add flavoring and drop by teaspoon on buttered cookie sheet. Bake in a 300 degree oven for about 20-25 minutes until lightly browned and well set.

HAYSTACKS (POTATO CANDY)

¾ cup cold mashed potatoes
4 cups confectioners sugar
4 cups shredded coconut
1½ teaspoons vanilla
½ teaspoon salt

Method: Thoroughly mix potatoes and confectioners sugar and add coconut, vanilla and salt. Mix well. Form into cones or balls and allow to stand uncovered until dry. In a double boiler melt one 12-ounce package of chocolate chips, ¾ cup chunk style peanut butter, and ¼ cup butter. Dip each cone into melted chocolate mixture or drip chocolate over tops. Place on wax paper to harden. Makes approximately 100 pieces of candy. This candy freezes well.

Winning ribbons or championship awards is not a new experience for Mrs. Donald Rupprecht. In 1964 and again in 1965 she received the championship awarded in sewing at the Pennington county fair for entering the best woman's garment.

During the winter months, in addition to sewing, she enjoys reading. Free hours during the summer are spent in flower and vegetable gardening.

The Donald Rupprechts live on a farm nine miles northeast of Thief River Falls where Mr. Rupprecht in partnership with his father is engaged in farming. "New Eyes, Inc." Gets Aid from Telephone Group

For the fifth year, the work of New Eyes for the Needy, Inc., an international, volunteer, non-profit non-sectarian organizaton, is being aided by the Telephone Pioneers of America in this area, according to Lois Krause of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company in Thief River Falls.

"In cooperation with Northwestern Bell, we have again set up a collection box in our local phone company business office," She said. "We need metal frames in any condition, unbroken plastic frames with or without lenses, safety or sunglasses, soft eyeglass cases, and bits of precious metals such as gold, silver and platinum in old watches or broken jewelry."

New Eyes for the Needy, Inc. is a unique organization. In operation for 28 years, it collects discarded eyeglasses, sorts them, and distributes them to hospitals and medical missions throughout the world. The work is carried on without soliciting funds. Any money needed to buy new prescription glasses for the needy is realized from the sale of the metal in metal framed glasses, and of precious metals collected. Through the years, New Eyes for the Needy's mission has progressed and expanded to a world-wide organization.

The Telephone Pioneers of America is a 54-year-old organization of telephone people who have over 21 years of service in the industry. Active in community service in a variety of projects, the organization is now the largest of its kind in the world with more than 237,000 men and women members in the United States and Canada.

To illustrate the growth in this project over the past four years, Miss Krause pointed out that in 1962, Telephone Pioneers in the Detroit Lakes council, wich includes this area, collected 850 pair of glasses. In 1963, the figure rose to 1,029 and in 1964 it collected 1,600 glasses. Last year it was 1,750.

Rolvaag Ok's Mail Plan for Viet GI's

Governor Karl F. Rolvaag has announced his endorsement of a campaign started in Minnesota to encourage everyone to send mail to the boys in Viet Nam. The Chun King Corporation and Northland Foods Inc. of Duluth have launched a billboard campaign called "WOW!" The letters W-O-W are short for "Write Once a Week."

The billboards read "Let Our Boys in Viet Nam Know We Care . . .Write Once a Week. . .WOW-'em!"

Governor Rolvaag says the campaign started from a letter received by the Chun King marketing department from Viet Nam. A U. S. Marine wrote suggesting that he and fellow Marines would like some Chinese food. The Chun King Corporation then sent an assortment of their foods from a Hong Kong Broker and the Marines had their "Oriental" dinner.

A letter of thanks from the Marines closed with the line, "All of us were very grateful that there are those at home who do believe in us over here."

Chun King President Jeno P. Paulucci suggested the billboard campaign to get more mail to the boys in Viet Nam. Paulucci discussed the program with the Governor and said, "We at Chun King and Northland Foods sincerely hope this campaign spreads through not only Minnesota but throughout the U. S. We hope that billboards such as the ones we are using pop up in small and large cities alike. . . urging at least one letter a week be written to our boys in Viet Nam. It is our sincere hope that the other 49 governors join with Governor Karl F. Rolvaag so all of us let the boys in Viet Nam know that we here believe in the boys over there and that we are with them 100 per cent."

Roche Airs Rest Home at Lions Meeting Wed.

Thief River Falls Lions club met Wednesday at the Elks cubrooms for its regular noon luncheon meeting. President Phil Knys was in charge of the meeting.

Following the meal the meeting was turned over to Program Chairman Merle Lindberg, who had as his guest J. M. Roche, administrator of the Oakland Park Nursing home.

Roche spoke on the organization of the nursing home and its operation since 1955. He gave informative figures on the cost of operating Oakland Park and on changes made since his acceptance of the position of administrator.

Many new diversions have been added to allow the residents a period of relaxation by working with crafts, he said. Items patients had made last year were offered for sale to the public and the sale of these handmade items means a great deal to the residents of the home.

Roche touched on the rates charged for residents, and other facts concerning patient care, costs of meals, and general expenses. He concluded his talk by encouraging club members to visit the facilities at Oakland Park.

Three new members were officially accepted into the Lions. They were Dick O'Brien, Dwight Tangquist and Frank Klewel.

The club also heard a report on the recent mid-winter conference held at Portage La Prairie, Manitoba.

Broncos Repeat As Hockey Champs

Coach Larry Ross' powerful International Falls Broncos, making a successful defense of their state high school hockey title, and winning their third successive championship, defeated the Roseau Rams, of Region Eight, 5 to 0, in the finals of the state tournament in St. Paul on Saturday night.

The Rams, who had been forced into a three-overtime tilt in a semi-finals game against St. Paul Johnson on Friday night, played the highly-rated Broncos on near-even terms in the first period of Saturday night's finals. But the Broncos erupted for three tallies midway in the second period when Rod Christensen, Ron Weum and Steve Ross hit the nets to give the Falls a lead.

In the third period the Falls added a pair of goals when Dan Mahle and John Mathews racked up scores to boost the Broncos' game-winning margin to 5 to 0.

Prowlers Clinch District Position

The basketball Prowlers picked up a pair of valuable points in the district conference standings on Saturday night when, in a game played on the local court, coach Whitey Olson's squad defeated the Climax Vikings, 77 to 48. As the Prowlers and the Vikings played but one game this season, the game was rated as a two-pointer in the district standings. The victory clinched the number one position in the district ratings for the Prowlers, and the locals will be seeded accordingly in the District tournament pairings next week.

The Prowlers will conclude their 1965-66 schedule on Friday night, March 4, when they meet the Warren Ponies at Warren.

In Saturday night's game here, the Climax Vikings kept pace with the Prowlers throughout the first two periods. The Vikings trailed by two points, 17 to 15, at the end of the first period, and by five points, 33 to 28, at the intermission. The Prowlers had numerous opportunities to pull away for a commanding lead in these two opening periods, but the locals "blew" a number of layups, missing 11 drive-in shots.

A flurry of baskets in the third period, which found Tommy Cummings hitting on six field goals, Wayne Liden scoring three field goals, Bruce Saustad scoring two field goals and a free throw, and Neil Josephson scoring a pair of two-pointers, boosted the Prowlers into a 61 to 39 lead.

Cummings, who had scored seven field goals and three free throws in the first half, added a field goal in the fourth period to finish the game with a total of 31 points, his best effort of the year, bettering by two points the total he tallied against Grand Rapids.

The Climax scoring was paced by their fine guard Bill Keller, who scored three field goals and dropped in 13 free throws in 15 tries for a 19-point performance.

Broncos Repeat As Hockey Champs

Coach Larry Ross' powerful International Falls Broncos, making a successful defense of their state high school hockey title, and winning their third successive championship, defeated the Roseau Rams of Region Eight, 5 to 0, in the finals of the state tournament in St. Paul on Saturday night.

The Rams, who had been forced into a three-overtime tilt in a semi-finals game against St. Paul Johnson on Friday night, played the highly-rated Broncos on near-even terms in the first period of Saturday night's finals. But the Broncos erupted for three tallies midway in the second period when Rod Christensen, Ron Weum and Steve Ross hit the nets to give the Falls a lead.

In the third period the Falls added a pair of goals when Dan Mahle and John Mathews racked up scores to boost the Broncos' game-winning margin to 5 to 0.

In a game played prior to the championship tilt, South St. Paul scored a 4 to 1 win over St. Paul Johnson. And in the consolation finals, played on Saturday afternoon, Greenway of Coleraine romped to a 10 to 4 win over White Bear Lake.

Prowlers Clinch District Position

The basketball Prowlers picked up a pair of valuable points in the district conference standings on Saturday night when, in a game played on the local court, coach Whitey Olson's squad defeated the Climax Vikings, 77 to 48. As the Prowlers and the Vikings played but one game this season, the game was rated as a two-pointer in the district standings. The victory clinched the number one position in the district ratings for the Prowlers, and the locals will be seeded accordingly in the District tournament pairings next week.

The Prowlers will conclude their 1965-66 schedule on Friday night, March 4, when they meet the Warren Ponies at Warren.

In Saturday night's game here, the Climax Vikings kept pace with the Prowlers throughout the first two periods. The Vikings trailed by two points, 17 to 15, at the end of the first period, and by five points, 33 to 28, at the intermission. The Prowlers had numerous opportunities to pull away for a commanding lead in these two opening periods, but the locals "blew" a number of layups, missing 11 drive-in shots.

A flurry of baskets in the third period, which found Tommy Cummings hitting on six field goals, Wayne Liden scoring three field goals, Bruce Saustad scoring two field goals and a free throw, and Neil Josephson scoring a pair of two-pointers, boosted the Prowlers into a 61 to 39 lead.

Cummings, who had scored seven field goals and three free throws in the first half, added a field goal in the fourth period to finish the game with a total of 31 points, his best effort of the year, bettering by two points the total he tallied against Grand Rapids.

The Climax scoring was paced by their fine guard Bill Keller, who scored three field goals and dropped in 13 free throws in 15 tries for a 19-point performance.

Intentional Duplicate Exposure

Editorials . . .

"All ages have said and repeated that one should strive to know one's self. This is a strange demand which no one up to now has measured up to and, strictly considered, no one should. With all his study and effort, man is directed to what is outside, to the world about him, and he is kept busy coming to know this and to master it to the extent that his purposes require.

—Goethe

Educating Law Breakers

The University of California's School of Criminology has announced plans to establish a college at San Quentin for selected inmates of California state prisons, according to the Christian Science Minitor. While not the first higher educational facility in the history of American penology, it promises to be one of the most significant efforts to rehabilitate prisoners through education, says the Monitor.

"Many of our criminals are well educated before they get into serious trouble and it is not to be expected that the crime problem will be solved by more schooling." According to the Monitor:

"A pioneer in higher education for inmates is Leavenworth Prison Junior College. Some of its graduates have, upon release, gone on to complete their college education. And some, on the basis of their academic record, have even received scholarships for advanced work.

"Inmates in many prisons have long been able to earn junior high and high school degrees and to acquire skills through vocational training. Some inmates have obtained college degrees by correspondence or through enrollment in special television instruction courses. Some through their study and research have become highly competent specialists in their chosen field."

Election Costs

Political winds are blowing stronger each day as the fall elections draw nearer, and incumbents seeking reelection as well as potential candidates hoping to be elected are giving consideration to their campaign costs. There is no question that these costs run high and that huge sums will be spent at all levels of government.

Several attempts have been made at controlling the cost of election camapigns, but this is a difficult situation. Political advertising in the mass media costs vast sums, but to candidates hoping to serve large areas or large concentrations of people, the expenditure is necessary to bring the candidates' messages to prospective voters.

According to Orlin Folwick in Minnesota News Features, it is anticipated that something around $4 million will be spent on the election of public officials in Minnesota this year. This includes an estimated $500,000 for the mechanics of conducting an election-and this comes from tax revenue. That estimate of $500,000 could jump upward sharply if the state is forced to elect representatives and senators at large because of the governor's veto of reapportionment.

Funds used for campaign expenses come from several sources. Among these are the candidate's own pocket, organized groups dedicated to campaign for a particular candidate, large gifts from individuals or businesses or organizations who hope to gain later political favor from the candidate and from political parties. The political parties get their money from party members, some cases, individuals or organizations hoping to be repaid in future favors.

Since holding a public office is not as lucrative as one might expect, many qualified people can not seek election. This is not a healthy situation, since true representation in government should come from a cross-section of the populace. All the man of modest means can do is to make his contribution in the manner he deems best and trust that the people he helps to elect will, by representation, give hi ma return on his investment.

Worker and Experts

An editorial inside the front cover of the International Teamster magazine carries a cynical attitude toward anyone who does not exert heavy physical labor in the performance of his work. "Nearly everyone who realizes income for his daily bread for a job which seldom m akes sweat trickle from his brow knows what is good for the working man," the editorial states.

Commenting on wage guidelines, the editorial says further: "The cruel assumption of all wage guidelines is that the worker once started even and has kept his wages abreast of his increases in productivity. The tragic fact is that productivity of the average American worker has increased far more than his wages, and under present wage guidelines, he faces the unjust prospect of never catching up."

We believe the unions too frequently fail to place a proper value on the worth of an individual—not as a saleable commodity in a plain package but as a being capable of producing a certain amount of total value for his employer. Work capabilities of individuals are not the same and cannot be lumped into years of experience.

"Labor's place in history, unfortunately, shows that too many of the experts—whose brows are free from sweat and whole experience is free from the worry of making a weekly paycheck stretch—believe this (economically below par) is where the working man should be," the editorial concludes.

It should be noted, in paradox, that history also unfortunatly shows that too many of the laborers—whose vision is dimmed by half-truths and slanted union statements and whose experience is free from the worry of meeting a weekly payroll—have not the slightest idea how they figure into the total economic picture of the person or firm which employs them.

If the laborer's productivity has increased to the extent that the editorial in the "Teamster" indicates, It should be noted that the increase did not come about by labor contributions or labor organizations. It came about through automation and mechanization of the type which unions have been fighting to prevent happening for years, and which have been employed by management to meet competition, produce better products more economically and stay in business. Firms which don't make a profit don't stay in business—and firms which are not in business don't hire employees.

Wages should be based on the value of the employee in his capability to produce revenue for his employer—and the position of responsibility which he holds in producing that revenue. There is nothing morally wrong with the adage that the man who knows how will always have a job, but the man who knows why will be his boss.

It's a Big Book

A company in New Jersey has published an "Encyclopedia of U. S. Government Benefits" which is said to be "a complete one-volume guide to all services, grants, contracts, programs, financing, leases, royalties, land, payments and information resources."

The volume has more than 1,000 pages and calls attention of the reader to more than 5,000 different "services" that are provided by the government. It lists eligibility requirements for each service as well as application form discussion and suggestions for filling in the form.

Promotional material for the book notes, "to deal effectively with government, it is important to know how a particular program works in actual practice. . .which is often quite different from the description given in the legislation." This is only too tuue; government programs have a habit of going far beyond their original legislative intent.

There should be another name for the "Encyclopedia of U. S. Government Benefits". It should be called the "Bureaucrat Bible".

Oh. . . . .Lord?

Should former Minnesota Attorney General Miles Lord be named to the position of federal judge? Should Murray Warmath referee a University of Minnesota football game?

Senators Eugene McCarthy and Walter Mondale have nominated Lord for the position, and both have received letters from George Thiss, chairman of the Minnesota Republican party, critical of the nomination. This criticism is to be expected between political parties, of course, but we believe that this critical view is more just than most inter-party barter.

Lord was something less than a model Attorney General. He encouraged defiance of a court order in the daylight savings time controversy which brought him "severe censure" from the Minnesota supreme court. He argued the state's case when Gov. Orville Freeman proclaimed martial law and closed the Wilson and company meat packing plant at Albert Lea, an action later reversed in a strongly-worded opinion by the federal court.

In his letter to the senators, Thiss asked, "Couldn't you find even one competent judge, presently sitting in a lower court, who could bring at least some judicial experience to this higher court?

The question is entirely in order. If the DFL can find no person among its ranks of faithful more qualified, it is in worse condition than it will ever admit.

In Terms of Wheat

From the editorial page of the Canadian "Financial Post" we clipped the following observation on farm machinery costs: The quoted farmer had stated:

"In 1944 I bought a 16-ft. combine for $3,200. That same combine now, with a little more streamlining, a little thinner tin on it and with greater operating speed, costs $11,000. he price of wheat has not gone up. What cost approximately 3,000 bu. of wheat in 1944 now costs approximately 11,000 bu. of wheat."

The 1965 model combine probably was a much better machine than the one manufactured in 1944 but the point nevertheless is well taken. he market value of farm products has not advanced proportionately with the cost of farm machinery. In order to survive, the farmer has had to tighten his belt.

There is talk of a growing food scarcity which may give the grower a better break. But higher prices for farm products will gradually increase farm production too. A fair equalization will not come about all of a sudden.

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

A young man called one evening on a rich old farmer to learn the farmer's story of how to become rich.

"It's a long story," said the old man, "and while I'm telling it, we might as well save the candle." And he blew it out.

"You needn't go on, said the youth. "I understand."

Sub-district Basketball Tourney Here

Local basketball fans, who enjoy all-out competition, should make a note to the effect that the sub-district tournament gets under way on the Lincoln high school court this evening. And while it is improbable that the District 31 champion will come out of this tourney, fans should remember that last season the Goodridge Huskies won the sub-district title and then went on to win the district championship.

Six teams—Oslo, Red Lake Falls, Plummer, Goodridge, Fisher and Alvarado—will participate in the tournament. First-round games will be played on Monday and Tuesday evenings, and the consolation and championship games will be played on Thursday evening. The sub-district champion, the runner-up and the consolation winner will gain berths in next week's District 31 tournament in Grand Forks.

On the record, and based on Polar conference competition, the pre-tournament favorites are the Oslo Bobcats and the Red Lake Falls Eagles.

That Overtime Game

The overtime game between the St. Paul Johnson Governors and the Roseau Rams in Friday night's state hockey tournament semi-finals, brings to mind the overtime game of all overtime games. That first-round game between the Prowlers and Minneapolis South on February 24, 1955.

Here's the player roster of the two teams in that tilt, which went into 11 overtime periods and was not concluded until 12:24 a.m. on February 25. For the Prowlers: goalie Rod Collins; defensemen Brad Teal, Duane Glass and Fred Dahlow; centers Joey Poole and Jack Poole; and wings, Sid Vrna, Jim Hall, Chip Strand, Glenn Carlson, Jack Quesnell and Art Cloutier. For South: goalie Rog Evenson; defensemen Norm Dahl, Larry Alm, Bill Holm and Dick Gallogher; and forwards, Jim Westby, Jerry Westby (who is now the assistant coach of the Prowlers) Jim Ekberg, Dick Koob and Dale Rasmussen.

Dale Rasmussen gave South a 1 to 0 first period by scoring on a rebound at 6:37 of the first period. Sid Vrna and Joey Poole, at 9:32 of the second period, evened the game, with Vrna scoring. And when Glenn Carlson, on an assist from Jackie Poole, scored at 10:20 the Prowlers held a 2 to 1 lead. In the third period, Jerry Westby on a sharply-angled shot scored at 8:03 to knot the game. The five-minute overtime periods began, and continued and continued. The Roseau Rams vs. St. Paul Johnson first-round game was moved into the intermission between the Prowler vs. South overtime periods. At it was at the 1:50 mark of the 11th overtime period that Jim Westby, with the Prowlers a man short, scored on a slap shot following a faceoff in the Prowler zone.

The Prowlers shook off the overtime loss and went on to win the consolation title, defeating Roseau, 4 to 3, and Eveleth, 3 to 1.

The stops during the Prowlers vs. South marathon found Collins making 38 saves, while South's Evenson had 50 stops.

The Prowlers, in a Region Eight finals game against Roseau, had lost a three-overtime game to the Rams, 2 to 1. The Prowlers held a 1 to 0 lead with 58 seconds of the game remaining when the Rams' Jack Delmore slapped a rebound into the south goal. And it was with six seconds of the third five-minute overtime period, that Roseau's John Larson scored to give the Rams their 2 to 1 win.

Miscellany

Received word from relatives here in town, that Charles (Chuck) Herron is seriously ill. Chuck, now residing in California, had undergone extensive stomach surgery, and while in hospital he suffered a stroke. His condition is listed as critical. Chuck, or "Warhorse" as he was called by his teammates, was a four-year letterman in Prowler football in the early 1920's. Chuck played tackel on the 1919, 1920, 1921 and 1922 Prowler football teams, and was captain of the 1921 squad. He was also a capable basketball player, being a guard on the Prowlers of 1921, 1922 and 1923. Had a letter from Elmer Tundberg, the former Garretson, S. D., school superintendent, and an early-day Prowler athlete. He asks if I have the scoring record of Al Holzknecht against Red Lake Falls in a basketball game played here in 1916. The game, which was played in the old low-ceilinged Lincoln gymnasium, was won by the Prowlers, 88 to 11. Al recalls that Holzknecht made a bookful of points. That team went on to win the district title and participate in the state tournament, losing to Fergus Falls 27 to 25, in a first-round game.

Trapshooting statistics compiled by Jimmy Robinson reveal that Stan (Sandy) Wilson is in the upper echelon of the state's gunners. Sandy with a mark of .9700, is in the seventh place in the state ratings. Pete Souba of Minneapolis had the high average with a mark of .9771 on 4,200 registered targets. Sandy's dad, Stan Wilson Sr., was also listed among the state's top gunners, having a mark of .9423. Joe Vinet of Winnipeg, well known to senior hockey fans here as he was a member of the Letellier team of the State-Dominion hockey league, and later was a referee of Region Eight hockey tournament games, was named as president of the Manitoba Golf association. Joe, who took up golf after the war, is a commercial supervisor at Manitoba Telephone. Joe played junior hockey (before the war) with the Falcon Rangers and Portage, and senior hockey (after the war) with the Plowmen, Selkirk, Nationals and Letellier.

Six teams — Fisher, Goodridge, Plummer, Alvarado, Oslo and Red Lake Falls—will compete in the sub-district tourney that opens first round play this evening. At 7:30 p.m. this evening, Monday, the Fisher Flyers will meet the defending District 31 champions, the Goodridge Huskies; and at 9 p.m., the Plummer Cardinals will play the Alvarado Indians.

Tuesday evening's pairings will find the top-seeded Oslo Bobcats playing the winner of the Fisher vs. Goodridge tilt at 7:30 p.m. At 9 p.m. the Red Lake Falls Eagles will play the winner of the Plummer vs. Alvarado game.

Thursday evening's game will find the consolation game slated for 7:30 p.m., between the losers of Tuesday night's games. And at 9 p.m. the sub-district championship game will be played.

Three teams from the sub-district tournament will join Crookston, Warren, East Grand Forks, Climax and Thief River Falls in next week's district tournament.

The officials for the sub-district tournament will be George Thorbrogger and Ken Christianson of Blackduck. Admission to the sessions will be 50 cents for students and one dollar for adults.

Normal February Noted on Heels of Frigid January

With regard to totals and averages, February of 1966 was almost a duplicate of the same month a year ago. Daytime temperatures last month were generally higher than in February of 1965—two almost spring-like thawing periods occurred—but a week of intense cold in mid-month pulled the mean temperature down to almost a full degree below last year's February figure. Two days of -38-degree readings largely accounted for this low figure.

With an average high of 15.6 and an average low of -7.5, the mean temperature rounded off to 4.1—considerably warmer than January's mean of -10.3 degrees. This figure is .9 degree below last year's Feburary mean of 5.0 and is 3.7 degrees below the average February mean of 7.8.

No notably heavy snowstorms occurred during the month, but five days of snow and one day of rain mixed with snow brought the total to .84 inch of melted precipitation. This figure edges the February 1965 total by .08 inch, and tops the average February total of .60 inch by .24.

The legendary groundhog scurried quickly back into his burrow after seeing his shadow on the clear, cold morning of February 2, with the consequent forecast of at least six more weeks of winter. After about a week of mild but snowy weather, his prophecy was borne out by an intense arctic cold wave which kept minimum temperatures in the -20's and -30's for eight days. The cold reached its low point on the 18th, when the mercury slipped to a low of -38 and climbed only to -17. The -38-degree reading was repeated the following morning.

Slowly but surely the mercury climbed, and the month was ended with near-freezing and above-freezing temperatures. This, along with sunny skies, brought thawing conditions to the area, which were comfortable during the day but dangerous for driving at night, when water from melted snow froze on the highways. Ground fog and freezing rain added to the hazardous conditions.

Snowfall total for the month was 6.2 inches. This is no great amount, but it sometimes caused touble by not staying put. Drivers in open areas often encountered ground blizzard conditions and drifting snow as the usual February winds blew.

Temperature range experienced last month from the high of 35 on the 9th and 27th to the low of -38 on the 18th and 19th was 73 degrees—one of the widest ranges ever recorded in February. Daily temperature and precipitation readings recorded by North Central Airlines personnel at the municipal airport are listed below.

Medicare Seekers Asked to Hold Present Policies

Persons who have signed up for Medicare should not drop other health insurance policies that they have, advises Clifford Kittelson, district manager for social security in Grand Forks.

He lists two reasons for his advice: (1) Medicare does not go into effect until July 1; and (2) Many health insurance companies are revising their policies to pay for some of the items for which Medicare will not pay.

Any 65-year-old having a health insurance policy would do well to consult his with insurance company to learn what changes in provisions and premiums are available to cover only the expenses not covered by Medicare.

A person need not delay applying for Medicare until he has decided about what to do with other policies.

Those who don't sign up for medical insurance benefits by Mar. 31 won't have another chance until July of 1967. Social security offices will become busier as March 31 approaches, Kittelson said. He urged all who have applications to make, to make them at the earliest opportunity.

Girl Scout Week will be celebrated March 6 through 12 by Girl Scouts from seven to 17 all over America. The theme of this celebration, "Girl Scouting—A Promise in Action", means action to the more than 250 Girl Scouts in Thief River Falls and Newfolden.

Last fall the Pine to Prairie Girl Scout council asked each Girl Scout troop to decide on one or more projects which would demonstrate and put into action the Girl Scout promise to their do duty to God and country, to help other people at all times and to obey the Girl Scout laws of loyalty, honesty, courtesy, cheefulness, kindness and thrift. Some of these projects involve service to other group in the community and some concern personal attitudes or troop self-improvement.

In Thief River Falls, Junior Troop 96 led by Mrs. Duane McFarland and Mrs. L. G. Anderson, will be doing their promise project at the public library. Beginning in April the Scouts will help the librarian conduct "Story Telling Time" for pre-school children for six weeks in the spring. The girls are busy learning some nursery songs, finger plays and other activities to entertain the pre-schoolers.

Troop 91, a Junior Girl Scout troop from Newfolden, will be keeping its Girl Scout promise to help other people at all times when they help the ladies of the Newfolden Garden club take care of the flower gardens planted in Newfolden by the club. The troop has given the garden club a promissory note to tell them about this service. They plan to begin this spring.

These projects are just a few of the many ways that girl scouting is helping Thief River Falls and Newfolden girls and the community. A salute to the many wonderful Thief River Falls and Newfolden girls and adults working in the Girl Scout program is offered by the council office.

Old Band Man's Reunion Planned In City Monday

Thief River Falls municipal legion band will hold an "old band man's reunion" Monday at 8 p.m. in the city auditorium. The term "old band man" refers to any person who has ever participated in a high school or college band, a military band, or this or any other municipal band.

The meeting is planned as part of a spring recruiting drive. Band President Ormond Johnson stated, "It is our opinion that there are many people in the vicinity of Thief River Falls who at one time enjoyed playing with a band. This is an open invitation to sit in on an informal band meeting, and if possible persons attending will be given a chance to play some of the old perennial band favorites. A number of instruments will be available for this special meeting, but any interested person who has an instrument of his own is asked to bring it along."

There is no obligation on anyone's part to join the municipal band but it is hoped that a number of band men will avail themselves of this opportunity to try their skills once more, Johnson said. Many present band members have joined the municipal band after years of separation from their former band, he said, also pointing out that the municipal-legion band is jointly sponsored for the purpose of providing this activity for local musicians.

There is no membership cost. Rehearsals are held each Monday evening in the city auditorium. Following the Monday reunion meeting, coffee and lunch will be served by members of the municipal band.

Red Lake Falls Teacher Among State Finalists

Third annual search for the Minnesota Teacher of the Year has been reduced to 35 "Teachers of Excellence". Among these is Betty Lou Brecto, an instructor at the Red Lake Falls public school.

The 35 have been selected by a seven-member panel representing the lay public and leadership in education and the mass news media from 109 nominations, drawn from 96 communities throughout the state.

Each of the 35 men and women will receive a "Certificate of Excellence" during a luncheon March 28 at the Capp Towers motor hotel in Minneapolis, at which the 1966 Teacher of the Year will be announced along with the Honor Roll of Teachers.

Minnesota's 1965 Teacher of the Year, Richfield elementary teacher Robert F. Arnold, has been named one of the nation's top five and is still in the running for top 1966 national honors.

The Teacher of the Year promotion is jointly sponsored by the Downtown Council of Minneapolis, the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers (PTA) and the Minnesota Education association MEA).

County Chairman Of NFO Comments On Grain Sale

Daniel Johnson, president of the Pennington county unit of the National Farmers organization, and the county grain bargaining committee chaired by George Horachek, participated in the NFO grain-selling program inaugurated last Wednesday. The volume sale of grain by the NFO was reported to be many million bushels.

"Farmers can get bigger by increasing their bargaining power from several thousand bushels to many millions of bushels rather than by buying out their neighbors," Johnson said. He said that NFO members have been able to gain 40 to 50 cents per bushel over harvest time prices by holding soybeans together and marketing them together.

M. B. Nagel of Amboy, former general sales manager for General Mills before going into farming several years ago and now Minnesota director on the NFO national board, commented on the grain sale Thursday.

"The grain commodity department and the operation of the NFO county grain bargaining committees in selling at the same hour in all counties throughout a 16-state area of the United States . . . alerts the grain trade to the direction future dealings in grain are going to take," he said.

"This is the first coordinated sale over such a wide area and the first step in collective bargaining on grain for farmers. The primary and only function of the NFO is to get for farmers their cost of production plus a reasonable profit. Transactions such as this one indicate farmers are willing to work together to achieve this goal."

Resignation of John Burtness Is Accepted Tuesday

Several items of significant business were transacted by the Thief River Falls board of education meeting in special session Tuesday evening, according to Supt. M. R. Hankerson. Teacher salaries and the proposed vocational-technical school were among major topics discussed.

John Burtness of rural Thief River Falls, a member of the school board for nearly nine years, submitted his resignation to the board at the meeting. The board accepted the resignation with regret and voted to commend Burtness for his service to the district during his three terms of office. The resignation was said to be prompted by the work load in Burtness' farming operation, making it increasingly difficult for him to attend board meetings.

Discussion was held once again on the question of solving problems of space and facilities for the area vocational - technical school. It was noted that Mr. Whiteman of the firm of Jyring and Whiteman, Hibbing, would be in the city today (Wednesday) to further discuss the situation. The Jyring and Whiteman architectural firm has been retained by the district to assist in planning solutions for the vocational school problems.

Considerable discussion was also held on faculty salary requests, with board members modifying the faculty proposal and asking that the modified plan be considered by the faculty. The board's counter-proposal, which was not officially adopted, would pare approximately $20,000 from the request submitted by the teachers' salary committee.

Under the proposal offered by the board, starting salary for teachers with BA degrees would be $5,000 per year, an increase of $50 from the present schedule. Starting salaries of teachers with Master's degrees would be $5,600 with a maximum salary after 12 years' experience in the Thief River Falls school system of $8,300.

Added emphasis will be placed on graduate work toward Master's degrees by teachers holding BA degrees. Unless teachers with BA degrees have obtained 18 hours of credit toward a Master's degree in eight years, their salaries will be frozen at a maximum of $6,700. If the required 18 hours of credit have been obtained, the maximum salary would be $7,900. Teachers with BA degrees but without the additional credits would also receive a two per cent cost of living increase.

Final approval of a salary schedule for the faculty will be given at the regular meeting of the board on March 14. At that time the board will also consider appointment of a member to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of John Burtness.

In other action Tuesday, the board agreed to participate in the Northwestern Minnesota Research and Development Council program aimed at experimental work in educational research. Cost of the local district's participating in the program will be $533 with approval given by the board to cooperating with the council on a one-year basis.

Also adopted by the board was a policy whereby students removed from the Thief River Falls school district for any reasons other than education will not have tuition paid in other districts by the Thief River Falls district.

At 12:15 a.m. Thursday a car owned and driven by Martin Sund of Thief River Falls was traveling north on the airport road and went off into the ditch on the right-hand side of the road. Ground blizzard conditions made the road impossible to see at times, the sheriff reported.

The car was not damaged and Sund was uninjured, but Orvis Olson of Thief River Falls, a passenger in the vehicle, received head lacerations and was admitted to Northwestern hospital.

Only Two Months Remain for GI Insurance Plan

Although approximately 10,200 veterans in Minnesota have already been issued the reopened National Service Life Insurance, the remaining eligible veterans have only two months to take advantage of the program, according to John R. Murphy, manager of the Veterans Administration center, St. Paul.

Murphy said midnight May 2 is the deadline for applications from World War II and Korean conflict veterans with service - connected disabilities.

Veterans should enclose the first month's premium with the application. A list of the premium costs and full detailed information about the insurance may be obtained by writing, phoning or visiting the contact office at Ft. Snelling.

Even veterans whose service - connected disabilities are rated at zero per cent are eligible for the reopened insurance, Murphy stressed. There are several choices of insurance plans: ordinary life, 20-payment life, 20-year endowment and modified life insurance.

Murphy said eligible veterans may apply for full $10,000 or for any part of that figure to bring their total GI insurance up to $10,000 or they may take out as little as $1,000 if they wish. The May 2 deadline does not apply to the modified life plan for those veterans who already have insurance. They can convert to this permanent type of insurance at lower rates than even ordinary life insurance, Murphy said, even after the May 2 deadline.

Spring Weather To Be Replaced By Heavy Snow

Thief River Falls and the surrounding area experienced a spring-like thaw Tuesday as skies cleared after Monday's snowfall. The mercury rose above the freezing mark, and the sun melted a good deal of new and old snow.

More winter weather is in store for the area, however. A storm system located this morning in Wyoming and Colorado is expected to move eastward and reach Minnesota by tonight or early tomorrow.

Forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies today, tonight and tomorrow with snow developing today and continuing through tomorrow. Locally heavy snow is predicted tonight. Continued mild temperatures are expected today and tonight, turning much colder tomorrow. Highs today will range from 28 to 38; lows tonight from 24 to 34. Winds will be easterly from 15 to 25 miles per hour.

Temperature and precipitation readings recorded at the airport are as follows: 34, 25 and an inch of snow containing .07 inch of water on Monday; 33, 10 and an inch of snow containing .08 inch of water on Tuesday; and a low this morning of 7.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Questions and Answers

by Charles B. Fahlberg

Q—Under Medicare, can a person choose his own doctor?

A—Yes, there are no restrictions whatsoever in the law regarding a person's choice of doctor.

Q—Can a person change his mind and elect to come under the voluntary medical insurance part of Medicare, if he has already informed the social Security administration that he didn't want this coverage?

A—Yes, if he does so by March 31, 1966. As long as a person age 65 or over lets the Social Security administration know by this deadline that he wants this coverage, any prior elections made are cancelled.

On the other hand, a person can cancel his decision to come under the supplementary medical insurance at any time prior to July 1, 1966.

Q—Is it possible for a person to qualify for Medicare even though he doesn't have a birth certificate?

A—Yes, there are many different documents that can be used to establish a person's age. A person who doesn't have any document to show what his age is, should contact the Social Security administration and apply for Medicare anyway. The social security representatives can usually offer advice as to where sufficient evidence can be obtained. The important thing is to get the application for Medicare filed by March 31, 1966. Evidence to establish a person's age can be submitted later, if not available by the deadline date.

1,516 Examined At Oral Cancer Detection Clinic

Dentists examined 1,516 men and women at an oral cancer detection clinic held Wednesday at Crookston's Bethesda hospital and found 207 abnormalities of the mouth, face and neck. Thirty-two biopsies were made of the more serious abnormalities as a diagnostic procedure.

Working in conjunction with seven consultants from the University of Minnesota schools of dentistry and medicine, the dentists found seven mouth abnormalities which had clinical characteristics of cancer.

The seven patients suspected to have mouth cancer were referred immediately to their family physicians for further diagnostic procedure and treatment.

Similarly, 19 persons who have skin lesions and five others who have thyroid lesions were referred to their physicans for further consultation. All other patients with abnormalities were instructed to report to their doctors for further examination of the condition.

Forty dentists made the examinations in 23 booths set up on the ground floor of the hospital. The consultants who helped staff the biopsy room and assisted with diagnostic procedures were specialists in the detection and treatment of cancer.

A steady flow of people filed through the clinic during the day. They came from the nine participating counties—Clearwater, Kittson, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau. Several hundred American Cancer society volunteers helped with the various phases of the project.

Sponsors of the public and professional educational effort, in addition to the cancer society, were dentists and physicians of the nine counties, Minnesota Dental association, cancer committee of the State Medical association, and Minnesota department of health.

Agronomists Give Tips for Better Oats Production

Oats yielded an average of 55 bushels per acre in Minnesota last year, according to University of Minnesota extension agronomists Harley J. Otto, Curtis J. Overdahl and Roger A. Kleese. They report that some farmers harvested up to 100 bushels, nearly double the average, and offer some hints.

Plowing makes a better seedbed than disking. If possible, plow in the fall and have a warm, dry seedbed ready to go early in the spring, the agronomists recommend.

Plant oats as early as possible. Planting with a drill at one or two inches is best. Firming the seedbed with presswheels will help give more even stands when oats is planted with forage crops. Seeding by drill will use about two bushels per acre; broadcast will require about three.

Oats responds well to fertilizer but the price of oats does not justify large investments in fertilizer. Drill applications are most efficient for phosphorus and potassium and small amounts of nitrogen. Potassium and phosphorus applications after tillage and planting have proved unsatisfactory but nitrogen can be topdressed after planting, especially when rain will move it.

If legumes are seeded with oats, fertilizer applications should take the legumes into consideraton. Legumes do not have the same requirement as oats.

A good stand of high quality oats will go a long way in weed control. Supplemental control can be provided with chemicals. MCPA is best for broadleaf weeds. MCPA and dicamba will give good results in wild buckwheat and smartweed if the oats are not undersowed with legumes.

For further information ask county agents for Agronomy Fact Sheet 17 or write the Bulletin Room, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Oslo, Red Lake Falls Will Clash for Crown

The pre-tournament favorites, the Oslo Bobcats and the Red Lake Falls Eagles, will meet in the championship finals of the sub-district basketball tournament that will be concluded here on Thursday night. The championship game will start at 9 p.m.

A consolation game, between the Fisher Flyers and the Alvarado Indians, with the winner gaining a berth in next week's District tournament, will precede the championship game, with the tip-off scheduled for 7:30 p.m. The sub-district champion and the runner-up will also move into next week's district tourney.

The Oslo Bobcats, playing catch-up basketball, defeated the Fisher Flyers, 68 to 61, in one semi-finals game played here Tuesday evening. And the Red Lake Falls Eagles, showing strong and well-balanced scoring, rolled over the Alvarado Indians, 75 to 47, in the second game on Tuesday night's bid.

The Fisher Flyers, with Pete Rutherford being the prime marksman, gained a 16 to 10 first period lead over Oslo. And the Flyers held a 30 to 27 advantage at the intermission.

The Bobcats, with Doug Farder scoring ten points, and cousin Greg Farder adding eight points, moved ahead, 54 to 50, entering the final period. The Oslo team increased its lead in the final period, outpointing Fisher by three points, 14 to 11, to score a deserved 68 to 61 win.

The Red Lake Falls Eagles took command of their game with Alvarado by racking up 24 points in the first period, and notching 23 points in the second period to hold a 47 to 27 halftime lead. Big Paul Walker, who led the Eagles' scoring with 29 points, proved a power off the boards, and was a scoring threat on rebounds.

Rick Hagglund, hitting from the corner of the court with uncanny accuracy in the first half, led the Alvarado scoring with 15 points.

Explorer Post 46 From TRF Wins Curling Bonspiel

In the recent bonspiel held in Grafton, N. D. under the auspices of the Lake Agassiz council, Boy Scouts of America, Post 46 of Thief River Falls was the winner.

Members of the winning team, of which Quentin Jones is the advisor, are Tom Jones, Bob Dicken, Keith Craik, Burton Prichard and John Johnson.

Posts from Grafton, Rock Lake, Neche, Fosston, Thief River Falls and Grand Forks participated in this event, which is expected to become an annual affair. Leadership of this program was given by the Grafton Kiwanis club, with Jack Biorneby setting up the instructional period and supervising the acutual bonspell

As an added attraction, a group of boys the age of explorer scouts from Gretna, Manitoba, participated in the event. These boys have their own team and participate in the adult curling in their area.

The next event which the explorers are having will be a bowling tournament in Thief River Falls. The boys will not only be bowling for high team and high individual scores, but will be bowling in national competition against Dick Weber. This year Weber bowled his game and had a total pin score of 759. The handicap for this bowling is figured by taking their average prior to this roll off and substracting it from 200 and multiplying it by .80.

Volleyball Play To Continue Here

Men's volleyball will be played tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Thief River Falls city auditorium, according to James Foley, city director of parks and recreation. Volleyball for women will continue on Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

FIRING a jump shot from close range in the above photo was Gene Paulson of the Goodridge Huskies. Jack Sunsdahl of the Huskies (45) is blocked out of the possible rebound by Peter Rutherford (40) and Mark Brickson (44) of Fisher. At right is Fortunato Villegas who teamed with John Peters at guard for the Flyers. Fisher won 88 to 69 to eliminate the defending district champion Huskies from further tournament play.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

Irv's Big Series

The men's bowling association tournament—singles, doubles and team events—was concluded last weekend. Norris Thune, with an aggregate of 639 pins, won the singles trophy; Milt Reierson and Irv Wilson, with a 1,201-pin aggregate, won the doubles title; and the Elaine's team, with a 2,972 won the team title. Wilson, with an 1,875, gained the all-events prize.

But the feature of the tournament was the big series that Irv Wilson posted in the doubles competition. Bowling on alleys one and two on Sunday evening, Irv chalked up games of 215-221-246 which, with a handicap of 34 pins, gave the chunky bowler a spectacular 716-pin total. Irv's actual-pin total was 684. He had one open frame in the three-games series, that being a split in the third frame of his third game. He followed that split with seven strikes in a row, then a spare, for a 246.

The Roger Krats and Don Erickson doubles combination, taking the alleys later on Sunday, made a strong bid to take over first place, picking up a fine 1,211-pin aggregate. Roger had games of 217-245-176, plus a handicap of 30 pins; and Don had games of 179-173-179, and a handicap of 42 pins. In his second game of the series, Roger had his cannonball delivery pounding the pocket, opening with five strikes in a row.

In the team competition, the high average Elaine's squad won the first place trophy, and the top money, with an aggregate of 2,972. The team, carrying a 142-pin handicap—Marland Kloety had games of 156-171-176; Pat Poole chalked up scores of 225-184-202; Rudy Mehlhoff, with his curve-ball under control, had games of 184-205-256; Bob Larsen, a newcomer to the team, had games of 182-176-162; and finally Dean Anderson tallied games of 166-168-215.

Irv Wilson, getting that tremendous boost from his 716-pin aggregate in the doubles, moved into first place in the all-events, scoring an 1,875. That score was seven pins better than the 1,863 total that Lloyd Samuelson and Clayton Molstad posted. In addition to his 716 in the doubles, Irv had a 598 in the singles, and a 529 in the team event.

And looking over the scoreboard I find that a former city singles champion was all alone as the "no-events" bowler. Referring to Ray Thyren who, with a 482-pin score in the team event, a 53 in the doubles, and 519 in the singles, plus a handicap of 32 pins, had a total of 1,587. It's a sad fact but the people aren't coming "from miles around" to watch Red bowl anymore.

Calling the Roll

That was a creditable performance that coach Ed Krystosek's wrestling Prowlers turned in in Region Eight competition at Bemidji last Saturday. The Prowlers, with six wrestlers in the finals, won three individual titles and scored a total of 65 points. The Bemidji Lumberjacks, with nine wrestlers in the meet, won the team title with 75 points.

And it marked the second time in the comparatively short history of regional wrestling that the Prowlers have had three champions in one year. When Steve Furuseth won the 112-pound title Rocky Wilson, the 120-pound title and Rod Collver the 133-pound crown on Saturday, these Prowlers equaled the performances of Myles Olson, Terry Nelson and Joe Taylor in 1964.

But here is a roll call of the Prowlers who have won wrestling titles since Region Eight began competition in 1958. In 1960 the Prowlers' Mark Maldment won the 103-pound title, and Don Hill won the 175-pound title. In 1961 it was Larry Aanenson who won the 95-pound title. In 1963 Roger Wilson won the 112-pound title, and Joe Taylor won the 145-pound title. In 1964 Myles Olson won the 95-pound crown, Terry Nelson won the 154-pound class, and Taylor won the 165-pound title. Taylor and last year, 1965, Furuseth won the 112-pound title, and Taylor won the 165-pound title. And this season it was Furuseth, Wilson and Collver.

Goodridge and Plummer Eliminated from Tourney

Coach Norm Wagner's Fisher Flyers turned in a high-scoring performance to dethrone the defending District 31 champion Goodridge Huskies, 88 to 69, in a first-round sub-district basketball tournament game played here Monday night. In the second game on Monday night's first-round schedule, the Alvarado Indians edged out an ever trying Plummer Cardinal team, 54 to 52.

The Fisher Flyers held the lead at all the period stops in their game against the Goodridge Huskies holding a 21 to 13 lead at the end of the first perod, and a 44 to 25 margin at the intermission.

In the third perod, the Flyers erupted for 32 points, with forward Pete Rutherford scoring six field goals and a free throw and center Mark Brickson adding five field goals.

It was only in the final period, when the result of the game was already resolved, that the Huskies outpointed the Flyers. In this final stanza, the Huskies' LeRoy Vigen connected for six field goals. During the game, Vigen, a guard, looped in 11 field goals and a free throw to tally 23 points for the losers.

In the Alvarado vs. Plummer tilt, it was the height advantage of the Indians that proved the decisive factor. Coach Larry Perkins' Plummer squad was forced to play aggressive and pressing basketball in an effort to counter Alvarado's rebounding advantage, and the Cardinals ran into foul trouble. Plummer lost three players, Darrell Martell, Larry Juneau and Ray Walter, on personals.

For the Alvarado club, it was the play of guard Darrell Olson that sparkled. Olson had 11 field goals and five free throws for 27 points, and in addition the rangy player proved an effective floor man and a strong rebounder.

Women Curlers Begin Playdowns For City Champ

Thief River Falls women's curling league will begin playdowns this week to determine the city champion and the playdown champion. Matches are scheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoon.

The playdowns will be arranged on a "double knockout" basis so a rink will have to absorb two losses before being eliminated in the playdowns. The Thursday night matches this week will be considered as league matches as well as playdown matches.

The schedule for Thursday will find, on the 7 p.m. draw, Fern Liden meeting Vi Larson and Clara Mae Swanson meeting May Jahr. The 9 p.m. draw will have the Linda Jorde rink meeting the Betty Liden rink; the Louis Amundgaard rink playing Naomi Monroe; Alice Liden meeting Edith Nabben; and Ellen Bottem playing the Vernice Nelson rink.

In last week's competition, the Vi Larson rink defeated the Ellen Bottem rink; the Betty Liden rink bested the Alice Liden rink; the Clara Mae Swanson rink defeated Vernice Nelson; Naomi Monroe defeated Linda Jorde; Fern Liden defeated May Jahr; and Lois Amundgaard defeated Edith Nabben.

1966 Beaver and Otter Trapping Season Set By Conservation Dept.

The 1966 beaver and otter trapping regulations were announced today by the Minnesota conservation department's game and fish division. Beaver may be taken this year from 6 a.m., March 19 to 6 p.m., May 2. Otter may be taken from 6 a.m., April 16 to 6 p.m., April 30.

This year most of the state will be open although certain townships along the North Shore streams in Cook County will be closed. The Mississippi National Wildlife Refuge and that portion of the state lying south of U. S. Highway 10 and east of U. S. Highway 61 and State Highway 26 will be closed. That part of Hubbard county lying east of U. S. Highway 71 and south of U. S. Highway 2 will also be closed.

The canoe routes in the Superior National Forest canoe area will be open to trapping this year. Counts of active beaver colonies indicate that the population has built up to a level where the animals should be trapped to help with their limited food supply.

Otter may be taken only in the area north of U. S. Highway 2, east of the western boundary of State Highway 89 and the road from the town of Four Towns to Roosevelt and Lake of the Woods. The area open to otter trapping in 1966 was reduced in size from last year to give protection to otter in the southern part of their range where reports indicated they are less abundant this year.

A map showing open and closed beaver and otter trapping areas will be available at the county auditor offices.

The Sandstone game refuge, game refuge units 1, 2 and 3, Pine County; Nerstrand Woods game refuge, Rice county; Superior game refuge Unit No. 16, St. Louis county; and that part of the McGrath game refuge from Malmo to Isle lying between State Highway 47 and the east shore of Mille Lacs lake are closed to beaver and otter trapping. All other statutory refuges in the open area are open to beaver trapping.

This year all beaver and otter taken by licensed trappers must be tagged at the sites where trapped and before being transported with a self-locking tag issued with the beaver trapping license. This tag is to be attached to the skin by inserting it through the mouth and out the eye and locked.

All beaver and otter pelts must be submitted to a game warden or other authorized agent of the game and fish director for inspection and for the purpose of affixing a metal locking seal to each pelt. This must be done not later than two days in the case of beaver or four days in the case of otter after the close of their respective seasons.

No more than 10 beaver nor more than three otter may be taken by any one licensed trapper during the season.

The Department's announcement said the beaver trapping season was set on the basis of information obtained from 2,050 miles of aerial census flown during the month of October and extensive reports from the field including contacts with trappers throughout the state.

Moose Population Still Increasing, Survey Shows

Annual winter aerial census of Minnesota's moose population, completed last week by the state game and fish division, revealed another increase in the northwestern or Red Lake herd, it was announced today.

Although limited funds and poor flying conditions resulted in only 20 sample areas being flown in the Superior National Forest this winter, game officials said there is no reason to believe that the moose population in this area has changed significantly since last year's census.

In the Red Lake area, a total of 337 moose were counted in the 20 sample areas flown, each sample area being 15 square miles in size. Since 1961 the number of moose observed during the census flights in northwestern Minnesota, has climbed steadily: 1961—241, 1962—243, 1963—277, 1964—317, 1965—337.

The census this year shows an average of nearly one moose per section in the Red Lake moose range.

Aerial census takers also reported that the elk herd in northwestern Minnesota has apparently declined since last year. Only 22 elk were seen on this year's flight while 27 were spotted during the previous census.

Traffic Mishaps Happen Often; Use Safety Belt

Traffic accidents happen to almost everybody sooner or later, so every driver can expect to be involved in at least one accident in a lifetime—and the most effective single precaution the driver can take to protect himself in that event is the simplest precaution of all.

A driver's chances of having an accident depends partly on how much he drives, according to the National Safety council. As he drives more and more, his chances of having an accident increase.

If you drive 12,000 miles each year, you have one chance in three of being involved in some kind of accident during that year. There is one chance in four it will involve property damage, one in 35 there will be at least one injury, and one in 1,300 there will be a fatality.

If you travel 8,000 miles per year, you stand one chance in five for an accident, one chance in six there will be property damage, one in 55 there will be an injury and one chance in 2,000 for a fatality.

And that one simple precaution to protect yourself? Well, when an accident occurs, there is but one device that will do you any good—and that is your safety belt, if it is buckled on.

PUBLIC OPINION

Mr. Marvin Lundin, Editor
Thief River Falls Times

Dear Mr. Lundin:

Your editorial "Working Together" in the February 23rd issue of the Times mentions the proposals being considered in the future planning of the Junior College and Area Vocational - Technical School.

You stated that, to the best of your knowledge, no group meeting of government and other agencies involved had taken place to coordinate plans and thoughts to achieve the desired objectives you outlined in your column.

I'd like to assure you, and all the citizens of Thief River Falls, that early in December such a meeting was held. It was my privilege to act as chairman and coordinator. The following were in attendance: Members of the City Council, members of the Thief River Falls Junior College Planning Committee, representatives of the Board of Education, Vocational School, County Board, Junior College Advisory Committee, City Planning Commission and Education Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

Following the discussion of the plans and objectives of the Junior College and Vocational School there was complete agreement that there must be cooperation and coordination by all agencies involved. A course of action was outlined and agreed upon, and is as follows.

(1) Authority was to be secured from the Minnesota Junior College Board for the officials in Thief River Falls to select either of two sites for a permanent Junior College. The two sites were selected by the City Planning Commission and approved by the State Building Commission. (Note: This authority has since been granted by Junior College Board at their January meeting.)

(2) The City Council of Thief River Falls should acquire, pay for, and make available to the Minnesota Junior College Board a site and take immediate steps to acquire Site No. 1.

(3) The local Junior College Planning Committee should secure options to Site No. 2 as an alternate. (Note: This has since been accomplished.)

(4) The Area Vocational - Technical school and Junior college were to complement each and therefore an adequate site for the newly proposed Vocational School should be acquired by the Board of Education and that it be adjacent to the Junior College. (Note: Options to property adjacent to Sites No. 1 and No. 2 have since been secured.)

(5) The City Council should furnish the necessary utilities to the sites.

Since the coordinating meeting the City Council has begun proceedings to acquire a site for the Junior College. The board of Education has secured the services of an architect to draw plans for a new Area Vocational - Technical School.

It has for many months been the expressed intentions of the City Council, Board of Education and Junior College Planning Committee to have a single site for the Junior College and the proposed Vocational School.

The men that serve on the governing bodies of the units involved that you call, "grown men with man-size responsibilities," do realize their obligations to protect the public interest and have no intentions of going separate ways; they fully realize nothing can be accomplished without coordination and cooperation.

I am confident that these men who have spent countless hours, talent and money for such a very long time will continue to work together to achieve the desired objectives for an excellent educational system in the City.

I personally pledge myself to do whatever possible to arrange coordinating meetings as they become necessary.

Orion D. Beich, Chairman
Chamber of Commerce Education Committee

Dear Editor, TRF Times:

It has become commonplace for the schools in our area to have school on Washington's birthday, February 22. The public, the students and many of the people who operate the schools do not seem to be familiar with the state law as it pertains to the conduct of school on certain holidays.

The following is Section 126.13 of Minnesota School Laws and is entitled "Conduct of School on Certain Holidays:" "The governing body of any district may contract with any of the teachers thereof for the conduct of schools, and may conduct schools, on either or any, of the following holidays, provided that a clause to this effect is inserted in the teacher's contract: Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, Columbus Day and Veteran's Day, provided that on Washington's birthday, Lincoln's birthday and Veterans' Day at least one hour of the school program be devoted to a patriotic observance of the day."

The above paragraph seems to say that if a school district elects to have school on Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, Columbus Day and Veterans Day. This fact must be stated in the teachers' contract, and if school is in session, there must be a patriotic observance of the day of at least one hour in length for the students, except on Columbus Day.

Was your school in session on Washington's birthday? If so, was there a school program of at least one hour in length devoted to the patriotic observance of the day, as required by law? If not, why not?

To the Editor:

We would like to express our gratitude to the Jaycee's and all the hospitable people in Thief River Falls for the very enjoyable time we had at the State OYF contest last weekend. We knew when we left home we would be flying into a cold front but all reports led us to believe we could beat it to T.R.F. Just north of Detroit Lakes the plane started icing up so our pilot returned to Detroit Lakes and landed.

Our chaperon called T.R.F. and told them we were on the way but having difficulty and we were told to wait there and they would see what they could do. Within 20 minutes a personable young man, Arnold Porkkonen, from Detroit Lakes (a Jaycee who was unable to attend the contest) walked in, offered us his car full of gas and ready to go. This was most generous of him and we could not help but be impressed with the willingness, the speed and organization with which everything was done.

We would also like to mention the people at Noper's Motel who opened up their game room for all who wanted to come in after the banquet for coffee and cookies around a cozy fireplace with ping-pong, records, etc., or just friendly conversation. This finished the day off just right with a few more minutes to meet or get better acquainted with people with whom we have so much in common. The entire weekend was very enjoyable and a huge success. Thank you again,

Sincerely yours,
Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Ruhle
(OYF candidate)

Dear Editor:

On February 2, 1966, I attended a meeting in Baudette called by the trawler interests on Lake of the Woods. A gentleman who claimed to represent the Thief River Falls sportsmen, spoke out in favor of putting this ocean gear back on our lake. This surprises me completely, since last May when we near the lake worked so hard in the Legislature to defeat the Trawler Bill, we had a great deal of support from the Thief River Falls sportsmen and businessmen.

Our position has not changed one bit; that is, we will continue to ask for the curtailing of the present gear on the lake such as as removing commercial fishing from the angling areas in Muskeg Bay near Springsteel and Warroad, and delaying the opening date of commercial fishing one month from June to July 1, since June is our best angling month. We also strongly support the present policy of no commercial fishing licenses issued nor transferred.

Therefore, our detailed research has shown us that by curtailing the present gear on the Lake, we can best satisfy the sport fisherman, mink rancher and resorter, rather than by introducing new gear such as trawlers, which are the fastest method of cleaning out a lake. The more you study this problem, the more you find that Lake of the Woods should be for all of the public; and not just a monopoly for a few commercial fishermen.

They Made the Move

After years of unsuccessful attempts to secure federal assistance, the city of Thief River Falls abandoned its hope of outside funds for cleaning the Thief and Red Lake Rivers in this city. City funds alone are now to be spent for purchase of a dredge to clean silt from the channels of the rivers; bids were opened and a contract let for the dredge last week.

It is too bad that more communities don't undertake selfish projects with their own funds. In our estimation, the river project in Thief River Falls is of benefit only to this community and its residents—although persons from outside the community use the river for recreational pursuits. However, it seems grossly unfair that—should federal tax money have been made available—citizens of other states and communities should contribute to our private project.

There are those who would argue that other communities are receiving federal funds and we ought to get our "share". We contend that the problem is not in this community's failing to get its "share", but in other cities receiving funds to which they are not entitled and which they have no reason to expect.

Cleaning our rivers will not be a cheap task, but we believe it will be a worthwhile one. It will not be permanent, for silt will be a problem as long as rushing waters from spring thaws and summer rains carry topsoil into the river. But it will help the recreational possibilities of the river and—to some small extent at least—improve the source of the city's water supply.

We think the council was right in making this move, and that time will prove the wisdom of the decision. Perhaps too many of us do not realize what value our rivers have to our community. And we also predict some additional benefits which the river cleaning will provide other than channel improvement.

On Being Deceived

Appearing in the Waseca Herald recently was an editorial concerning comments made by one H. H. Humphrey, vice president of the United States. We like the remarks the vice president made, and only wish that he would stop talking long enough to listen to the thoughts himself. The editorial follows:

People will shout, peace, peace—but there is no peace.

This bit of prophesy seems to fit our times. Why cannot people see through it?

Leftist students, left-wing faculty members, and pacificists have been completely deceived by the Communists and their constant formation and support of peace organizations.

Where is this peace the Communists are seeking? It is not peace in a broad sense. Let a satellite nation try to break away and see how peace loving the Communists are. Let a nation like Viet Nam try to establish a government emodying freedom and see how peace loving the Communists are. They shout peace but there is no peace. How sad it is that they have so many people fooled.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey had some comments to make in Australia last week and they should be read by every college student who might be deceived by Communist propaganda.

He said that China is seeking to exert its influence all across the underbelly of Asia . . . to exert its influence and power over the rice field and the people.

Then Humphrey added this statement, concerning the deceit of Communist statements. The Communists "speak of liberation when they mean oppression, they speak of peoples' republics when they have no concern for people and no understandong of republics. hey even destroy the meaning of language—of words like freedom, democracy justice, words that are precious words of the spirit. The Communist not only destroys the village and hamlet of South Viet Nam, he destroys the very meaning of life."

Then Humphrey told the Australian people something that should be repeated over and over again here at home. These were his words:

"We are the revolutionaries, not the Communists; we are the liberators, not the Communists; we are the agents of reform, not the Communists."

Humphrey is so right. It is a wonder that more people have not seen through the Communists and their pious claims.

An Unfair Request

Letters to the editor—if in good taste, signed and not of extreme length—are welcomed by the Times and generally used without exception in our public opinion column. Such letters are published in nearly every newspaper of the state, and the state's editors—aware that freedom of the press extends to the public—are very cooperative in publishing them

However, this week we received a request to publish a public opinion letter which is an unreasonable one. It is a mimeographed letter, undoubtedly sent to most of the state's papers, calling on the public to support a draft of former Gov. Elmer L. Andersen for governor in the next election. We will not publish the letter, although it is in good taste, signed and of modest length.

While the letter is itself in good taste, the method employed to secure free advertising space for a private cause is not. Had similar thoughts been expressed in a private letter from a local resident, proper consideration for publication might well have been given.

This newspaper receives a number of letters which the writers would like to see in print. They espouse questionable causes, criticise individuals and organizations or promote private ideas for personal benefit. They are immediately destined for "File 13"—the circular file—because they are not in good taste.

We naturally reserve the right to decide whether or not a particular item will be used, for we are responsible for what is printed in our paper. Your letters with personal ideas for our public opinion column are welcome.

Thanks, Doc

Many thanks from this writer to Dr. O. D. Beich for his public opinion letter in today's issue of the Times. His comments in reply to a recent editorial are welcome and appreciated.

In brief explanation, we expressed concern editorially a short time ago in regard to education interests in the city moving in unrelated directions. Our concern was that the various governmental agencies involved were not doing their best to coordinate efforts for the permanent junior college and the proposed vocational - technical school.

Dr. Beich's letter, written from his position as the chairman of the education committee of the Chamber of Commerce, goes a long way in reducing our fears that efforts were not coordinated. We would suggest that all persons interested in Education in Thief River Falls—and all of us should be interested—read the letter carefully.

The meeting to which Dr. Beich refers was not held as a public session for several reasons—not the least of which was the possibility of inflated values on property being considered. This is in the best interest of the public.

There is only one disturbing factor here, since official agreement was reached by official organizations. This is that the public news media was not adveised of the meeting with the request that public coverage be withheld in view of the circumstances involved. There is certainly a justified doubt that public bodies should meet in secret session.

Under the circumstances, we know that news media would have cooperated to the fullest extent in giving proper publicity. Certainly it would have been harmless—even beneficial—to note that the groups involved were coordinating their efforts towards an effective solution to a difficult problem.

No one can change what has been done, but we hope that proper consideration will be given in the future. At any rate, our thanks to Dr. Beich for setting the record straight.

It "Beets" All

No matter what political party convictions area farmers may have, most must agree that Congressman Odin Langen has done more to ferret out inequities to farmers than our senators in Congress. Rep. Langen has carried the interests of our agricultural area with him to Washington and continues to fight for the rural area even when he stands alone against the urban-oriented powers in the nation's governing body.

Now the congressman has advised us that the department of agriculture has allowed increases in the amount of sugar imported during the first quarter of this year.

"It is a unique situation when the department increases the import quotas of sugar by 100,000 tons in the first quarter of the year," he said. "If the sugar supply has tightened to such a degree that added imports are necessary to keep prices down, our own American sugar growers have a right to demand a full explanation of the causes of such actions and the prospects for the future."

As Langen notes, beet growers in this area are ". . . curious why it should be necessary to increase foreign imports at the very moment when American beet factories are at their peak of production and immediately following an imposed acreage reduction of sugar beets throughout the nation last year."

We wonder why the United States must continually make bad bargains for the sake of international relations and at the expense of the problem-ridden farmer. Why should we import what we can produce at home when our balance of payments is in such sad condition? Other nations watch out for themselves before they consider their neighbors; do they expect the United States to be different?

Congressman Langen is right when he says, "No matter how you look at it, the picture is one of discouragement for established sugar producing areas of the nation where an increase in acreage is sorely needed."

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

A union official who had handled thousands of grievances and negotiated hundreds of contracts admitted to another official that he was having problems with his wife. He asked for advice. The brother unionist listened and then commented, "I'm sorry, pal, but in view of the facts you gave me I have to say that your wife's in the right. You asked me to give you a truthful opinion and that's it."

The Union officer jumped up from his desk and shouted at his friend, "I can hardly believe it! Who'd ever have thought that you, a good union man, would side with management!"

Happy Homemaking

by Beverly Tveito
Pennington County Home Agent

Reminder--any ladies who are interested in "Economic Development in Rural America" or "The United Nations 1966", there will be a Pbl Affairs Seminar, Wednesday, Febrary 23, at the Red River Valley Winter shows. For further information please contact me at the office.

Of course February calls for cherry pie! Why not make several and store the extras in the freezer for future use?

To be sure the filling will be bright and clear in the frozen pie, here's a tip: thicken the cherries with tapioca or cornstarch rather than flour.

Almost every type of cookware and bakeware can now be found with the non-stick finish. Among new additions to the list are glass ovenware, egg poachers, ice cream scoops, egg beaters, pizza pans and such electrical appliances as corn poppers, coffee makers, waffle irons, griddles, deep-fat fryers and frying pans with high-dome lids.

Did you know that Teflon is the most slippery material known? No wonder it's easy to clean--and a joy to the user.

Here are some tips in the care of Teflon: Before using Teflon-coated cookware, wash it with warm, soapy water and rinse with hot water. Condition the non-stick surface before using by wiping it with salad oil. The one exception is the angel food cake pan which should never be greased.

After cooking, always wash non-stick utensils with hot, sudsy water. Periodically you may need to go over the finish with a plastic or rubber scrubber or stiff sponge to remove any thin layer of food or grease clinging to the surface. Utensils may be washed in automatic dishwashers without affecting the Teflon finish.

Appearing in newspapers of the Minnesota Editorial Association through the cooperation of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture

Most everybody would like more ruffled grouse (partridges to many of us) in Minnesota woodlands. But management steps to increase those bird populations may call for some new ways of thinking.

Fire, commonly thought of as enemy of woods and wildlife, might be a friend in flaming disguise. Use of controlled fire as a tool in forest management has been studied for years. Scientists now hope to study controlled fire in improving habitat for ruffled grouse.

How could fire actually help increase these bird populations? Wildlife biologist Gordon Gullion at the University of Minnesota says natural fire in a forest is not necessarily devastating. Fire may vary from a creeping, relatively cool ground fire, to the intense holocaust that denudes the ground.

This diversity of fire Gullion says may create high quality grouse habitat, through converting ground litter back to mineral ash in some areas, by killing trees outright in others and aiding forest regeneration, and sometimes merely scorching trees and stimulating bud production.

If future studies on controlled fire give positive results, the findings may be applied to suitable parts of the 20 million acres of forest lands in northern Minnesota.

This is only one aspect of university research on ruffled grouse, which started back in 1931 when R. T. King studied grouse populations at the Cloquet Forest research center. Later work continued on cover type use, nesting, use of drumming logs and other aspects of ruffled grouse and their environment.

In recent years, Prof. W. H. Marshall, wildlife biologist, has directed this research, and Gordon Gullion has been on the project full time at the Cloquet station.

From this project has come a wealth of information on grouse habits and factors that affect their survival. Studies have shed some light on a common puzzle among hunters and scientists: Why do partridge numbers vary so much from year to year?

Hunters in some years will find 10 times as many ruffled grouse as in other years. Some thought recurring diseases killed the birds. Others blamed predators. And other causes were suggested.

After years of research, Marshall, Gullion and others say the weight of the evidence indicates that a combination of natural causes accounts largely for these variations.

Weather is a principal short-term factor. In a cold, windy winter, with little snow, many birds will die and those hens that don't may have hatches below normal, if they try to nest at all.

Cold, wet nesting seasons may decrease the hatch. Prolonged cool, wet weather the first couple weeks after hatching may kill many chicks because their insect food is not readily available.

Favorable weather conditions may result in survival of two or three times as many chicks per brood, compared with adverse summers. And successive years of good weather has a cumulative effect, multiplying the grouse population. On the other hand, year after year of bad weather can cut their numbers sharply.

Changes in the habitat--the trees, underbursh and herbs--have a long term effect on ruffed grouse numbers. And here is where the experimental approach to controlled burning comes in.

Grouse populations reach their peak a few years after cutting pine forests and extensive fires lead to great areas of brush and aspen stands, which give good cover and food supplies for grouse.

In the past 25 years, there have been few fires of consequence in northeastern Minnesota. Carrying capacity of the habitat for grouse has declined. Thus, wildlife biologists are proceeding to study controlled burning to improve habitat.

A comprehensive discussion of this research, and the general life story of these birds, is contained in a publication "Ruffed Grouse in Minnesota," published by the Hearald-Review, Grand Rapids, Minnesota. Much of the information was provided by Gullion and by Milt Stenlund, Grand Rapids, regional game manager for the Minnesota conservation department and by other department reports.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q- When I purchased my home through a GI loan, I was told that my monthly payments would be a certain amount. Now my mortgage company has notified me of an increase in my monthly payments. Why?

A In most cases, monthly payments are made up of principal and interest and a monthly deposit for payment of taxes and hazard insurance premiums. The principal and interest portion of your payment will not change through the life of the loan. However, the monthly deposit to pay taxes and insurance may increase or decrease depending upon whether your real estate tax or hazard insurance premium is increased or decreased.

Q--Could you please tell me about Orphans Education Assistance. I am a veteran with a 30 per cent service-connected disability and I have two sons who are 12 and 13 years old. I would like to know if they are eligible for educational assistance from the Veterans Administration.

A In order for the children of a living veteran to be eligible for benefits under the War Orphans Education Assistance Program, the veteran must be permanently rated 100 per cent service-connected disabled. Should your disability become worse, you should check with the VA regional office.

Q--I was hospitalized for one month in 1951 at a VA hospital. Upon being discharged from the hospital I applied for a disability but after an examination I was rated at zero per cent disability. Would it be too late to apply for a re-examination, as I have since been hospitalized for the same ailment?

A--If you have additional medical evidence to present, you may apply again to the VA for reconsideration of your condition.

Q In figuring income to determine eligibility for a veteran's nonservice-connected pension, can the veteran deduct 10 per cent of his social security income?

A--The veteran does not take the deduction himself. He reports all his income to the Veterans administration including social security payments, annuities, private pensions, etc. The VA then calculates the 10 per cent exclusion as provided by law.

Q--I am receiving disability benefits for a child who is attending the university. How long may I receive this additional benefit?

A--The additional benefit may be paid up until the child's 23rd birthday as long as he (she) remains in school and is unmarried. Do not confuse this with the VA Orphans Education program where marriage has no effect on the benefit.

Q--I have a National Service life insurance term policy, paying dividends each year. If I convert to the modified life insurance plan will I continue to receive dividends?

A--Yes, but you should understand that dividends at first, if any, will be very small.

Tips on Passing Offered by State Highway Dep't.

No matter how expert we can be as drivers, we occasionally lapse into an act of driving that doesn't quite measure up to what we know is correct. For instance, we know that we ought to be careful about passing, especially when another car is approaching from the opposite direction notes the Minnesota highway department.

Yet, there probably isn't one of us who hasn't, at one time or another, moved over in the road to pass a car, and then wondered if he could get around in time.

Here is one way of looking at this which might be helpful. When we try to pass a car that is going about 35 miles per hour, it's the same as passing a string of parked cars hundreds of feet long, the actual distance depending on the exact speed of both cars. The next time you pass a car on the highway, try to visualize your distance in these terms.

If you do make a mistake in passing and find yourself out on the left side of the road with a car approaching, it is usually best to apply the brakes and drop back behind the car that you started to pass. Avoid the necessity of employing extra power in trying to make up for an error in a passing maneuver.

An important item that warrants mentioning is the illegal action of speeding up when a car is attempting to pass. This dangerous act could result in a serious accident which might well involve the offender.

Shade Tree Selection Needs Good Planning

Whether a shade tree will serve its function well in a particular location depends upon careful choice of variety and proper care to keep it in top condition. Hardiness, longevity, mature size, adaptability to the site and freedom from insects and diseases must all be considered in selecting shade trees, according to L. C. Snyder, head of the department of horticultural science at the University of Minnesota.

Hardiness is the ability of a plant to thrive on a given site, but it involves much more than resistance to low temperature, Synder declared. The American arborvitae, for example, can withstand winter temperatures as low as -125 degrees Farenheit without injury, providing the drop in temperature is gradual. But if the drop in temperature is sudden, it can be killed at temperatures above zero. To assure success with this species, it is necessary to select a site where temperature changes are gradual, such as a north slope.

One answer to the problem of getting hardy trees and shrubs, the horticulturist emphasized, is to purchase nursery stock as near home as possible or from an area with similar latitude and climate.

Slower growing species are generally longer lived and structurally stronger than fast-growing species. Various poplars and silver are recognized as fast-growing but relatively short-lived. Although the silver maple is actually not short-lived, it is subject to breakage by winds and ice storms as it reaches maturity. Slower growing species like the oaks, hard maples and ash are longer lived and usually more desirable.

Plantings should always be in scale with the surroundings; yet mature size of trees is often forgotten when selecting various species. Although large, open areas can take large trees, smaller varieties are needed near buildings. Flowering crabapples and other small, ornamental trees are appropriate at the edge of woods or as a border for a golf course fairway.

Adaptability to the site, one of the most important factors in selecting trees, involves knowledge of the soil type, soil pH, soil moisture and exposure to wind and sun. A study of trees in nature will help in choosing trees for a given situation, Snyder explained. If the site is poorly drained and wet for much of the year, select trees which normally grow in swamps or river bottoms subject to periodic flooding.

Snyder listed these species as useful in wet soils if the seed source comes from near by or from an area with a similar climate: tamarack, river birch, black ash, red maple and black spruce. Red maple requires an acid soil for best growth; sugar maple thrives only where the soil is deep, fertile and well-drained.

Susceptibility to wind breakage should be another consideration. Green ash, hackberry and burr oak have a sturdy, wide-angle branching habit and generally resist wind. On the other hand, Idaho locust, silver maple and basswood are examples of trees to avoid in windy locations.

Don't forget the insect and disease problem when you select trees, the University of Minnesota horticulturist warned. The choice of a tree species based on insect or disease resistance must be made for each area. It is always safer to plant a variety of species than just one kind, he pointed out. Certain tree species like the American chestnut have been practically eliminated because of the ravages of disease.

Since Dutch Elm disease has been destructive in some places, it would be unwise to continue planting large numbers of American elms in those areas. Black locust and its cultivars should be avoided where the locust borer is a problem. Where there has been an invasion of bronze birch borer, planting the European White birch or the native Canoe birch would be asking for trouble. But the River birch might be used because it shows considerable resistance to this insect.

Although general tree care starts with the selection of the right tree, continuous annual attention is required to keep trees attracive and healthy. Good care should include proper pruning, fertilizing, watering and control of insects and diseases.

U.S. Families Spend Heavily for Clothing

As a result of rising incomes, U. S. families are buying more and better quality clothing, according to Athelene Scheid, extension clothing specialist at the University of Minnesota. They are also buying many of the new and improved textile items now on the market.

Part of the increased purchase of clothing is also due to the expanding proportion in the population of 15 to 24-year-olds, the age group with maximum clothing expenditures, Miss Scheid said.

Total expenditures for clothing and shoes in 1964 was over $33 billion. Per person expenditures for clothing amounted to $174. Per capita expenditures in constant dollars was the highest since 1929--seven per cent higher than in 1963 and four per cent above the previous all-time peaks in 1943 and 1946. The recent increase in spending for clothing may be the start of an upward trend, Miss Scheid says.

Closely related to the amount of income spent for clothing is the price of clothing. The next few months may see price advances for certain apparel, particularly for shoes, children's clothes and some men's wear. Increased shoe prices for 50 cents to $1 a pair may appear with the spring lines on low and medium-priced shoes and as much as $2 on more expensive footwear. Prices for children's clothing may be five to 10 per cent higher in spring than they were last year. Prices for other clothing are expected to change very little.

Miss Scheid points out, however, that in recent years the price of clothing has risen more slowly than most other goods. From September of 1964 to September of 1965 the consumer price level for clothing rose 1.2 per cent in contrast to a 1.7 per cent rise for all items.

Among the new and improved products for which consumers will be spending their clothing dollars in spring and summer are more easy-care items such as permanently pressed slacks and permanent-press shirts for men and boys; more stretch cottons, especially in sports clothes; more shrink-resistant wool garments that can be laundered at home; and leather substitutes for shoes.

Bond Sales for County Announced

Pennington County Chairman J. M. Roche reports that sales of E and H savings bonds in this county in January amounted to $17,195 or 11.2 per cent of the county's goal for 1966 of $153,000.

Savings bond sales in Minnesota are expected to increase substantially following the recent announcement of a hike in the interest rate to 4.15 per cent. The increase rate is retroactive to Dec. 1, 1965, and applies to all old bonds as well as new. Minnesotans now hold more than $1,750,000,000 in series E and H bonds.

January sales of savings bonds in the state totaled $5,867,050, or 8.2 per cent of the annual quota of $71,300,000.

Most of us are familiar with the seven sayings of Jesus from the Cross on the day of the Crucifixion. Though we have read them many times perhaps not all of us are as familiar with the seven sayings to the Cross on that same day. These of course, cause us to look at the Cross from before. The Words of Jesus from the Cross were spoken in our behalf. The Words to the Cross were not all so tenderly spoken. The second word will be considered in the theme: "Too Contemptuous to be Concerned." 8:00 p.m. Family Night Musical Service. Several will participate in singing solos, duets and group numbers. Many of the old and new gospel songs will be shared. Lunch will be served following the service by Olga Olson, Emelia Rensla, Mrs. Rustan and Mrs. Skallet.

This is broadcast also over station KTRF and is known as the Bread of Life Hour. We hear so much about "God is Dead". . . . and FORGIVENESS . . .

Sin is a disagreeable word that millions shun. It casts a shadow of separation. It raises chill thoughts of an impenetrable and eternal barrier between humanity and God . . .

Forgiveness on the other hand is a warm and inspiring word. It promises that life's slate can be wiped clean. It brings us close to God — and to one another.

An Execution on a Friday centuries ago . . . an Empty Tomb in the dawn of the first Easter Day . . . a Faith that has gripped human souls for all the generations since — these are forever entwined with the stark realization of man's sin and the blessed assurance of God's forgiveness.

That is why, when we think deeply of the meaning of these words — of their implication in our own lives — we find ourselves at the very heart of the Christian religion.

And it is why these soul-stirring weeks at the threshhold of Christ's suffering have long been the time for such searching thought!

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Vinegar vignettes from SPEAS

Vinegar — Drink of the Roman Soldiers

Throughout history, vinegar has played a fascinating and important role. Julius Caesar's armies are supposed to have drunk vinegar mixed with water when on the march. Caesar apparently believed in the curative powers of vinegar. Today Speas knows more about vinegar than anyone . . . as they have been in the business since 1888.

DAMAGE to the metal awning at Brodin Sheet Metal was among the few reports of actual damage done by the storm Thursday and Friday. The awning collapsed under the weight of snow which was swept on it by the wind. Temperatures above zero and the wise choice by most people to stay in their homes helped avert tragedy in the storm—considered to be among the worst in the area's known history.

That Was the Storm That Was . .

1941 Blizzard Stands As Historic Standard

by Jim Wills,
Times Reporter

As this is being written, snow which has so far totaled an estimated 15 inches is being whipped into deep drifts by a north wind blowing generally at 35 miles per hour and gusting at times to 50. All highway, rail and air traffic is at a standstill, and the only vehicles achieving any mobility on the snow-clogged streets and roads are snowmobiles and a few four-wheel-drive vehicles.

This March storm, the worst in many years and probably the worst in history, is bringing memories of the disastrous blizzard which struck without warning Saturday evening, March 15, 1941. The Ides of March storm in 1941 didn't bring as much snow to the area as the one currently raging, but it's suddenness and hurricane-like wind brought about much more tragic consequences. More than 70 lives were lost during blizzard, including 28 in northwestern Minnesota and 38 in North Dakota.

In the winter of 1940-41, as in many other years, the most severe storms hit the area in early and late winter. While temperatures, in December, January and February blizzards, are generally lower than in November and March, the latter two months average much higher in precipitation. Therefore, November and March storms really pile up the snow. In 1940, the worst early-winter storm in the area's history struck on Armistice Day, November 11, but more about that later.

The Times issue of March 20, 1941, states that the previous Saturday, March 15, began with a light snowfall and a gentle south wind. Shortly after 9 p.m. that evening, the wind instantly turned into a terrific northerly gale, which reached a measured velocity of more than 75 miles per hour in Grand Forks and Fargo. The wind immediately picked up the loose snow, which filled the air, reducing visibility to zero and piling up huge hard-packed drifts. At the same time the temperature dropped from 20 above to well below zero in two hours.

Making up the greater part of the fatalities were motorists who were caught without warning away from shelter, and who were forced to stop their cars on the highways. Polk county chalked up 12 such fatalities, and most of the others occurred in similar open areas of Minnesota and North Dakota, where the only obstacles to the hellish wind were a few tree rows and barbed-wire fences.

The motorists who came through this predicament with their lives were chiefly those who wisely elected to stay in their cars, running their heaters periodically to conserve gasoline. Those who tried to make it to other shelter on foot had no chance against the driving wind, blinding snow and freezing temperatures.

One Pennington county citizen died of exposure in the storm, and many others narrowly escaped the HIGHWAY 59 has the only stretch of divided highway in the city, but it wasn't divided after the Thursday-Friday storm. Snowplows cleared the lanes leading out of the city but left the other lanes for cleanup later. Those who obeyed the above sign were only drivers of snowmobiles; any conventional wheel-type vehicle would have been unable to travel more than a few feet.

School Districts In Area Compared In State Survey

Minnesota grade elementary and secondary school districts range in size of student enrollment from 45 to 71,569 and in assessed valuation from $786 to $418,219,210.

These are just a very few of the statistics that indicate the diversity in the state's education picture as painted in a research study just released by the Minnesota Education association (MEA) — "Basic Financial Data in Minnesota Public School Districts."

The study shows that the five districts with the smallest enrollments are Petersburg, 45; Naytahwaush 57; Vineland, 74; Danvers, 99; Solway, 101. The largest, Minneapolis, 71,569; St. Paul, 46,772; Robbinsdale, 23,541; Duluth, 22,351; Anoka, 19,680. Thief River Falls has 2,902; Goodridge has 406; St. Hilaire has 218; Oklee has 441; Plummer has 255; and Red Lake Falls has 535.

Total assessed valuations (the bases on which real estate taxes are computed) range from Vineland's $786 to Minneapolis' $418,219,210.

Others in the low five are Red Lake, $10,831; Naytahwaush, $63,815; Kalevala, $66,009; McGrath, $143,972.

Others in the top five: St. Paul, $246,281,845; Duluth $47,884,332; Robbinsdale, $40,807,579; Bloomington, $36,643,641. Thief River Falls has $3,965,329; Goodridge has $534,398; St. Hilaire has $632,567; Oklee has 688,193; Plummer has $576,515; and Red Lake Falls has $1,097,177.

Another factor considered in assessing efficiency and other aspects of school district operation is the cost of maintaining a pupil unit (one kindergarten pupil is a half unit, one elementary pupil is one unit, one junior or senior high pupil is 1½ units).

MEA's statistics show that the lowest maintenance cost per pupil unit is Vernon Center's, $113; the highest, Riverton's $638.

The other four in the low five are Brandon, $288; Milaca, $292; Climax, $296; Foley, $297.

The others in the top five are Buhl, $633; Vineland, $595; Mountain Iron, $570; Nashwauk - Keewatin, $582. Thief River Falls has $414; Goodridge has $391; St. Hilaire has $298; Oklee has $374; Plummer has $401; and Red Lake Falls has $381.

Augustine Will Attend Meeting Of Land O'Lakes

James A. Watson, president of Red Owl Stores, Inc., Minneapolis, will be the featured speaker at the annual meeting of Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., on Thursday. The meeting is to be held at Land O'Lakes headquarters in Minneapolis with 2,500 expected to be in attendance.

Among those attending will be Marian Augustine, rural Thief River Falls director candidate from District 14 of the cooperative.

Frank D. Stone, general manager, will report that 1965 showed the greatest growth in total volume of business that was ever achieved by the association in its 45-year history.

Dan Holtz, president, will discuss the achievements and problems of 1965 and look to future goals for Land O'Lakes. E. M Norton, secretary, National Milk Producers federation, will report on new legislation and its effect on dairymen.

The afternoon program will close with an address by the Minnesota Commissioner of Agriculture, Russell G. Schwandt.

The business meeting on Friday will feature financial reports by Trig E. Sundheim, treasurer, adoption of resolutions, and election of directors.

A meeting closely associated with Land O'Lakes annual meeting is the annual Managers' and Operators' conference to be held on Wednesday. Speakers will be Myron P. Dean, dairy production extension specialist, University of Wisconsin — "Progress Report on Abnormal Milk in Wisconsin"; Dr. E. Fred Koller, professor, agriculture economics, University of Minnesota — "Some Changes and Trends in the Midwest Dairy Industry"; Claire L. Jackson, Chief of division of dairy, food and trade, Wisconsin Department of Agriculture — "Product Accountability"; Albert Mueller, president, Lake to Lake Dairy cooperative— "Are Cooperatives Too Large?", and Phillip F. Stocker, production manager, Land O'Lakes agriculture service division, will outline the new plant food program of Land O'Lakes.

Highlight of the managers' and operators' conference is the efficiency award program Wednesday evening following the banquet. Kent Ringkob, International Farm Youth Exchange student from Jackson, will talk on "Finland and Her People."

LO'L District 17 Is State Butter Making Champion

District 17, Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., was the state winner for buttermaking efficiency with a score of 99.64. This district, which has recently been consolidated to form a new District 14, contains the counties of Red Lake, Norman, Mahnomen, Polk, Clearwater, Pennington, Beltrami, Marshall, Kittson, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, Koochiching and Itasca.

It was the first time the honor had been won by a northern Minnesota district.

Efficiency prizes will be awarded March 9 at a meeting of creamery operators and managers in Minneapolis.

Claudia Melvie On Singing Tour

Caludia Melvie, daughter of Mrs. Olga Melvie, Thief River Falls, is currently on tour with the Augsburg College Cantorians.

The Cantorians, under the direction of Mayo Savold, will present concerts throughout southern Minnesota, singing a variety of anthems from the church year.

Blizzard Paralyzes Area With 25 Inches of Snow

One of the most severe snow storms in the area's recorded history struck the Times area late last week, paralyzing business and traffic, creating huge drifts of snow and, for many, bringing to mind the disastrous blizzard in March of 1941. There are those who will say the storm was not a blizzard because temperatures remained above zero, but neither of the two dictionaries in this office list sub-zero temperatures as blizzard requirements.

One of the unique facts of the blizzard was its lengthy duration. The storm actually began Wednesday evening with snow and easterly winds. Snow and wind continued Thursday, causing schools to be closed throughout the area but traffic continued moving on highways although roads were heavy. By Friday morning the effects of the storm were most severely felt.

Schools were again closed on Friday, virtually all meetings and gatherings were canceled, most of the downtown stores were closed, traffic was at a standstill except for snowmobiles, there was no bus, train or airplane service in or out of the city, nearly all hotels and motels were filled with stranded motorists and there was no mail service.

Snow stopped falling on Saturday morning and the sun broke through the overcast skies. Strong northerly winds continued to blow, however, causing heavy ground drifting. City, county and state highway department crews went to work about 3 a.m. Saturday to begin the monumental task of clearing streets and highways for travel. By noon Sunday virtually all highways in the area were open, the downtown area of Thief River Falls was cleared and snow removal was being conducted in the residential areas.

North Central Airlines personnel at the Thief River Falls municipal airport reported that a total of 25 inches of new snow had fallen during the storm and that winds had reached peak gusts of 65 miles per hour. Temperatures hit a low of 16 Friday and zero Saturday.

There were no North Central flights here from Wednesday evening to Saturday afternoon when the runway, taxiway and apron at the airport were cleared of snow.

The state highway patrol reported hundreds of stalled cars on highways in the area, mostly on Friday. These cars, and trucks which became stuck in drifts or stalled due to wet wiring, caused drifts on the highways which made travel impossible.

Heart Attack Victim

Only one fatality which could be attributed to the storm was noted in the local area. Manuel Rude, 57, suffered a heart attack Saturday afternoon while operating a tractor and loader to move snow at his farm located in Kratka township about 15 miles southeast of Thief River Falls. His wife walked nearly half a mile through deep snow to reach a telephone and call for help. Rude was dead when the ambulance preceded by a snowplow arrived at the farm.

Other deaths were reported throughout northern Minnesota and North Dakota where the storm struck with all its fury. A number of these fatalities were from heart attacks attributed to exertion because of the storm. Two young North Dakota girls died of exposure when they became lost in the blizzard.

Snowmobiles Meet Need

Since conventional wheeled vehicles were rendered immobile by the heavy snow, the only relatively sure means of transportation during the storm was by snowmobile. Arctic Enterprises, Inc., headed by Lowell Swenson, provided an emergency snowmobile service on Friday and Saturday. Mrs. Swenson, who served as dispatcher, estimated that approximately 200 calls were received and that from three to six vehicles were kept operating steadily during the two days.

Calls answered were for emergency fuel oil, propane gas, groceries, prescriptions, at least one person requiring immediate medical assistance (a child who had taken a large number of aspirin), and a number of calls to provide transportation for nurses, hospital staff members, telephone company, railroad personnel and others who found it necessary to be at their jobs.

Norman Peterson, administrator at Northwestern hospital, had high praise for the Arctic Enterprises volunteers and other snowmobile operators who provided their services to the hospital. Staff members from outside the city remained at the hospital for several days, he said, but it was only through the use of the snowmobiles that many of the staff members were able to be on duty.

Highway Patrol Rescues

Minnesota state highway patrol was called on for a number of rescue missions during the storm, most requiring medical attention. A quick summary indicated a case of blood poisoning, convulsions, at least three imminent maternity cases and one report of a person needing attention for a heart stimulator device. The patrol radio office here was in operation Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights to answer calls and assist in directing rescue operations.

Similarly, the Thief River Falls police and Pennington county sheriff's department were on 24-hour alert. Police served as a coordinating center to direct street department crews in emergencies. The sheriff's department answered several emergency calls with the assistance of county highway department snowplows.

More Storm Problems

Two of these calls involved fires

SNOW piled high across the Soo Line railroads tracks on Eighth street provided the scene for this photo Saturday morning after the two-day snow storm which closed off all traffic into and out of the city. Eighth street was completely blocked, as were most of the city's streets and area highways until snowplows began operating Saturday.

Conditions Which Caused Blizzard Are Explained

Thief River Falls area residents are still wielding shovels and using mechanized snow movers in an attempt to "get back to normal" after a three-day blizzard the worst in history in terms of total snowfall — paralyzed and isolated the area late last week. While leaning on shovel handles, some area residents may have wondered what happened in the world of weather phenomena to create such a storm. An Associated Press report Sunday gives an explanation from the weather bureau at Bismarck, N. D.

The blizzard, which old-timers say even tops the blizzard of 1888, started when three low pressure areas, two on the surface and one aloft, converged on the northern plains. Fueling the storm were moisture-laden clouds carried northward by southerly winds from the Gulf of Mexico.

The blizzard was born, the bureau said, about March 1 when two low centers developed one in Nevada and the other in northern Colorado. Hanging there for several days they continued to deepen, moving eastward somewhat less rapidly than expected until joined by the low pressure area above.

This type of formation normally steers surface weather conditions, but it showed the lows on the ground causing them to deepen further and become almost stationary. With the three low pressure areas acting in concert and those on the ground merging, they moved slowly into southern South Dakota to produce the brunt of the storm.

The movement noted by the Weather Bureau prompted forecasts Wednesday afternoon warning of strong northeasterly winds and four inches or more of new snow. This proved just a bit conservative.

Today's forecast calls for mostly fair and warmer today with occasional cloudiness and scattered light snow. Warming is also predicted tonight and tomorrow. Highs today will range from 15 to 25; lows tonight from 8 to 18. Winds will be light and variable today. Outlook for Wednesday is variable cloudiness and a little colder.

Weather figures recorded each day of the big storm by North Central Airlines personnel at the municipal airport are as follows: 32 and 7 on Wednesday; 28, 20 and 10 inches of snow containing .62 inch of water on Thursday; 23, 16 and 11 inches of snow containing 1.10 inches of water on Friday; 23, 0 and four inches of snow containing .30 inch of water on Saturday; 8 and -10 on Sunday; and a low this morning of -20. The 11 inches of snow Friday was the largest total on any one day in Times weather records.

CHALLENGING a snow drift of this size with a shovel appeared a monumental task early Saturday morning at the Clarence Mattson residence on Main av. N. It took a surprisingly short time for Ricky and Marsha Mattson to cut a path to the front door, however. It was a common sight Saturday to see local residents armed with shovels busily "digging-out" after the two-day storm.

PARALYZED by wind-blown snow piled into drifts up to six feet high, during the three-day blizzard late last week, downtown streets in Thief River Falls were gradually opened by snowplows Saturday, when the snow stopped and the wind diminished to a gentle 25 miles per hour. The biggest drift in the downtown area appeared on the north side of Third street between LaBree and Main avenues. The middle of the street was plowed open Saturday, but traffic was still mainly by snowmobile and on foot. Most Thief River Falls retail stores were closed during the storm.

DeMorett-Cwikla Vows Spoken At Eden Valley

Assumption Catholic church in Eden Valley was the scene at 11 a.m. Saturday, February 19, for the marriage of Miss Mary Ann DeMorett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeMorett of Eden Valley and Jerome P. Cwikla, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Cwikla, Sr., of Middle River. The Rev. Francis J. Hohn officiated.

White chrysanthemums graced the main altar while a religious candle and a bouquet of assorted flowers were placed on the altar of the Blessed Virgin.

For her wedding the bride chose a traditional floor-length wedding gown of white satin designed with a long train. The gown fashioned with a princess styled bodice, secured in back from the neckline to the waist by a row of satin covered buttons, featured long sleeves buttoned at the wrists. Rhinestones and pearls outlined the high neckline while appliques of rosettes, accenting the full skirt and repeated on the train, added back interest. Her veil of silk illusion was held in place by a pearl trimmed rosette headpiece and she carried a bridal bouquet of red roses. Her only jewelry was a pair of pearl errings, a gift from the groom.

Carol DeMorett of St. Cloud attended the bride as maid of honor while Judy Cwikla of Minneapolis was bridesmaid and Mrs. T. A. DeMorett of St. Paul was bridesmatron. They wore identical floor length gowns in two shades of blue designed with deep blue brocade bodices featuring scoop necklines accented in back with long brocade trains. Their floor-length crepe skirts were of lighter shade of blue. To complement their attire they wore shoes to match their skirts, deep blue veiled headpieces enhanced by pearls and carried bouquets of pink carnations and miniature red roses.

Ann Niewind served as flower girl. She was attired in a white floor length satin gown styled with puffed sleeves and like the bride's gown it featured appliqued rosettes scattered across the back. She carried a basket of pink carnations and red miniature roses.

Dave Cwikla of Minneapolis attended the groom as best man. Groomsmen were Joseph DeMorett of Crystal and Stanley Cwikla, Jr., of Wilmar with James Cwikla, cousin of the groom and Tom DeMorett, brother of the bride, as ushers. Jimmy Morrissey of Coon Rapids was ring bearer.

Following the ceremony a dinner was served at the Starlite Inn at Luxemburg followed by a reception from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. with entertainment provided by Dick Biscof's band.

The four-tiered wedding cake, made and decorated by Mrs. Math DeMorett of Watkins, aunt of the bride, was cut and served by Mrs. Dave Cwikla. Betty Waltz registered the guests while Mrs. Richard O'Connell and Mrs. Douglas Brix arranged the gifts.

The bride, a 1961 graduate of the Edin Valley Public high school, attended Drews Business College at St. Cloud and is employed as secretary at Cities Service Oil company in St. Paul. The groom is a 1958 graduate of Middle River high school. He is currently attending Dunwoody Institute in Minneapolis and is employed as a machinist for Alloy Hardfacing and Engineering Company.

After a Southern wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Cwikla will be at home at 1750 Norfolk, St. Paul.

Two More States Adopt Sales Tax, MTA Announces

Two more states, Massachusetts and Virginia, have passed sales tax legislation within the last few days, according to Charles P. Stone, executive director of the Minnesota Taxpayers association.

"Forty-one states, the District of Columbia and 17 cities in New Jersey, Oregon and Alaska—together comprising 164,850,630 persons or nearly 92 per cent of the total population of the United States—now have chosen the sales tax as a fair and effective way of providing needed public revenues," Stone said.

"Minnesota, still leaning heavily on taxation of property and income to finance state and local budgets, remains one of nine hold-out states."

The Massachusetts sales tax, at a three per cent rate, will take effect April 1, Stone said; the Virginia two per cent tax bill, now awaiting the signature of the governor, is slated to become effective September 1.

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

Features from the Kitchen of

MRS. IRWIN JOHNSON

What a perfect day for making candy. As this is being written, it is impossible to see through the office windows. The swirling snow, coming in contact with the warm glass, has formed a coating similar to the frosted window panes used in churches before stained windows became so popular.

With schools closed, due to the storm, it would be interesting to know how everyone spent their time while snowbound. Did anyone make candy?

Today's interesting candy recipes were submitted by Mrs. Irwin Johnson of rural Thief River Falls. Her candy entries won first prize in the oats and wheat division at the local Seed and Feed show.

PEANUT BUTTER DROPS

1 cup chunk-style peanut butter
16 large marshmallows
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup curshed Life cereal
1 cup flaked coconut

Method: Melt peanut butter, marshmallows and butter in covered heavy sauce pan over very low heat. Stir in milk, vanilla and salt. Remove from heat and add cereal and coconut. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto waxed paper and store in refrigerator.

FUDGE NOUGATS

1 cup evaporated milk
½ cup butter
1 6-oz. pkg. semi-sweet chocolate morsels
¾ cup flour
1 cup finely crushed graham crackers
¾ cup chopped walnuts
1 teaspoon vanilla

The Irwin Johnsons, who reside on a farm northwest of Thief River Falls, have three sons, all attending Northrop elementary school in this city. They are Dwight 12; Neil, 8 and Lyle, 5. The family attends Redeemer Lutheran church where Mrs. Johnson is a member of the Mary Unit, Altar guild and the Lutheran Church Women and also teaches Sunday school.

Mrs. Johnson is also a member of the Rosewood homemakers club. Her hobbies include trying new recipes, reading, embroidering and gardening. Her husband is a representative for Gamble Robinson.

Mondale Opposes Cut in School Milk Programs

"The Budget Bureau's proposal to slash the school milk program by 80 per cent and the hot lunch program by 10 per cent is poor economy in my estimation," states Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota.

"I am wholeheartedly in favor of reducing unnecessary government expenditures, but I do not think that either of these programs fit in that category. Instead, the school milk and lunch programs are a modest investment in the health of the nation—and are no place to economize.

"In the past year alone, the milk program has provided more than 3.1 billion half pints of milk to children in some 93,000 schools, child care centers, summer camps, orphanages and settlement houses. And the same is true under the lunch program where more than three billion hot lunches are being provided to nearly 18 million school children during the current year," Mondale said.

"In Minnesota, about 410,000 lunches are served daily in our schools while some 710,000 half-pints of milk are consumed each day. In 1965, for example, school children drank a total of 133 million half-pints of milk of which more than 64 million were served with noon school lunches.

"Exact statistics are not yet available, but if the proposed budget bureau cuts in these programs were applied directly to Minnesota, it would appear that some 41,000 Minnesota school children would no longer be eligible for hot lunches and that anywhere from 300,000 to 350,000 children would be cut off the milk program", the senator added.

"These two programs are obviously highly popular with both parents and school officials. The assure that every school child has and adequate diet and encourages them to drink more milk by making it available at a reduced price. In addition, the milk program has expanded the market for fluid milk for dairy farmers in Minnesota and throughout the country. But the most important results of these programs remain, as I have stated, the incalculable health and nutritional benefits derived by the children who participate."

SCHOOL was closed Thursday and Friday in Thief River Falls, for obvious reasons. Franklin junior high school, pictured above; and the adjoining Mark Twain elementary school, located at the east edge of town, received the full force of the northeast wind which blew 25 inches of snow into huge drifts. The drifts shown here on the west side of the school building were probably the biggest in town; they reached a height of approximately 14 feet. It was reported that the drifts provided amusement for youngsters who jumped from the roof into the snow—not a great distance in most places.

ALLEYS in residential areas of Thief River Falls, bordered by trees and garages, became even more impassable than streets as the three-day blizzard last week filled them with snowdrifts several feet high. Even snowmobiles hesitated to tackle drifts of the size pictured above. The alleys were also the last of the city's transportation routes to be cleared by snow-moving equipment, as can be attested by anyone whose car is still confined in an alley-located garage.

Schwandt Summons Fellows To Meet On Milk Situation

Russel G. Schwandt, commissioner of agriculture in Minnesota, has invited his fellow commissioners of agriculture from North Dakota, Wisconsin and Iowa to meet with him on Thursday in St. Paul to discuss the conditions as they presently exist in the dairy industry, in terms of prices and milk supplies.

Schwandt stated that he was alarmed by the drop in milk production wherein January showed a 14 per cent reduction from a year earlier in Minnesota, 15 per cent in Iowa, seven per cent in Wisconsin, 13 per cent in North Dakota, and nine per cent in South Dakota. These five states produce nearly one-third of the country's milk supply.

"This trend must be stopped or it will assume very serious complications for the consumer," Schwandt said.

The commissioner blamed inadequate prices to the producer for the shortage. He stated that farmers are finding it necessary to shift the use of their facilities into other areas because milk prices have consistently remained at too low a level, making it impossible for many of the producers to sustain their operations.

"Every consumer must be vitally concerned with an adequate supply of high quality dairy products," Schwandt said. "While increased prices to the producer will mean a slight increase to the consumer, it is important to note that we have consistently retained the lowest consumer prices on milk of any area in the United States. If our shortage is continued and the trend is not reversed, the end result will be extremely high prices for limited supplies."

Schwandt stated the five - state meeting has been called for the purpose of developing a closer communication and uniformity in the enforcement of the dairy unfair trade practices laws. Each commissioner is bringing the director of the diary laws enforcement section with him. He also stated that the departments are very much concerned with the projected reduction in funds for the school lunch program and are protesting this action.

SIGNS which are welcome under many conditions become facetious under other conditions. For instance, this sign at Darrell's Mobil service in downtown Thief River Falls seemed quite out of place Saturday, morning after the two-day storm deposited more than two feet of new snow on the area.

Memorials Given To Heart Fund

Heart Fund memorials in the name of the late Sverre and Elvin Sanders of Goodridge were recently received by the Minnesota Heart association, according to David Drotts, Thief River Falls, Pennington county memorial chairman.

The great need for heart research funds, Drotts points out, is indicated by the fact that during the past year, more Americans died from heart disease (approximately 1,000,000) than the total number killed in all the wars in our country's history (602,339). In Pennington county, there were 146 deaths last year, and of this number, 82 were from heart disease.

Town Elections Scheduled for Tuesday in State

Township elections will be held throughout Minnesota Tuesday with most townships to elect a supervisor, clerk, justice of the peace and constable. Some townships will also elect other officers which will appear on the respective ballots.

Voting times will vary from township to township, but most polls will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. Residents of the various townships are encouraged to read the notices of election published in the Times. It is expected that the snow storm of last week will reduce voting numbers to a large extent as many roads remain blocked in the rural areas.

STRANDED motorists found shelter wherever possible when the heavy snow storm blocked roads and highways Thursday and Friday. Those who parked their cars in the spaces provided at local motels were faced with the problem of getting them out Saturday morning as plows moved out to clear the highways. The above photo at Noper's motel shows the extent of the snow. Owners of these cars were at least safe and warm during the storm, while many persons who attempted to travel faced long hours of being stranded on the road.

Three-Day Storm Paralyzes Area With Deep Snow

—one that wouldn't stay lighted and the other which couldn't be extinguished.

The first was at the Warren Brenna residence about 14 miles northwest of Thief River Falls on Friday. Strong winds caused a down-draft that kept blowing out the oil burner, forcing the Brenna family to close off the remainder of the house and use the electric range in the kitchen for heat. After two state snowplows had gone in the ditch, the county plow with its "V" blade reached the farm and the Brenna family—including two-year-old Todd and four-year-old Tommy—was brought to the city. They were housed at the Calmer Brenna home. The Brennas wish to thank the people who braved the storm to come to their assistance.

The second call involved a barn fire at the Raymond Nelson farm about 12 miles northeast of Thief River Falls in Agdar township of Marhall county. Destroyed were a 30 x 60 barn, milking equipment and an estimated 250 bales of hay. The fires started about 6:30 p.m. and neighbors assisted in rescuing 150 sheep, including about 25 newborn lambs. No fire department went to the farm, but the sheriff's department brought an electrician to disconnect the electricity.

Also destroyed was the water system located in a pumphouse by the barn and which supplied water to the house and for livestock. Estimated at several thousand dollars, the loss is partly covered by insurance. No livestock was reported lost.

CONTENT to let their cars stay where they became stuck or stalled, many motorists simply abandoned their vehicles Friday until the storm abated. This car attempted to turn into the driveway at Ike's Texaco but didn't quite make it. Like most other cars in the city, it stood at the mercy of the wind and snow and almost disappeared under the compacted drifts.

Police Get 1,000 Calls

City police estimated that they received more than 1,000 telephone calls from Wednesday evening into Sunday, but that they were only able to relay messages and contact other departments or authorities to provide whatever assistance was possible. Radio station KTRF was on the air all night Thursday to broadcast storm warnings, give notice of cancellations and provide emergency messages.

Several other ambulance calls were noted during the storm and several injuries were reported. One resident of the Oklee community was rushed to Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls behind a snowplow escort for an emergency appendectomy. A woman from Viking area was also brought to the hospital Friday through the use of a snowplow and ambulance when her illness became worse. At least three other people with suspected heart attacks were hospitalized.

Youth Breaks Foot

Youthful fun turned into painful injury for Edwin Driscoll, 13, son of Mrs. Constance Driscoll. The youth was jumping from a roof at the rear of the Coast-to-Coast store into drifted snow when, one on of the jumps, he struck the edge of a steel barrel, sustaining a fracture of his left foot.

Karen Charlson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Charlson, and Paula Stroble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Stroble, both received lacerations of the left leg in a snowmobile accident. Both girls were reportedly riding the same machine. They were treated and released at the hospital.

Motels located away from the downtown area were filled with stranded motorists. All of them provided meals for their guests since it was impossible to travel to downtown restaurants on Friday and Saturday. A number of the stranded motorists delayed their departure until Sunday to be sure that roads were open for travel.

1941 Blizzard Is Standard for Winter Storms

same fate. The victim was Francis James Weckwerth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Weckwerth who lived on a farm southeast of Thief River Falls. Weckwerth, aged 22, became worried about the safety of his 16-year-old brother, James, who was visiting at the Andrew Arne home nearby. He started out in the storm on horseback, but got lost almost immediately. The horse found his way back to the barn, but Weckwerth had apparently fallen off. His frozen body was found about 50 feet from the Weckwerth barn the following morning.

The Times also reported two deaths caused by exposure in the Crookston and Marcoux area. Mrs. Orland Bailey, 22, of Hibbing was the driver of a car which stalled about six miles west of Crookston. She got out and started to walk toward Crookston, but was overcome by cold and exhaustion 3½ miles from her car.

Sid Bonamie, 27, a Great Northern railroad agent at Tilden Junction southeast of Crookston, was the driver of a car which stalled three-quarters of a mile south of Marcoux corner. In trying to reach Marcoux for help, he became lost, and his body was found several miles from Marcoux near Dugdale.

One man, Waldemar Johnson, 25, Warren, owed his life to his presence of mind in burrowing under snow in a drainage ditch, where he spent 12 hours. The snow provided such effective insulation that all he sustained was a frost-bitten ear.

Within a distance of 10 miles between Crookston and Eldred, eight persons were rescued from stalled automobiles, the highway Grand Forks and Crookston 29 were rescued.

Another disaster aggravated by the blizzard was a fire in St. Hilaire which razed four buildings with a total damage estimate of $25,000. The fire, believed to have been caused by a chimney fire in the Tom Groven cafe, also destroyed the L. B. Hartz grocery of which Fred Biskey was manager; the Redwood Inn cafe operated by Nick Drees and the Nyal drug store of which John Hanson was manager. Due to the inclement weather, firemen were helpless.

A crowd of 20,000 persons assembled in Moorhead for a district basketball tournament Saturday evening were marooned when the storm broke out, and were constrained to spend the night in the Moorhead high school building.

The wind gradually decreased Sunday, permitted "operation dig-out" to get under way. Times columnist Norm Holen gave the storm a fitting epitaph. This being the period when Britain was staggering under the German blitzkrieg Holen commented that "When it comes to blitzkriegs, Mother Nature proved on the Ides of March that she is no slouch, either."

A lesser storm, though just as notable considering its date, occurred the previous fall. On Armistice Day, November 11, 1940, six inches of snow fell on the area and was whipped along by 50-mile-an-hour winds. Snow generally blew off highways, but zero visibility halted all highway traffic. Most rail traffic continued, though trains generally ran behind schedule. School was not canceled, but attendance was cut in half.

Southeastern Minnesota was hit even harder by this storm. The Twin Cities area was paralyzed, and seven deaths in the Winona area were attributed to the blizzard. Duck hunters along the Mississippi near Winona were caught outdoors in the storm. Many were frost-bitten and three were hospitalized.

And so, in one winter season, two historic blizzards were recorded. Neither piled up snow in the amount that currently has this area paralyzed, however. The problem at the end of the storm will be where to put all the snow. The end isn't in sight, incidentally. Your correspondent just looked out the window and (I'll be doggoned!) it's still snowing and blowing.

Mondale Proposes Bill To Provide Reserve Of Food and Fiber

Senator Walter F. Mondale has introduced legislation to establish a federal food and fiber reserve for use in national emergencies and major disasters.

The legislation, entitled the Emergency Food Reserves Act of 1966, would require maintenance of reserves in wheat, feed grains, rice, cotton, milk and milk products, soybeans, edible fats and oils, in addition to any other commodities which the President may deem necessary.

Mondale told the senate a national reserve is needed because surplus stocks of these and other commodities have been steadily declining over the past few years.

"Our reserves in corn, soybeans, rice, nonfat milk powder, and cheese will be less on June 30, 1966, than the needed reserve levels outlined by the Security Reserves Subcommittee to the National Agricultural Advisory Commission on October 7, 1964," Mondale said. "Only wheat, cotton, and butter have adequate reserves, and wheat is approaching the minimum recommended level."

Noting that past emphasis has been concentrated on measures to manage the productive capacity of American agriculture, Mondale commented that today there is "an absolute and pressing need to set aside a portion of our abundance in an emergency food reserve — for national security, for emergency relief purposes, and for controlling runaway domestic prices."

"The twin scourges of famine and runaway food prices have afflicted mankind throughout history," Mondale said, "and we must guard against that possibility in the United States. We are one of the few nations in the world that can do this, and who can meet the dangers of famine, emergencies, drought, and the sudden necessities that arise from international conflict or war."

Mondale also noted that establishing a food reserve would help improve farm income by controlling surpluses on the market where they act as price depressant. "And by charging the costs of this program to national defense, rather than agriculture," he added, "the public will realize that a substantial portion of the agricultural budget directly and immediately protects their interests, and is not primarily a price support operation."

The Mondale bill differs from an Administration proposal by requiring that wheat, feed grains, rice, cotton, milk and milk products, soybeans and edible fats and oils be included in such a reserve. The Administration bill does not specify what commodities should be included in the reserve.

The Mondale bill also differs by establishing a separate price-quantity mechanism for release of stockpiled commodities to stabilize food prices. The Administration bill gives the President unlimited discretion to release any amount of food or fibre in the reserve while the Mondale bill provides for release of reserve stock in stages as the market price rises.

For example, if the market price were between 95 per cent and 100 per cent of parity, 10 per cent of the reserve could be released for stabilization. Another 10 per cent could be released if market prices climbed to 100 per cent to 105 per cent of parity, and so on up to 115 per cent of parity, at which point the President would have unlimited discretion to release whatever additional reserve stocks he deemed necessary to stabilize prices.

Providing for release of reserve stocks under a formula such as this, Mondale said, would help insure that the stockpiled commodities will not hang heavily over the market, but would still be available for use in an inflationary situation.

Both the Administration proposal and the Mondale bill allow for unlimited release of reserve stocks in the event of national emergencies and major disasters.

How's Your Health?

(Prepared in the public interest by the Minnesota Medical Ass'n)

According to the Minnesota State Medical association, 25 states now require that hospitals and institutions caring for infants conduct tests for phenylketonuria and other metabolic errors which cause mental retardation. Seven other states also encourage hospitals to screen newborn infants for PKU.

The action of state legislatures in this field is significant because without early detection and treatment, phenylketonuria can cause severe and irreparable brain damage and mental retardation.

There are several tests used to detect PKU. Generally, when ferric chloride is added to the urine of a child suffering from PKU, the urine will turn green, but this test is not reliable for newborns or children under six weeks of age. In a newer test, the Guthrie test, the blood of the child is tested with an organic substance for screening. This test is confirmed with other laboratory procedures.

In Minnesota, testing for PKU has been mandatory since July 1, 1965. Blood specimens are collected from every infant three to five days of age. Phenylalanine increases in the blood soon after the baby digests protein, but the collection of the blood sample earlier than three days after the birth of the child may not allow time for abnormal amounts of phenylalanine to accumulate. This blood test makes possible an earlier and more reliable test for PKU. Use of the Guthrie method has detected PKU in some adults who have tested negatively with urine tests.

Minnesota department of health also recommends that a second blood sample be taken when the infant has a four to six-week checkup. This precaution will assure that the phenylketonuric child does not go undetected. If PKU is detected and treated in the early months of infancy with special dietary measures, mental retardation may be prevented and the child may lead a normal life.

Treatment of an infant with phenylketonuria must be begun as soon as possible if mental retardation is to be prevented. Since all hospitals in Minnesota are now required to screen all newborn infants for PKU, there is a much greater chance that an infant suffering from this disease will receive treatment in time.

According to the Minnesota State Medical association, a special diet low in phenylalanine is used to treat PKU. This measure inhibits the accumulation of abnormal amounts of the protein, which the body is unable to use for growth and energy because of the disease. All meat, milk, fish and high protein vegetables may be excluded from the diet of the phenylketonuric child. Allowed foods are carefully measured. Prepared formulae are also available.

If the diet is begun when the child is under six months old, he will probably have borderline to average intelligence when he is five years old. The diet has even better results if the child is younger, and it is possible that the PKU child will attain normal intelligence if the diet is begun early enough.

A low phenylalanine diet does not significantly increase the intelligence of older children who suffer from PKU. There is, however, some evidence that the special diet can cause improvement in other aspects of the syndrome, such as muscular rigidity, coordination and skin conditions. The patient's doctor must determine whether the diet is indicated.

Although the family physician can treat a phenylketonuric child, because of the extensive care required, patients are often referred to large centers, such as the university hospitals. The Minnesota department of health also provides consultation services to doctors to aid in the treatment of PKU infants. With the careful precautions now being taken, doctors say phenylketonuria will eventually be controlled.

Maple Syrup May Be Big Business For Minnesota

Demand for maple syrup in the United States is so great that half of our syrup is imported from Canada. The syrup sells for around $8 per gallon retail and up to $5 per gallon wholesale.

University of Minnesota extension forester Marvin E. Smith says that in spite of good returns and the enormous potential of the industry, only about one per cent of the tappable trees in Minnesota are producing syrup. Smith said that Minnesota has enough sugar Maple trees to secure an annual income of $20-30 million.

Initial investment for equipment is about $1.50 per taphole. A big tree can have several tapholes and a good tree will return the initial investment the first year. A slower tree will take about three years.

Equipment consists of spiles (spigots), buckets or plastic bags, an evaporator and a storage tank.

The farmer or producer must tap the tree, collect the sap and boil the sap into syrup. After that he must decide whether to shoot for big profits by bottling and retailing the syrup himself, or sell it to a bulk buyer. Either way the prices received will justify the time and effort spent.

Sap flows during periods of intermittent freezing and thawing. Smith warns the would-be syrup producers to watch the weather instead of the calendar because the first thaw usually gives the best flow of sap.

Information on procedures, markets and equipment is available through University of Minnesota county agents, usually located in the county courthouse.

That Word "Condemn"

No matter how it is used or by whom it is used, the word "condemn" has a sinister sound. here is such an essence of power and finality in the word that its use almost creates an element of fear. For all its distasteful connotation, however, the word is being used locally in regard to property which the city of Thief River Falls hopes to acquire for a junior college site.

The city has initiated condemnation proceedings in an attempt to acquire approximately 40 acres of land lying immediately River on the northeast edge of Thief River north of highway 1 and east of the Thief which the owner has agreed to sell—is considered by many to be the prime location for a permanent junior college site in the community.

Personally, we are not concerned with an exact site for the junior college. We are concerend, however, that there IS a permanent site for the college, and that such site will be available to the junior college board when a request for funds is made to the 1967 legislature. The importance of this availability can scarcely be over-emphasized.

There is a problem in regard to the 40 some acres in question, and—depending upon who an individual is—it is a major or owner of the property does not want to sell, but the city wants to buy. By implementing condemnation proceedings, the city is in effect saying "you will sell" rather than "we will buy".

According to the law, apparently, condemnation is a right. According to decent judge condemnation to be wrong. It would seem—if freedom is to prevail—that a person who owns property should have the right to keep it or sell it as he or she pleases. The right to condemn runs a collision course with the freedom of choice. Our deep-down feeling is that the right of the individual in our free society is trampled

The law of eminent domain is that superior dominion of the sovereign power over property within the state which authorizes it to appropriate all or any part thereof to a necessary public use, reasonable compensation being made. This law apparently pre-supposes that money will compensate for loss of property.

The "Real" Budget

The figure of $112 billion for a federal budget is being kicked around loosely in Washington, but apparently does not portray the actual expense of government. Actual expenditures for fiscal 1967 are expected to be closer to $175.5 billion.

A non-governmental expert was asked by Human Events magazine, "What explains the difference between the expenditure total of $175 billion and the much smaller figure of $112 billion used by the press and the administration?" The following is his answer.

A. The $112 billion refers to the administrative budget, which belongs in a bookkeeper's museum. This budget is so incomplete it is virtually useless. First, the administrative budget includes only funds which the government owns and does not include funds which the government holds in trust. Thus it does not include expenditures of giant trust funds such as the Social Security trust fund ($22 billion) the highway trust fund ($4 billion) the Medicare trust funds ($3.3 billion) and the unemployment trust fund ($2.0 billion). Trust fund expenditures in the coming fiscal year are estimated at $37 billion but the administrative budget does not show this spending at all.

Second, Congress has established many their receipts in the treasury but, instead, apply these receipts directly to their operations. Expenditures of these funds are thus shown on a net basis; i.e., with receipts already deducted instead of shown separately. For example Post Office Department expenditures in the coming fiscal year are estimated at $5.8 billion, but after $5 billion in receipts are deducted from this amount, the budget will only show "total" expenditures of less than a billion dollars. This method of bookkeeping conceals more than $21 billion in Mr. Johnson's new budget. The significance of these bookkeeping devices is considerable. Besides distorting the total amount of spending (as pointed out above), the use of only the administrative budget also distorts the percentage increases in spending over the years. This is especially true since so much new spending—highways, Medicare, etc.—is done through trust funds and thus is not reflected in the administrative budget.

Defeating the Purpose

According to the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, the administration is working against its own purposes in reducing unemployment. While spending billions of dollars to reduce joblessness, the U.S.C.C. states, the administration is backing legislation that could cause unemployment. The Chamber of Commerce explains as follows:

The legislation is the proposed federal unemployment compensation bill (H.R. 8282), which would drastically change the present federal-state system. The bill is expected to be one of the major issues in this session of Congress.

One of the proposed changes would encourage states to abolish tax incentives for employers who reduce unemployment, under which the less unemployment a firm causes, the less state unemployment compensation tax it pays, and vice versa. The technical term for this incentive is experience rating.

An officer of the Minnetonka (Minn.) Boat Works, Inc., described the incentive's effect:

"We are a small company employing approximately 50 people in retail pleasure boat sales and service business. As you can well imagine, this type of business would normally be very seasonal. . .

"Through the past several years, we have worked toward a service program that now enables us to keep our full crew employed 12 months per year. We worked in this direction because unemployment compensation costs were very great. We now have no charges against our (unemployment compensation) account for three years."

For large companies, the tax saved may be substantial. An officer of the West Penn Power company, a utility in Pennsylvania, wrote:

"Recently our company revised its method of operating line crews with the result that over 100 employees. . .were no longer needed. . .As a result of advance planning, we were able to assign them to other work. If the incentive of experience-rating had not existed, the company would have considered terminating the services of these employees."

There are numerous examples of how experience ratings keep persons in jobs.

Anyone who wants more can get them from a new publication entitled, "How Employers Use Experience-Rating in Unemployment Compensation to Provide Steady Jobs, to Minimize Lay-offs." Write the National Chamber, 1615 H St., N.W., Washington, D. C., 20006. Single copy is free.

Interesting Opinions . . .

"If you get gloomy, just take an hour off and sit and think how much better this world is than hell. Of course, it won't cheer you up much if you expect to go there." —H. L. Mencken

"I must explain that I was only joking when I wrote that I didn't mean what I said about reconsidering my decision not to change my mind." —Teamster

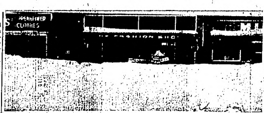
"Where there is yet shame, there may in time be virtue." —Samuel Johnson

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

A reporter from a big city newspaper stopped to visit a friend who ran a little country weekly.

He asked his friend, "How can you keep up your circulation in a town where everyone already knows what everyone else is doing?"

The editor grinned: "They know what everyone's doing, all right, but they read the paper to see who's been caught at it." —Teamster



FAVORITE mode of transportation, in fact the only practical mechanized one, during last week's fierce three-day blizzard was the snowmobile. These ultra-modern recreational delights became real workhorses as the accumulation of wind-blown snow rendered wheeled vehicles immobile. This one, owned by Orvis Olen, is conveniently parked atop a high snowdrift in front of his place of business.

The pairings for the first-round will find the Crookston Pirates playing the subdistrict champions at 2 p.m.; the East Grand Forks Green Wave will meet the subdistrict runners-up at 3:30 p.m. The evening program for Wednesday will find the Climax Vikings playing the Warren Ponies at 7:30 p.m.; and the Thief River Falls Prowlers meeting the subdistrict consolation winners at 9 p.m.

According to present plans, the semi-finals and finals of the district tourney will be played on Monday and Tuesday evenings, March 14 and 15, with games being slated for 7:30 and 9 p.m.

There is a possibility that there may be a change in the playing dates of the semi-finals and finals due to the fact that the North Dakota Class A high school tournament is slated to be played on March 10, 11 and 12; but the blizzard that raged over the state last week has disrupted district tournament play. In case the North Dakota state tournament is postponed, the District 31 tournament semi-finals and finals will be played on March 10 and 11. But at present the district tournament is slated for March 9, 14 and 15.

While the district tournament that opens on Wednesday is the 36th annual as far as District 31 is concerned, it is actually the 54th annual district tourney. From 1913 through 1924, Thief River Falls was a member of District 16, and tournaments were held, and monopolized by the Fosston Greyhounds, with Fosston winning seven titles during that span. From 1925 through 1930, the Prowlers were members of District 1, and in those six years the locals won four district titles, with the Warren Ponies winning in 1927 and 1928. Since 1931, the locals have been a member of District 31, and the Prowlers have won 16 titles.

Results of District 31 basketball tournament finals since 1931, when the present district arrangement was set up:

KELLY'S HARDWARE
HARDWARE

CONCERNED about the ability of the awning in front of the Kelly Hardware store to hold up several hundred pounds of snow, two employees of the establishment began shoveling at 9 a.m. Friday, when the savage blizzard was at its height. The metal structure was buckling under the weight of the snow, but was relieved of the eight-foot drift before it could collapse, perhaps on the head of some unsuspecting passerby.

Sub-District BB Tourney To End In City Tonight

The blizzard-plagued and twice-postponed sub-district basketball finals will be played this evening, Monday, at the high school gymnasium here. The Fisher Flyers and the Alvarado Indians will meet in the consolation finals at 7:30 p.m. The subdistrict championship finals, between the Oslo Bobcats and the Red Lake Falls Eagles, will be played at 9 p.m. Three of these teams—the subdistrict winner, the runner-up, and the consolation winner—will enter the District 31 tournament at Grand Forks on Wednesday.

In Subdistrict first-round play here last Monday, the Fisher Flyers eliminated the defending district champion Goodridge Huskies, winning by an 88 to 69 score. In the second game on Monday's program, the Alvarado Indians held off the rallying Plummer 52 score.

In semi-finals play on Tuesday evening, Oslo, with a strong second half rally, defeated Fisher, 68 to 61. And coach Oliver Czech's Red Lake Falls squad, with center Paul Walker accounting for 29 points, easily outdistanced the Alvarado Indians, winning by a 75 to 47 score.

Delegates Return From FU Central Exchange Meet

Several Pennington county persons returned last week from St. Paul where they attended the 35th annual meeting of the Farmers Union Central exchange. Total attendance was about 5,000.

The delegation from this area included Donald Rupprecht and Robert Hamilton, Thief River Falls and Everett Fresche, St. Hilaire. They represented Farmers Union Oil company of Thief River Falls.

The delegation heard General Manager Thomas H. Steichen report that 1965 Central Exchange sales reached a record high of $118.8 million. Steichen announced that purchases by Minnesota coops, which serve 120,000 farm families, made up 21 per cent—$25.2 million—of the sales volume.

Savings, for 1965 totaling $87 million, Steichen said, will be returned to Minnesota cooperatives in proportion to their purchases. Twenty per cent of savings will be paid in cash; the balance will be distributed as patronage refund stock and allocated reserve. The local cooperative will share in this distribution.

All Schedules Needed for IRS Taxpayer Returns

Thousands of taxpayers who are entitled to tax refunds can expect delays in receiving their checks if they fail to submit required schedules with their 1965 income tax returns, according to George O. Lethert, district director of Internal Revenue.

"The income tax return is not complete when certain schedules, which are an integral part of the Form 1040, are not attached," Lethert said.

Schedules which are commonly omitted include:

Schedule B, Supplemental Schedule of Income and Retirement Income Credit, which must be completed and attached when the taxpayer reports pension and annuity, rent and royalty, or partnership, estate or trust income. This schedule is required also when taxpayers compute their Retirement Income Credit.

Schedule D, Gains and Losses from Sales or Exchanges of Property, which explains short-term or long-term capital gains or losses and other sales of property.

If the taxpayer engages in a business, Schedule C, Profit or Loss from Business or Professon, is also required.

"Returns with missing schedules must be returned to the taxpayer, or letters must be sent requesting the required schedules," Lethert stated. "This additional handling of the return causes needless delay in processing the return and mailing refund checks."

IRS urges all taxpayers to submit complete returns, with all required schedules attached. Copies of forms and schedules needed to complete a return may be obtained from local revenue service offices.

Balanced Basketball

I am not referring to the District 31 basketball tournament that begins play in Grand Forks on Wednesday, although this tourney appears to be as well-balanced as any in recent years. Just as a guess, I will pick Thief River Falls and Crookston to meet in the finals. And continuing around the Region Eight, it could be the Karlstad Rabbits and the Middle River Skippers in the District 32 finals, the Ada Vikings and the Bagley Flyers in the finals of District 30, and Bemidji against you name it, in District 29.

But in "balanced basketball" I have reference to an article by John McHale, a former basketball columnist who is concerend by the wide-spread recruiting of "house high" athletes. He wishes to remove completely the natural height advantage that one team can enjoy over another through the recruiting of taller players. States McHale: "The average height of American men is only 5' 9", and the proportion of giants, men of 6' 6" or taller is about one in 1,000. Yet in the National Basketball association, most of the players are at least 6' 6"."

McHale brought out the fact that basketball is an Olympic Games event, but according to the present rules, with its emphasis on "tall-ball" players, such countries as Japan, Thailand, Spain, Mexico and others, in which the average height is 5' 6", are greatly handicapped.

But here is how McHale's rule would apply: "Every player in a conference, federation or other class of competition would be officially registered by height according to a precisely divised scale of 'Height-Units'. Each player's individual Height-Units (0 through 12) would be displayed on the player's jersey, and a team ceiling is imposed on the total height any coach may employ in a five-player lineup.

"For example, the team ceiling for men's basketball is 30. A man whose height is 6' becomes, in Balanced Basketball, a "6". A coach can thus use five six-footers, or—according to his discretion—any other mixture of players whose height totals no more than 30.

"Balanced Basketball ends the giants' monopoly while still admitting any skyscraper who is skilled. Don't forget: the extra-tall person has as much right to play basketball as anybody. Meanwhile, performance is improved because the game is turned over exclusively to the athletes.

"Team ceilings allow coaches an intriguing degree of leeway. Should a seven-footer (a "12") be teamed up with four players who are of average height—say four "4"s (total 28)? Or will a coach conquer more rivals by inserting some unique combination of two men who are fairly tall, two who are fairly short, and one who is of average height? The best choice will be dictated by the fundamental abilities of available players by game strategy the coach favors."

McHale claims that Balanced Basketball would be a boon for international basketball, which is now monopolized by the Americans and Russians. He adds, "Basketball is too great a game to be denied to so many people."

The idea does appear to have merit, especially as it pertains to "big time" college basketball. The recruiting of talented and towering basketball players, for college play, is verging on the unethical. High school basketball does have the advantage of being limited to players residing in the area and bona fide students in the school. While there have been cases of recruiting by high schools, these instances are rare.

Former Warren Banker Sentenced For Embezzling

Richard L. Omdahl of Warren, once a candidate for Marshall county auditor, was sentenced to 18 months in prison with 15 of these months suspended and was placed on probation for three months by federal court in Minneapolis Tuesday on an embezzling charge. Omdahl pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzling from the State Bank of Warren in October 1964 before the court January 27.

The discrepancy was uncovered by the bank's own audit in June 1965, five months after Omdahl had left the bank's employment to go into private business. Sentence was delayed until a pre-sentence investigation had been carried out.

Council Awards Contracts Asks Street Sign Bids

Two contracts were awarded at Tuesday night's regular meeting of the Thief River Falls city council. The first involved purchase of four pickup trucks for general use by city departments. Bids were submitted by the Tunberg Motor company, the T & S Implement company and Northern Motors in the form of individual bids for each truck and a composite bid.

The council voted to accept the low composite bid submitted by the Tunberg company for two half-ton and two three-quarter-ton 1966 Ford pickups in the amount of $7,540. This amount was $100 less than the sum of Tunberg's individual bids.

The contract for construction of a civil defense warning station in the basement of the city auditorium was awarded to the Prichard Bros. construction company, whose bid amounted to $3,069. Cost of the project is to be borne by the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers.

A building permit amounting to $2,000 was granted to W. G. Moves for construction of a warehouse across the street from the Arctic Enterprises plant.

The city fathers voted to advertise for bids for new street signs April 12 at 4 p.m. The signs will be located on their own poles at each intersection in the city, and will be visible from all directions, thereby eliminating the necessity for drivers to turn around and see if they just passed the street they were looking for. This decision was made following two years of campaigning and two exhaustive surveys by the Jaycees.

Les Wilen, representative of the Zeco company of Minneapolis which submitted a bid for a dredge at the last council meeting, expressed dis-satisfaction with the consideration the Zeco bid had been given, and expressed doubt that the lightweight Ammco dredge purchased by the council would perform according to specifications.

Councilmen replied that they felt all bids were given due consideration at their opening the afternoon of February 23, and concluded that little would have been gained by more lengthy discussion at the regular meeting that evening, when the Ammco dredge was purchased. The council also cited an agreement with the Ammco firm that if the lightweight dredge proved insufficient for the river dredging job, the purchase could be rescinded.

A proposal by the municipal employees' union to enter into a two-year agreement if the council would increase the hourly rate by 10 cents in 1966 and 10 cents in 1967 was rejected by the council. The increase previously granted was eight cents and seven cents for the two respective years.

It was resolved to pay all regular bills and two special bills for library construction in the amount of $1,917 to Gene Holmes and $320.04 to the Hammel, Green & Abrahamson architectural firm.

RECENTLY completing her five-week flight-stewardess training course at North Central Airlines in Minneapolis, is Audrey E. Leader, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luvern Knutson of Newfolden. She is currently stationed at Chicago, Ill.

GOP Convention Thursday to Hear Harold LeVander

Interest is building for the Pennington county Republican convention to be held Thursday at the gymnasium of Washington elementary school in Thief River Falls, according to R. F. Contos, convention chairman. Guest speaker will be Harold LeVander Jr., son of the announced candidate for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

"The selection of delegates and alternates to the district and state conventions, discussion of resolutions on national and state affairs, plans for the 1966 campaign and discussion on advisory endorsement for state office are on the agenda," Contos said. The convention is called for 8 p.m. with the business meeting deferred to 9:15 p.m. due to Thursday night store openings.

"The county committee has authorized me to extend a cordial invitation to all interested people in the county to attend this convention," the chairman said. Arrangements are directed by Dr. Arnold Berg.

Area Blizzard Makes Newscasts

Last week's history-making blizzard in the Times area made news throughout the United States. John Newland of Thief River Falls received a call during the weekend from his son Stanley in Long Island, N. Y., who reported seeing films of Thief River Falls on television in that city.

According to Newland, his son said the films showed snowplows and other vehicles entering Thief River Falls from the south on highway 59 and other views of the city. Reports of television coverage of the storm in Seattle, Wash., have also been received by local residents.

Demand for the March 7 edition of the Times which carried a news story and a number of photos of the blizzard and its results was so great that all newsstand and office copies were sold by noon Tuesday. Several additional photos appear in today's edition of the Times.

County To Call Final Bonds for Courthouse

Pennington county commissioners Tuesday instructed County Auditor C. W. Rodekuhr to call all bonds remaining on the courthouse construction project and pay them by June 1. There are $20,000 in bonds due this year and an additional $20,000 due in 1967 will also be called and paid to complete the payment schedule.

Bonds for courthouse construction were issued in 1953 with the building construction in 1954 and occupied in 1955, Rodekuhr said. The same commissioners who held office when the bonds were sold are currently in office and a ceremony for burning of a facsimile of the mortgage is being planned.

Also approved by the board Tuesday was a resolution creating a county planning commission and appointing nine people to serve on that group. The commission members will meet March 31 to elect officers, adopt by-laws and conduct other business relative to initiating the organization.

Named to three-year terms on the commission were William Palmquist and Oscar Houske, St. Hilaire and Roy Lee, Thief River Falls. Holding two-year terms are Roy Belch and Dake Ayers, Thief River Falls. Appointed for one-year terms were Francis Hamerlinck, C. W. Rodekuhr and Donald L. Olson, all of Thief River Falls.

It is expected that the commission will hire a professional planner and make application for funds through the Minnesota Department of Business Development to pay for planning costs. The commission is also expected to function in a manner similar to the city planning commission created by the Thief River Falls city council several years ago.

Supt. Addresses Rotary Club

Vocational School Plans Reviewed

Summary of conditions surrounding the Thief River Falls area vocational - technical school and building possibilities were presented by M. R. Hankerson, Thief River Falls superintendent of schools, at the noon meeting of the Thief River Falls Rotary club Monday in the Elks club rooms.

Supt. Hankerson reviewed the history of the school, noting that it began in 1949 with 17 students and had 73 students enrolled when the vocational building was constructed by the local school district in 1957. At present the school has 294 students enrolled—exclusive of MDTA courses and the adult evening program.

Vocational education is growing in the state, the superintendent said, with schools being approved at Moorhead, Bemidji and Detroit Lakes and application being made by East Grand Forks. Main concern of the local school board, he said, was the sub-standard rental facilities for several departments located outside the vocational school addition.

After study of existing programs and possible future programs, he said, the board and state department of education have concurred that new construction on a site of 20 to 30 acres would be desirable. It is also recommended that the site be adjacent to the junior college site so that vocational students could take advantage of junior college course offerings.

Supt. Hankerson also noted that $100,000 of a bond issue several years ago was set aside for vocational school improvements. Federal funds are expected to be available through the state department of education to finance 50 per cent of construction costs. This would give the district approximately $200,000 in available funds for construction purposes.

In order to reach definite conclusions and assure cooperation with the state junior college board, the local school board hired the architectural firm of Jyring and Whiteman of Hibbing. This firm will assist the board in planning and providing alternatives which could be taken to assure growth of the vocational program here.

The superintendent expressed the thoughts that the $200,000 available would not be sufficient to cover land acquisition and construction. A bond issue of several hundred thousand dollars might be needed, he said, but funds available through the department of education would approximately double the amount of any local bond issue passed.

Eighty per cent of the students currently enrolled in the vocational school currently come from outside the local district, and their tuition is paid by the state, Hankerson added. Since tuition is based on actual cost—and cost includes bond retirement—the tuition payments would aid substantially in retiring any bond issue that might be required for construction.

The superintendent proposed a three-phase building program. The first would take care of existing rentals in new construction on a site acquired by the board. Phase two would be for addition of new departments and the third phase would (or could) include present departments in the vocational school addition to make that building available for senior high school classes.

"Current school census figures show that we could have space problems in the senior high school in the next six or seven years," Hankerson said.

The speaker told the Rotarians he would recommend a bond issue to do "as much as we possibly can" for vocational school facilities. He said that time was extremely important, particularly for acquiring a site. "We can't get a money commitment until the site is available," he concluded.

Questions asked by Rotarians in attendance concluded the program.

Good Management Important Says SBA Director

Henry A. Sieben, regional director of the Minneapolis office, Small Business administration, announced that during the past year 1,080 owners and employees of small business firms attended 27 business management seminars sponsored by the SBA in cooperation with Chambers of Commerce and educational institutions in the area.

"Although this program is not as well known to owners of small firms as some other SBA programs," Sieben said, "it is nevertheless one of our most successful programs in helping owners of small business firms to become better business managers. Because of extremely complicated and sophisticated methods of doing business today, more emphasis is being placed by industry on professional management. To meet this challenge, owners of small firms must keep abreast of the latest methods used in managing a business."

"The day has long passed when an individual could start a business with little management or technical knowhow and expect to succeed," according to Sieben. "In observing the thousands of small firms that have done business with the SBA, one characteristic stands out in the success of any business—good management."

Sieben said, "about 90 per cent of all business failures today can be attributed directly to poor management practices." He mentioned that "the SBA administrative management program was designed to help owners of small firms become better managers through seminars that are being conducted by the SBA with Chambers of Commerce, educational institutions and other civic groups. These conferences range from the basic fundamentals of management to highly sophisticated management seminars on the development, design and marketing of new products."

Sieben said that "many of the business management seminars are conducted in rural areas where small firms do not live close to large metropolitan areas where they could get this kind of help." As a result SBA is using the approach of bringing professional management experts into the back yards, so to speak, of our smaller rural communities.

Firms that are interested in attending management seminars being conducted by the SBA are urged to contact the Minneapolis regional office, the address of which is 603 Second Avenue South.

Boat Owners Must Renew Licenses

Minnesota boat owners today were reminded that they must have a valid license on their boat before they put it in the water this spring. Milt Johnson, state boat and water safety director, said all licenses which expired Dec. 31, 1965, must be renewed before the boat is used this year.

"The spring break-up isn't far off", Johnson said, "and the fishing season opens May 14. Those who wait until the last minute to renew their licenses may find they haven't received them when they want to use their boats."

He pointed out that a certain amount of time is required to process renewal applications. Many persons who delayed too long last year found they had not received their renewed license when they wanted to open the fishing season.

Johnson said renewal notices were sent out early this year. There is no reason, he said why boat owners should not have a valid license on their watercraft before they wish to put it in the water. The boat license law will be strictly enforced this year, he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Daryl Rude (Margie Larson) and family of St. Paul Park spent last week at the Irven Larson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Nelson visited at the Arthur Conklin home on Sunday evening.

Sunday afternoon visitors at the home of Mrs. Mabel Brattell were Mrs. Elder Engen Jr. and Mrs. Howard Rood.

SCENIC views were also left in the wake of the two-day storm which paralyzed the Times area Thursday and Friday. For those who could look at the huge snowdrifts with an eye for the beauty of nature, there were some winter wonderland views as the sun shone brightly Saturday. This photo was taken of Crocker av. N. just off First street on Saturday morning. The evergreen trees are heavily laden with snow on the leeward side where force of the wind was broken by the trees themselves. Snow also clung to buildings, posts, fences, railings and other stationary objects where they created a vacuum as the wind swept around them.

The Library Corner

by Flora Allison

Perhaps we have been slightly partial to fiction in the preceding columns; there are really so many worthwhile non-fiction books coming off the presses, some of them so pertinent to our times and of such value to all citizens in a democracy, we should not be slighting them. There's the Peace Corps to be considered, for example. "Peace Corps?" some people are still saying, "what is the Peace Corps, anyway? Just another rat hole down which to pour public funds?" Is it just another wild dream of a better world, or is it the sanest approach yet to God-given commands to feed the hungry, shelter the homeless, and comfort the afflicted? This is answered in easy-to-read style in "The Peace Corps, a Pictorial History." With an introduction by Sargent Shriver, its first head, and narration by Aaron J. Erickson, it attempts to evaluate the accomplishments of the Corps to date. Here is shown in action the hand of sympathy extended to the hungering world, with concrete examples, of what it has done toward helping underprivileged nations to struggle out of the grinding poverty which they have known for too long, and into the warmth of a better life. "To the Peace Corps With Love" is a factual account of the two-year service with the Corps of the author, Arnold Zeitlin, in the country of Ghana, West Africa. It is quite an eye-opener. "The Barios of Manta," by Brooks, reveals the work of the Corps in South America. . .where various ideologies battle for the minds of men, and where the tide of communism in the western hemisphere may well be contained in present boundaries, if we use the proper approach, or spread its menace to eventually engulf all of us, if we do not seize the initiative by offering help to the impoverished millions there. The contention is that hungry people are discontented people and that those who offer the best hope out of their dilemma will win them over. See this belief translated into action; read about it. Familiarize yourself with it and decide for yourself on the merits of the program.

Health is another growing concern of the people, and to assist in the health care of the community, the public library has long been adding books on the subject. Lately acquired are several worthy of special mention. "Diabetes as a Way of Life" by T. S. Danowski, explains the roles of the patient and doctor keeping the disease under control. Touched upon in layman's language is the use of insulin, the special social aspects of raising children who are diabetics, and fitting them into a normal pattern of life in the community; pregnancy in the diabetic, and a lot of other problems faced by those suffereing from the disease, and by their families and doctors. Understanding these problems and facing them squarely will initiate diabetics into the confident atmosphere necessary to leading useful normal lives.

"Plant Drugs that Changed the World" by a highly-qualified writer in this field, Norman Taylor, is the amazing and actually enthrelling account of drugs that literally changed the concept of treatment for a number of once-baffling ailments. The autumn crocus provided a treatment for gout; foxgloves provide digitalis for heart disease; and other plants are sources of cocaine and morphine for anaesthesia, quinine for malaria, ephedrine for hay fever, and this is only the beginning of the list. Read the book, and recall the herbs and roots the Indians and the pioneers claimed as being of medicinal value. You'll be amazed at the know-how of the primitive people. In this vein, a book called "Doctors of the American Frontier" is crammed with amazing, often shocking, and sometimes amusing stories of the days before the modern hospital with its sterile facilities, its functional instuments, modern mercy in action in the field of pain relief. Read of the gulf between today's methods and the almost unbelievable agony of the patient in the pre-anaesthetic age, where a door or saw horses served as operating tables, where bones were set with a piece of string and a flat iron; where cholera, a dragon to be feared, was nevertheless sought out and countered with a passon; where "the quality of mercy" WAS strained, often beyond the limits of human endurance, because there was no other way, because the only alternative to the hideous suffering often endured was death. The hospital of today will seem like Utopia by comparison. You'l be glad you weren't born a century earlier after reading this book.

The horse lover comes in for his share of attention in a new book, "The Complete Book of Horses and Ponies," by Margaret Self. You may be a tenderfoot where horses are concerend but studying this book will help you become less tender in the saddle! This is the kind of guideline many lovers of horses have been waiting for and asking about, especially beginning riders. Many angles of the business of owning a mount are adequately covered, from pointers on buying and selling horses, to discussion on various breeds and types; behavior, first aid, training, handling, riding, and jumping and hunting fun are all explained. There are rules and suggestions for caring for and understanding your horse, and there are diagrams and instructions for training in the execution of musical rides, mounted square dancing, and the like. It's a literal gold mine of information.

Of passing interest to all men, especially, and to many of the women who love them, are new works on Veterans of World Wars I and I. And for your funny-bone, whether you are male or female, the rib-tickler by Hank Ketcham, "I Wanna Go Home," the travelog with a difference in which the Ketchums, Hank and the frau, live it up, or try to, in the fun spots of Europe. Really, you never had it so funny. . .It'll soon be on our shelves, and should be one of the fastest-aging books in a long time, it'll be used that often.

Sheriff's Academy Is Formed in Minnesota

A Minnesota sheriffs' academy has been established within the last year, according to an article in the latest issue of the "Minnesota Sheriff," official organ of the sheriffs' association.

Sheriff Arilis G. Schmitz of Traverse county, president of the academy, states that law enforcement—just as electronics, physics, engineering and medicine—is complex. In fact—progress in these other fields has added to the complexities of the law man's job—therefore he requires additional special training.

There are 87 sheriffs in Minnesota, all of whom will benefit. Additionally, all law men in the state will have an opportunity to take this highly specialized training. Town and village police and constables are particulary encouraged to attend.

A unique feature of the academy will be that it will take the training to the law man throughout the state. The individual law man will be able to pursue the entire course and at the same time be at his proper duty station.

This mobile training plan will make it possible for all Minnesota law men to be properly trained and competent to handle the many and varied problems which beset the present day law enforcement officer.

The training program presently being finalized by the academy board is broad in scope, encompassing all of the necessary skills, responsibilities and requirements of the law man.

The scientific intricacies of finger-printing, foreclosures, serving of summons and riot control are a few of the many subjects in law enforcement which will be part of the total training to be offered by the Minnesota sheriffs' academy.

Sheriff Schmitz expects the academy to be fully operational within the next few months. Questions by law enforcement officers should be addressed to the Minnesota State Sheriffs' association, Griggs-Midway Building, Saint Paul, Minnesota 55104.

April 1 Deadline To Order State Nursery Trees

No orders for tree seedling from state forestry nurseries will be accepted after April 1, the Minnesota conservation department announced today.

Only four species of trees are still on hand in quantity at nurseries, the department said, and these stocks are expected to dwindle rapidly to fill orders received before the April 1 deadline. Species still available are Norway pine, ponderosa pine, jack pine and Colorado spruce.

Applications for tree seedlings are available at all state forestry division field offices, county agents, ASCS offices and Division of Forestry, Centennial Building, St. Paul. Minimum tree orders accepted are for 500 trees with no maximum limit.

Prices for trees are $10 per thousand. Seedlings may be used for an conservation or reforestration purpose. The three state forest nurseries are expected to ship approximately 25 million trees this spring to private purchasers and public agencies.

Restrictions On Several Highways Go Into Effect

Higher temperatures with spring break-up have made it necessary to place seasonal load restrictions in effect in zones three and four, according to the Minnesota highway department.

Highways will be restricted between highway 12 from the east to west border and north to include highways 210 from Duluth through highway 10 at Moorhead. Zones one and two from the Iowa border north to highway 12 were previously restricted on March 3.

Posted signs govern the load restriction on each section of highway, the department reports. Vehicles operating on nonrestricted roads are subject to the usual statutory weight limitations. No permits for overweight axle loads exceeding legal or posted axle weights will be issued during the period of load restrictions as they become effective in the various zones.

Heart Association Offers Fellowship Research Program

For the ninth consecutive year, the Minnesota Heart Association is sponsoring a fellowship program for Minnesota high school students who have demonstrated a high interest and scholarship in science.

Reuben Berman, M. D., president of the Minnesota Heart association, in announcing the program, said, "The purpose of these fellowship grants is to stimulate interest in careers in the health sciences. Each candidate who is selected will have an opportunity to work two months with an outstanding investigator at either the University of Minnesota medical school in Minneapolis, or at the Mayo foundation in Rochester, during the summer of 1966".

These students will be assigned projects, awarded $300 and an additional $200 will be provided for room and board for those who must live away from home.

"The need for physicians in this country is increasing every year," Dr. Berman continued. "I think many young men and women have been directed into the field of useful medical research by their exposure at a young age, to the stimulating experiences available in various laboratories. These summer fellowships to young Minnesotans are made possible by the Heart Fund conducted throughout the month of February."

Any Minnesota student who is a junior or senior in high school during the 1965-66 school year may apply. A Minnesota Heart association committee composed of representatives from the University of Minnesota medical school and Mayo Foundation will select the candidates.

Those interested in applying should consult their high school counselor or write the Minnesota Heart Association, 1821 University Avenue, St. Paul, 55104.

Grygla Woman Gives Impressions of Storm

By Vera Johnson Rupe
Grygla, Minnesota

This is my first winter in this North Country for many years. I had almost forgot what it was like. But there were memories,—of going to school,—a frozen cheek and the sun spots that appeared like three suns,—on a cold day. There were other winter memories too,—the beauty of snow,—the evergreen boughs sagging under a blanket of white and the radiance of a white birch,—they still fascinate me.

And today,—March 3rd, 1966—we have a March snowstorm. It started late last evening, a strong whirling wind and snow that continued throughout the night.

The towering black spruce that is our landmark, leans slightly to the northeast but today the fierce wind from that direction has made it look like it had almost magically become a straight stately tree again.

During this winter of extreme cold and deep snow, we have fed the wild birds. We put out food and seed on a bench near the east window. As soon as it is daylight, the chickadees come in little flocks, while some are eating, others wait patiently on the lilac bushes nearby.

The last few days had seemed so springlike—I was not aware that my supply of bird food was low. But we had bacon grease and peanut butter so spread that on the branches of the lilacs and oatmeal and cracked corn in the trays on the bench. There is much coming and going, and a few other birds venture in besides the chickadees, —There is a jay's blue flash as it darts down for a bit of corn. And a Canada jay too. It did not stay long, maybe we did not have anything here to its liking. We sometimes have to go out and scoop out the snow with a spoon, that keeps filling up the trays.

One little downy woodpecker is out on the lilac bush hanging onto a dangling piece of suet, swaying and tossing with the wind, clinging tenaciously, its little iridescent red headspot bobbing back and forth, pecking diligently at the flimsy network of suet.

"King" Storm is still with us this afternoon, visibility becoming less and less as the snow is swept up and about in an eddying motion. Our woods to the north are a faint gray, only occasionally,—there are momentary outlines of black spruce rearing their heads above the bare deciduous trees.

Our "little house" bird feeder lies awry and deserted on the snowbank, under the elm tree, blown down by the wind, a harmless "casualty" of this storm. When better days come, it will again swing gaily from a branch of the elm. This is the nuthatches favorite tree, but at no time have we seen them out during this turbulent storm.

The snow paths are all drifted over now, there is a sameness all about. It has been said, "at the height of a great storm all men are equal," and it also has been said, "that Nature is an impartial leveler".

Darkness is descending now, the wind continues to moan and sigh and the various sounds that are a component part of a violent storm are everywhere.

There are no little birds now,—no not one, they have gone to their "homes" in the woods nearby, for warmth and protection on a wild night like this.

Snowbound and Isolated—March 4, 1966.

A report has come over the radio that this is the worst storm for this part of the country since 1888. It struck on Wednesday, March 2nd, 1966. It has constantly gained in momentum and today,—the outdoors is a mass of swirling and blowing snow, winds gusting and subsiding at intervals, sometimes it is hard to tell when its snowing or just snow blowing. But when you look at the huge drifts, there is very little doubt but its been snowing and also blowing.

This is the second day and it is still continuing in all its fury; we are comfortable though, as a log house is certainly a staunch haven in weather like we have had this winter. Its sturdy logs can withstand severe cold and forceful winds with hardly a tremor.

If this "old" house could talk, it probably could tell of many bad storms and cold winters but none equal to this one. The big spruce, —a pioneer too from the turning of the century, has withstood the elements from time to time, and when I watch the tossing and twisting and writhing of its branches, in this furious storm, I wonder can this be "it",—and if it should go down like its "sister" tree,—a few years back, it would leave a lonely and empty place against the sky.

A few brave little chickadees keep coming singly or in pairs to snatch up a little something from the food trays. The little red squirrel is out too, its tail tossing and twitching, the wind parting its fur to the very roots, as it eats its corn.

The drifts are becoming higher and higher in places, in front of our living room window there is one, that has the likeness of a miniature mountain, now reaching the center dividing bar of our window.

We are near the wilderness here and I think of the many animals out there, wondering if they have found shelter under cedar or spruce boughs or in other secluded places.

It is late evening now and the winds seem to be diminshing slightly, but when I look out at the big spruce, its tip is still very sharply bent towards the southwest and I wonder if there is a "higher" wind,—there is also a faint glimpse of the moon at times.

We had spent one summer here in 1964 but wanted to see what a winter was like up here too. We are not disappointed, for if this is the way this cold and stormy winter was to be—then—its for us too. And we have experienced "history" and at this very moment we are living it—now we know what it is like to be snowbound.

But most of all—I think I'll always remember the wild roaring in the trees, a mighty force—as if it could be a winter "tornado".

SNOWBANKS grew to mountainous proportions in all parts of Thief River Falls during last week's three-day blizzard, which proved to be the worst in recorded history in this area. This snowdrift came about mostly by natural causes, but snow shovels added to it as a backyard sidewalk and driveway were cleared. The photo was taken Saturday morning from an alley between Markley and St. Paul avenues. No snowplows had yet reached any alleys in residential areas; this job was done by main strength and awkwardness.

Board of Health Approves Revision Of Hospital Plan

Minnesota state board of health, upon recommendation of its state advisory council on hospital construction, has approved the 1965-66 revision of the Minnesota hospital plan. This represents the seventeenth annual revision which also incorporates the 1964 amendments to the Hill-Burton law. The program has been extended for five years, to June 30, 1969.

The new provisions also require modernization surveys of all hospitals and related facilities. All of the general hospital surveys have been completed and the nursing homes throughout the state are now being studied. The chronic disease hospital and nursing home construction categories have been combined into a single category called "long-term care." The new amendments also require that at least half the members of the state advisory council on hospital construction be representatives of consumer groups and Minnesota's council now consists of 36 members, with 19 consumer representatives.

The state plan is a public document which serves as a guide for the devlopment of patient care services through the construction and modernization of hospitals and related medical facilities throughout Minnesota. It presents a coordinated, comprehensive program for the orderly development of needed health services and facilities designed to assure high quality patient care, the department of health states.

It also serves as the basis for the allocation of funds for modernization and new construction as made available through the provisions of P.L. 88-443, the Hospital and Medical Facilities Amendments of 1964.

HAPPY HOMEMAKING

Shopping for chocolate is more interesting when you know how basic forms differ. All chocolates are made from the small dark brown cocoa bean. It's the variety that makes the difference, as well as how it's roasted and with what it's combined. Here are some forms in wich it appears on your grocer's shelf.

Unsweetenend chocolate, made from shelled cocoa beans roasted and ground. It is more than 50 per cent fat and is used primarily for cooking.

Semisweet chocolate, unsweetened chocolate with sugar, cocoa butter (a fat of the cocoa bean) and vanillin (a vanilla-type flavoring) added.

Sweet chocolate, made of the same ingredients as semisweet, but in different proportions. It is sold in square and bar form for cooking and for eating.

Milk chocolate contains the ingredients found in sweet chocolate plus milk solids. Other ingredients are added to make various candy bars.

Semi-liquid or pre-melted chocolate is unsweetened cocoa combined with vegetable oil and packaged in foil or plastic envelopes.

Cocoa powder is unsweetened chocolate with most of the cocoa butter removed. The two basic types are: American processed and Dutch processed. To the Dutch type an alkali is added during processing to produce a darker color and stronger flavor. Dutch processed is not necessairly imported. Some instant cocoa contains dry milk solids and sugar.

Chocolate syrup is made of unsweetened cocoa, sugar, glucose, salt, vanillin and water.

Chocolate sauce contains the same ingredients as the syrup, plus milk, cream or butter.

To substitute cocoa for one ounce of chocolate, use three tablespoons of cocoa plus 1 tablespoon of shortening. To substitute unsweetened chocolate for sweet or semisweet add one to two teaspoons of sugar per ounce of chocolate. Specialists at the U. S. department of agriculture say this will work with most recipes but it is best not to substitute.

Don't Substitute Home-Soured Cream for Commercial

There's a difference in the fat content of commercial sour cream and home-soured cream. Extension nutritionists at the University of Minnesota point out that one should not be substituted for the other in recipes. Commercial sour cream is similar to coffee cream in richness, but home-soured cream is likely to be more like whipping cream—twice as rich as the commercial product. For that reason they're not interchangeable in recipes.

Don't Beat Egg Whites In Plastic Bowl

You've seen angel food cake directions that caution you not to beat egg whites in a plastic bowl. The reason? Plastic is a porous material and tends to hold oil or fat. Even small particles of an oily substance trapped in the pores of the bowl can cause egg white to break down. Furthermore, the agitation of the beater may tend to chip off tiny pieces of the plastic.

More Men Shopping

More men are shopping these days — partly, perhaps, because their wives are working. A study by one supermarket chain shows that men participate in a third of all purchases made in their stores.

Studies show, too, that men spend more in the store for "discretionary" items. A survey by an advertising agency revealed that when men shopped alone, three out of five bought more than they were asked to get. In another survey it was found that when the male was along, the average expenditure was 50 per cent greater than when the woman shopped by herself.

When the husband goes along, the couple tends to spend more time—as well as money—in the store. Thus they become prospects for additional impulse purchases.

U of M Dean Discusses Agricultural Policies

Future U. S. agricultural policy must be fashioned in a paradoxical situation which involves an "embarrassment of plenty" at home while much of the world is hungry. S. O. Berg, dean of the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture, emphasized the world food situation and its effect on U. S. policy in addressing the Delaware Bankers' association.

Berg noted the contradiction of restricting agricultural production at home while millions of people are hungry throughout the world. Any solution to U. S. agricultural problems must recognize fully the continuing U. S. role in the worldwide effort to overcome the widening gap between population and food supply, he said.

This problem will become greater and greater as many underdeveloped nations find it increasingly difficult to feed themselves. In fact, per capita food output in many countries is continuing to fall, he declared.

In contrast, certain regions of the world — United States, Canada, Western Europe, Australia and New Zealand — have powerful, productive economies. These areas utilize modern technology through an educated rural population. Yet these food-surplus regions include only one-fifth of the world population. The remaining four-fifths live in the shadow of near starvation. Most of the world must do a day's work on one half the daily diet of 3,200 calories enjoyed in the United States and Canada.

The situation is complicated because the staggering population surge will push numbers up 150 per cent by the year 2,000 in the less developed areas where food supply is already restricted. The population in the well-fed areas, on the other hand, will increase only 40 per cent.

This is the backdrop against which U. S. agricultural policy must be fashioned, Berg said. The restriction of production at home must be viewed in light of the millions of people who face nutritionally inadequate diets. While U. S. agriculture can help overcome their plight, extensive efforts must be undertaken with food-short countries to boost their production.

Even though Americans are the best fed people in the world, there still exist substantial pockets of hunger and poverty within our own borders. We must therefore set our own house in order, Berg emphasized, and, at the same time, take affirmative action in seeking solutions to the world's food and fiber needs. Despite the great era of prosperity at home, the income of American farmers still lags behind that of other groups of citizens.

Speaking more specifically about the effects of the scientific and technical "revolution" on the nation's farmers, Berg pointed out that American farm productivity has increased by more than 40 per cent over the past two decades. Each farm worker now produces for himself and 33 others.

The use of capital inputs has doubled nationally in the past 20 years, while labor inputs have decreased by one-half. In Minnesota, for example, during the same 20-year span "the number of farmers in full-time employment dropped by almost a third, while the number of farms decreased by over a fourth. Farm size went up a fourth."

IRS Answers Queries On Federal Taxation

These questions most frequently asked by taxpayers on federal income tax matters with authoritative answers are provided by the office of the district director of Internal Revenue, St. Paul.

Q—What taxes can be listed if we decide to itemize our deductions?

A—You may deduct real estate and personal property taxes, state and local income and gasoline taxes, and general sales taxes which you paid in 1965. You cannot deduct automobile license or driver's fees, any federal excise taxes or social security taxes withheld by your employer.

Q—Can I claim an exemption for my child who is a student?

A—Parents can claim a dependency exemption for children who were full-time students during 1965. To be entitled to the dependency exemption, the parents must furnish more than one-half of the child's support for the entire year. Even if the child works part time during 1965 and filed his own federal income tax return, the exemption is allowable if the support test is fulfilled.

Q—What income must I report on my federal tax return.

A—You must include as gross income all income received, from whatever source derived, and in whatever form received. This includes salaries and wage, bonuses and commissions, fees, tips and gratuities, dividends and interest, profit from a business or profession or partnership profits, gains from the sale or exchange of real estate, securities of property, as well as pensions and annuities, rent and royalties and prizes and awards. Certain income is specifically exempt by law, such as gifts and inheritances, life insurance proceeds pay on death, interest on state and municipal bonds, social security benefit payments and benefits paid to veterans and their families by the Veterans administration.

Q—I have been claiming a dependency exemption for my father for several year. He became 65 years of age last year. Do I claim an extra $600 exemption for him?

A—No. There is only one $600 exemption allowable for each dependent, regardless of age.

Q—I have filed my 1965 income tax return. How soon will I receive my refund?

A—Generally, it takes approximately six weeks to process a refund return. However, any error on the reutrn will delay your refund. Among the most common errors are failure to enclose Forms W-2, to report social security numbers and to sign the return. If your return is selected for prerefund examination, the refund would be delayed also.

Q—Can I exclude $200 in dividends if my wife and I file a joint return?

A—On joint returns, each taxpayer may exclude up to $100 on dividends owned either jointly or individually. The $200 exclusion of dividend income on a joint return applies only where the husband receives $100 or more and the wife receives $100 or more in dividends. If all the dividend income is received by either the husband or wife, the exclusion is limited to $100, even if a joint return is filed.

Q—What tax form should I use in filing my 1965 return?

A—If your income was under $10,000, and consisted entirely of wages reported on Form W-2, and other wages, interests and dividends did not total $200, the easiest way to file is to use the punchcard Form 1040A. Taxpayers who have income of $10,000 or more or who desire to itemize their deductions, claim exclusions or tax credits, should use the longer Form 1040.

CONSERVATION News & Notes

by Bob Farmes
Area Game Manager
Division of Game & Fish—Minn. Conservation Dep't.

One of the most frequent questions we are asked is, "When are we going to have a moose hunting season" or "Are we going to have a moose hunting season next year?" There is no question but that there is considerable interest in the possibility of having a chance to hunt moose in Minnesota. I have talked with a large number of individuals and groups about this subject and the vast majority favor a limited type of hunt.

However, before we can have moose hunting in Minnesota, there must be legislation passed to allow such a season. The conservation department does not have the authority to simply declare a moose season because present law allows a season only in the Northwest Angle and within three miles of the Canadian boundary. Obviously this would not be a satisfactory area in which to hunt moose, since most of the moose population in Minnesota is considerably south of this area.

The conservation department does recommend a limited moose hunting season in Minnesota. Our moose population has increased quite remarkably in the last few years to the extent that overbrowsing and range deterioration are becoming more and more common. It is obvious that this increase can not go on indefinitely and, unless the hunter is allowed to harvest some of these animals, they will be lost in increasing numbers to other causes such as disease, accident, poaching and—if range deterioration is allowed to go far enough—to starvation. It would be good game management to replace some of this type of loss with a legal hunting take.

The conservation department has recommended legislation which would allow controlled moose hunting seasons. In 1965 the department proposed issuing 1,000 licenses to residents 16 years of age or older, at a fee of $15 each. Each license applicant could apply singly or in groups of two or three and each successful applicant would be issued a license. A drawing would be held to determine successful applicants.

A nine-day season from December 4 to December 11 was proposed. Seven hundred licenses were to be issued for northeastern Minnesota and 300 for northwestern Minnesota. Each of these two zones were broken down to areas in which a certain number of licenses would be issued from the total out of each zone. This would assure proper distribution of the kill.

It is difficult to estimate what the kill in northwestern Minnesota might be out of the 300 licenses because hunting success depends so much on weather. However, it would be my guess that in this part of the state success would run 50 per cent or better. Thus we would kill 150 or perhaps 200 moose in all of Northwestern Minnesota and that would be a small percentage of the total population. Future seasons would depend on the moose population and experience gained in the first season.

The legislation did not become law and, of course, there was no moose hunting. I expect that similar legislation will be proposed for the next legislative session in 1967.

The Minnesota conservation department has recently published an extremely interesting bulletin entitled "Big Game in Minnesota". It is easy, enjoyable reading that I am sure most hunters and others interested in wildlife will find worth reading. It includes chapters on the white-tailed deer, mule deer, moose, elk, caribou, bison, antelope and black bear. Written by department biologists, it is a result of 30 years of big game research in Minnesota.

Fur Buyers Pay Up to $10 for Wild Fox Pelts

Minnesota game and fish division said today it has learned that some fur buyers are paying up to $10 per fox for animals not even skinned.

A report from western Minnesota indicated that about the same price was being paid for fox killed by shotguns as for trapped animals. Those taken with varmit rifles or heavy caliber guns were being purchased at lower prices.

Fox prices have risen from about $6 earlier this winter to their present high. Last year, and for many preceding years, fox hunters had to be satisfied with the three or four dollars received as bounty fee.

A new women's fashion fad calling for fur trim on hats and coats is said to be responsible for the upswing in fox fur prices.

State to Sell Confiscated Furs On Sealed Bids

Sale of furs confiscated by state game wardens will be held in St. Paul Wednesday, March 16, the Minnesota conservation department has announced. The sale will be conducted at the regional fisheries headquarters, 1200 Warner Road.

Included in the sale are 150 beaver, 100 fisher, 200 mink, 600 muskrat, 22 otter and 80 raccoon. Furs have been graded and consolidated into different lots.

Furs will be on display from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Sales will be made on a sealed bid basis with the bids opened promptly at 2:30 p.m.

Purchasers must have a 1966 fur buyer's license in possession. Successful bidders must make payment for all furs purchased and remove them from the premises immediately after the sale.

Oslo Wins Sub-District Championship In TRF

The Oslo Bobcats, coached by Orvis Bergman, won the sub-district 31 basketball tournament played here by defeating the Red Lake Falls Eagles, 62 to 55, in the championship finals Monday night. Oslo will begin play in the District 31 tournament at Grand Forks this afternoon when, at 2 p.m., they meet the Crookston Pirates. Red Lake Falls, as the sub-district runner-up, will play the East Grand Forks Green Wave at 3:30 p.m. today.

The Oslo team, champions of the Polar conference, and rated as the sub-district's top-ranked team, had difficulty in pulling away from the hustling Red Lake Falls Eagles. And it was only in the late minutes of the fourth period that the Bobcats were able to gain a point "cushion".

Oslo, with well-balanced scoring, held a 16 to 12 first period lead, but coach Oliver Czech's Eagles rallied for 19 points in the second period and trailed by one point, 32 to 31, at the intermission.

Contributing heavily to the Oslo point-total was the Bobcats' accuracy from the free-throw line. In the first half, Oslo converted on eight of ten tries from the gift-shot line.

In the third period Oslo's Dale Michalski lofted in three field goals and added a pair of free throws, and center Greg Farder, who played a fine all-round game for the winners, chipped in with a pair of field goals and a free throw. The Bobcats, outpointing the Eagles 18 to 11 in the period, moved into a 50 to 42 lead.

But Red Lake Falls, with Brent Mead sparking the offense, and burly Paul Walker notching a pair of field goals, pared that lead to three points before Oslo recovered control of the game and came on to win by seven points, 62 to 55.

Michalski, with 19 points, shared the game's scoring honors with the Eagles' Mead. Red Lake Falls' Walker scored 16 points, while Greg Farder of Oslo tallied 15 points.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

Another State Champion

When Bemidji's Jerry Lee scored a 3 to 1 decision over Keith Gunderson of Brooklyn Center in the finals of the 154-pound division in the state high school wrestling tournament in Minneapolis on Saturday night, it marked the second time in the comparatively short history of wrestling that a Region Eight wrestler has won a state title. The Prowlers' Joe Taylor, in 1964, was the first of this region's grapplers to win a state title. That year Joe won the 165-pound championship.

Except for Lee's march through the 154-pound class, the Region Eight representatives didn't fare too well in the state meet. Losing first-round matches were Doyle Himmelright of Bemidji in the 95-pound class; Steve Furuseth of Prowlers who dropped a 9 to 6 decision to Tom Helmer of Coon Rapids in the 112-pound match; Ken Esplan of Blooming Prairie who decisioned the Prowler's Rocky Wilson, 10 to 2, in a 120-pound match; Rod Collver of the Prowlers who dropped a 7 to 2 decision to Ken Sweet of Hopkins in a 133-pound match; Maynard Midthun defeated Greenbush's Gary Kiemetson on forfeit in the 145-pound division; John Anderson of Blue Earth gained a 4 to 1 decision over Bemidji's Jim Ritchie in the 165-pound class; and Crookston's Kent Charron who lost by a 9 to 3 decision to Paul Kenady of South St. Paul in a 175-pound match.

Region Eight wrestlers who won their first-round matches, in addition to Lee, were Rick Elfering of Mahnomen who gained a 9 to 0 decision over Willmar's Marv Rutch in a 112-pound match. Elfering lost his second-round match, by a 9 to 7 score, to Ken Tinquist of Grand Rapids. Bemidji's Keith Johanneson defeated Tony Rauenhorst of Olivia, 2 to 0, in a first-round match, and then was decisioned, 10 to 3, by Dale Richter of Chatfield.

Dennis Cheney of Park Rapids won a 4-1 decision over Mark Pozzini of Stillwater in a first-round 138-pound match. Cheney was pinned by Albert Lea's Ken Steneel in a second-round match. And in the heavyweight division, Mahnomen's Jon Wolbeck scored a decision over Mike Ihlbards of Waseca in a first-round encounter, but then lost a 1 to 0 decision to Bryan Schultz in a second-round match.

Rod Collver was the lone Prowler to move into the consolation wrestling and he won his first match, scoring a 5-3 decision over Grand Rapids' Dave Ahonen. Collver lost his second consolation match, dropping a 6-0 decision to Roger Birdsall of Spring Lake Park.

Wolbeck of Mahnomen, in a consolation match, dropped a 6 to 1 decision to Gary Leuer of Wayzata.

Albert Lea, with a total of 44 points, won the team title in the two-day tournament. The tourney attracted 17,638 fans, setting a new record. And it's a fact that wrestling is one of the fastest-growing of high school sports. There is plenty of action for the fans, and the rules and the point-awards are easy to learn and to follow.

Sentiment for the Pirates

Surprisingly, there is considerable local sentiment in favor of the Crookston Pirates in the District 31 basketball tournament that opened today at Grand Forks. The semi-finals and finals will be played on Monday and Tuesday, March 14 and 15.

And some of this sentiment is caused by the fact that coach Craig Johnson's Pirates, in two games, played the Bemidji Lumberjacks on near-even terms. The Pirates defeated the 'Jacks in an early-season game played at Crookston, and just the other week, in a game at Bemidji, the Lumberjacks just barely held off the rallying Pirates to win by two points. It is the belief that Crookston has the all-round speed to beat Bemidji. Conceding, of course, that Bemidji will win the District 29 title.

But first the Pirates will have to get through the district tournament, and that won't be too easy. East Grand Forks is in the Crookston bracket, and coach Larry Selk's Green Wave already has a pair of wins over Crookston this season.

It will be an interesting district tournament, and, as always, plenty of excitement.

American Curling Champions

The Dr. Joe Zbacnik rink of Fargo, N. D., won the United States curling title in the bonspiel that was concluded at Hibbing last weekend. The North Dakota foursome defeated the Minnesota rink, 5-3, in the final round of competition.

The Canadian curling tournament called the MacDonald Brier, is being held this week in Halifax, Nova Scotia. Eleven of Canada's top rinks, (from all 10 provinces plus a rink from northern Ontario) will be competing. And the winner will join the United States, Scotland, Sweden and perhaps a couple other rinks, in play for the world's curling title, the Scotch Cup. This 'spiel will be held in Vancouver in a couple of weeks.

Last year, to the dismay of our Canadian friends, the Bud Somerville rink of Superior, Wis., won the world's title. Let's hope that the North Dakota foursome can make a successful defense of that title.

Speed Oats

Al Holzknecht apparently has a supply of "speed oats" on hand for his stable of horses out in Arizona. Received a clipping advising that Al's horse, "Final Jest" had won the eighth race on the program at Turf Paradise on March 2. The purse was $1,100. And Al's horse paid $9.80, 4.20 and 3.20.

If it makes us feel any better, the weather out there on that date was cloudy and raining, and the temperature was 45 degrees.

SLIPPING past Dale Michalski of Oslo, Brent Mead of the Red Lake Falls Eagles goes up for a left-handed layup in the championship game of the sub-district 31 tournament concluded in Thief River Falls Monday evening. Mead and Michalski tied for high point honors in the game with 19 points each. Awaiting a possible rebound are Doug Farder (30) and Greg Farder (12) of Oslo and Mike Anderson of the Eagles. Oslo won the sub-district championship 62-55.

Sportsmen Clubs Organize Deer Aid Program for Area

Sportsmen clubs in Pennington and neighboring counties are organizing a rehabilitation program for deer in the area which are in danger of starvation due to extremely deep snow.

Robert Farmes, area game biologist, said the deer were weak before the recent blizzard and snow in the woods is now about 40 inches deep. Eighteen inches of snow is the maximum depth that can accumulate before deer have trouble finding food, according to the conservation department.

The Pennington County Sportsmen club has made plans to aid the deer through contributions toward hiring a bulldozer to construct deer trails and also by cutting of browse. Anyone wishing to participate in the brush cutting is asked to meet in front of the Times office at 9 a.m. Saturday. Those who own axes, brush hooks, snowshoes or snowmobiles, are asked to bring them along.

One Case Tried In City Court

Only one case was tried by Judge Stanley N. Mortenson in Monday's session of Thief River Falls municipal court. Curtis Haugen of Strandquist was charged by the city police with careless driving which resulted in a personal injury accident February 10. He was fined $50 of which $25 was suspended.

In other action, two cases were continued and two persons pleaded not guilty.

Women Curlers To Match Rocks Thursday Night

The women's curling league, which had its last week's matches, "Blizzarded" out, will have a schedule of matches on Thursday, March 10. On the 7 p.m. draw the Naomi Monroe rink will meet the Betty Liden rink; and the Vi Larson rink will meet the Vernice Nelson quartette.

A full slate of matches will occupy the 9 p.m. draw. The Lois Amundgaard rink will play the Alice Liden rink; the Ellen Bottem rink will meet the May Jahr foursome; the Linda Jorde rink will meet the Edith Nabben rink; and the Fern Liden rink will meet the Clara Mae Swanson rink.

Logging Shown To Help State Deer Population

History of deer populations in the Great Lakes area since it was settled by the white man indicates that logging operations are largely responsible for a tremendous increase in deer abundance observed since the 1800's.

Information was gathered by the Great Lakes Deer Group, an organization of professional wildlife researchers from Ontario, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

In Minnesota, deer were present but not abundant in 1900. The opening of the forest through logging and fires resulted in a tremendous increase in the deer population until by 1930 deer were common throughout most of the state.

Although the deer herd increased greatly in northern part of Minnesota after 1900, in the southern part of the state deer were scarce by 1890 as a result of land clearing, intensified farming and severe hunting pressure.

Since the early 1900's drastic changes have taken place in the population and distribution of deer and at the present time the herd is estimated at over 500,000 animals.

It is pointed out in the report that solid stands of mature trees offer little or none of the food and cover requirements needed by deer and that continued cutting or logging operations are essential if the herd is to be maintained at a high level.

Fisher Advances In Tourney; Will Play TRF Tonight

Coach Norm Wagner's Fisher Flyers gained a berth in the District 31 basketball tournament by scoring a decisive 80 to 53 win over the Alvarado Indians in a consolation finals of the sub-district tourney that was concluded here on Monday night. Fisher will play the Thief River Falls Prowlers in a district tourney first-round game at 9 p.m. on the UND fieldhouse court tonight, Wednesday.

Fisher, with Mark Brickson proving effective in covering the rebounds off both boards, and leading the game' scoring with 28 points, had little difficulty in taking command of the consolation game. The Flyers held a 17 to 9 first period lead, and a 40 to 26 advantage at the intermission. Giving Brickson ample assistance on rebounds was Pete Rutherford, the Flyers' fine junior forward. Rutherford tallied 18 points.

For the losing Alvarado Indians, Darrell Olson, a junior guard, and Tom Dahlstrom, a sophomore forward, led the scoring with 16 and 12 points, respectively.

State Phone Numbers 45 per 100 Population

Minnesota has more telephones in relation to its population than any foreign country, according to the 1965 edition of "The World's Telephones".

The state's 1,615,778 telephones at the beginning of 1965 amounted to 45.66 per 100 population. The next "most-telephoned" foreign nation, Sweden, has 44.01 phones for each 100 people.

Tom Perrier, local Northwestern Bell Telephone company manager, said the report recently released by the American Telephone and Telegraph company contains a variety of facts about telephones and their use throughout the world. By checking the tables, he points out that Thief River Falls has about the same number of telephones as the entire country of Cambodia.

Figures in the study are dated effective Jan. 1, 1966, because it takes nearly a year to collect data from world-wide sources.

On January 1, 1965, there were 182,500,000 telephones in the world—about 97 per cent of them within reach of Minnesota telephone customers. During 1964, Americans began talking by telephone for the first time with people in the Cook Islands, a Pacific Ocean archipelago, and the Republic of Libera on the west coast of Africa.

The gain was the largest one-year addition of telephones in the world in history, and capped a decade of growth in which the world's telephones almost doubled in number.

North America, with 95,500,000 telephones on January 1, 1965, had as many telephones as all the world had the same date in 1955. Most of the North American total is in the United States which counted 88,785,000 telephones at the beginning of 1965.

Japan added 1,568,000 telephones during 1964 to hold second place in the tabulation with a total of 12,251,000. Others among the first 10 nations on the list are:

The United Kingdom, 9,960,000; West Germany, 8,168,000; USSR, 7,200,000 (estimated); Canada, 7,021,000; France, 5,704,000; Italy, 5,529,000; Sweden, 3,387,000; and Australia, 2,670,000.

Northwest Bell Annual Report Indicates Growth

Growth in use of Northwestern Bell services in 1965 reflected the generally good condition of business and agriculture in the area served by the company, A. F. Jacobson, president, said in the firm's annual report released recently.

A gain of 138,000 telephones during the year pushed the year-end total to 3,099,000. Use of long distance and other intercity services had an aggregate rise of 10.6 per cent.

Northwestern Bell's 1965 construction program to expand and improve service cost a record $141 million. Investment in service facilities in the five states served by the company stood at $1.3 billion at the end of 1965, the report stated.

Revenues increased by approximately eight per cent, and cost of providing service went up 10 per cent. Operating taxes, together with the federal excise taxes collected by the company for the government, totaled $126 million. Earnings were at the rate of $2.27 per share of stock, compared with $2.31 for the preceding year.

Among the many construction projects carried out during the year, the report cited these examples:

Thirteen new radio relay systems provided part of the 2,800 additional circuits necessary to handle more intercity calling.

Equipment and circuit enlargements made possible the extension of distance dialing to 260,000 more telephones.

An early December sleet storm in parts of the Dakotas and western Minnesota caused over a million dollars in damage to aerial telephone lines, the report said, emphasizing the necessity of moving ahead as rapidly as possible on weatherproofing telephone plant throughout the area. It was pointed out that most line construction in 1965 involved placement of underground cable, which not only lessens weather hazards but adds greatly to community attractiveness.

Langen Expresses Pleasure on GI Bill Adoption

Congressman Odin Langen today expressed pleasure that the new GI Bill cleared the Congress in such short order and has now been signed by the President

"This new bill represents a continuation of American responsibility to the veterans of the nation who have served under war conditions," Langen said, "and provides needed assistance to these veterans for education and training, home loans, hospital benefits and employment assistance."

Langen said the Veterans administration has informed him that approximately 9,400 veterans in Minnesota's Seventh Congressional district are potentially eligible for benefits and services under the new law. "In the first year alone," Langen said, "about 1,200 veterans in the district are expected to take advantage of the educational benefits, with additional veterans taking advantage of the other provisions in the act."

Langen explained that under the education and training sections of the act, veterans can receive up to 36 months of schooling on the basis of one month for each month spent in uniform after January 31, 1955. He said the veterans without dependents would receive $100 a month toward his education. The veterans with one dependent would receive $125 a month and the veteran with more than one dependent would receive $150 a month. Monthly payments would be used by the veteran to help defray the living expenses.

Congressman Langen said the educational provisions of the new bill go into effect June first of this year giving the veteran ample time to plan his schooling program.

Peace Corps Test Slated Saturday At Post Office

Thief River Falls area residents will have an opportunity to take the Peace Corps placement test at 9 a.m. Saturday at the post office.

The test, which measures general aptitude and the ability to learn a language, is used by the Peace Corps to determine how an applicant can best be utilized overseas. The placement test requires no preparation and is non-competitive; an applicant can neither pass or fail.

The application form, not the placement test, is the most important factor in the selection of volunteers. Persons interested in serving in the Peace Corps must fill out an application, if they have not already done so, and present it to the tester before taking the test. Applications may be obtained from local post offices or from the Peace Corps, Washington, D. C. 20525.

The placement test takes about an hour and a half. An optional achievement test for applicants who have studied French or Spanish requires an additional hour.

Quite a Blow

One thing that can be said for the blizzard which hit northern Minnesota and the Dakotas last week was that it was quite a blow. Unable to negotiate plugged roads, this writer observed the storm Friday from the comfortable confines of home. Aside from the worries of how the Times was to publish a paper on Monday, the break from routine was not entirely unpleasant.

One comment about the storm which seemed appropriate was, "Well, one thing good about the blizzard is that we won't have to listen to the old-timers telling about how much snow they used to have." We heard a couple of elderly natives visiting on Monday, however, and they agreed that we didn't have as much snow as they did in the "old Days."

There is a good possibility that some of the past winters provided a large amount of snow which amounted to quite an accumulation by the time spring arrived. We doubt, however, that anyone can remember this area experiencing such a large snowfall in such a short time and accompanied by such strong and persistent winds.

Personally, we are thankful for one phase of the storm—that it happened in March rather than November. At least we needn't expect to put up with drifting conditions and expectations of more snow for such a long period of time.

It was fortunate that damage and loss of life was held to a minimum, considering the extent of the storm. Much of this can be attributed to the length of time it took for the snow and wind to produce a full-blown blizzard, the relatively warm temperatures and the advance warnings carried in the instant news media. The March blizzard of 1941—which has been a blizzard standard in this area ever since—struck without warning and was accompanied by much colder temperatures.

Commendation is in order to highway and street department crews who went to work the instant it appeared reasonable and who exerted tremendous effort to clear highways and city streets for traffic. Their task was great, but they were equal to it, and the job was done with efficiency and dispatch. By late Monday afternoon a casual visitor to the downtown area would scarcely realize that more than two feet of snow had fallen only two days previously.

We have heard several complaints and suggestions in regard to snow removal while unintentionally eavesdropping on coffee shop conversations. As usual, they involve personal grievances or suggestions which might be properly made to city officials but never seem to get there.

In general, the area can be proud of the way its people conducted themselves during the big blow, and equally proud of the efforts put forth after the snow stopped falling and the wind was stilled. It has been a long time since area residents have seen anything like it—and we hope it will be many years before anything similar is seen again.

That Word "Condemn"

(The following editorial was published in the Monday edition of the Times, but omission of several lines made it impossible to follow the context and obtain the full editorial intent. It is reprinted because we feel strongly on this question of eminent domain and desire that our readers have no question as to our intended meaning. Two paragraphs have been added.)

No matter how it is used or by whom it is used, the word "condemn" has a sinister sound. There is such an essence of power and finality in the word that its use almost creates an element of fear. For all its distasteful connotation, however, the word is being used locally in regard to property which the city of Thief River Falls hopes to acquire for a junior college site.

The city has initiated condemnation proceedings in an attempt to acquire approximately 40 acres of land lying immediately north of highway 1 and east of the Thief river on the northeast edge of Thief River Falls. This site — plus adjoining acreage which the owner has agreed to sell — is considered by many to be the prime location for a permanent junior college site in this community.

There are others who disagree.

Personally, we are not concerned with an exact site for the junior college. We are concerned, however, that there IS a permanent site for the college, and that such site will be available to the junior college board when a request for funds is made to the 1967 legislature. The importance of this availability can scarcely be over-emphasized.

There is a problem in regard to the 40 some acres in question, and — depending upon who an individual is—it is a major or minor problem. The problem is that the owner of the property does not want to sell, but the city wants to buy. By implementing condemnation proceedings, the city is in effect saying "you will sell" rather than "we will buy".

According to the law, apparently, condemnation is a right. According to decent moral standards, however, we would judge condemnation to be wrong. It would seem—if freedom is to prevail—that a person who owns property should have the right to keep it or sell it as he or she pleases. The right to condemn runs a collision course with the freedom of choice. Our deep-down feeling is that the right of the individual in our free society is trampled in the law of eminent domain.

The law of eminent domain is that superior dominion of the sovereign power over property within the state which authorizes it to appropriate all or any part thereof to a necessary public use, reasonable compensation being made. This law apparently presupposes that money will compensate for loss of property. It rules out sentiment—and that is contrary to human nature in our nation which is based on a heritage of freedom.

Believe it or not, there are items in the world today which are priceless—family heirlooms and other items which the owner simply wants to keep or possess, and would not sell for any price although the financial value is insignificant.

As much as we agree that the site selected by the city would be a fine one for a junior college or other development, we are not in sympathy with efforts to take it by court action. To coin a few phrases, it goes against the grain, gets our Irish up and sticks in our craw. It may be legal but it isn't right and it "Just don't seem fair."

Price Tag for Teachers?

Writing in the Minnesota Journal of Education, A. L. Gallop, executive secretary of the Minnesota Education association, takes issue with a Minnesota newspaper editor who asked "how much is enough" when teacher's salaries are considered. And he makes a good point when he states, 'Ask it also in terms of, 'How much is an education for my child worth?' The two can't be separated."

Thief River Falls board of education has been conducting its annual wrestling match with a salary schedule for the local district, and each of the board members has undoubtedly asked himself a number of times the same question: How much is a teacher worth? We don't believe that there is any possible answer to this question which is totally right.

Members of school district, county, city and township governing bodies are concerned with one thing—providing the most value to their respective areas for the least amount of money which will be expended. It is a necessary evil that salaries and wages provide a large percentage of the total costs involved, and therefore come in for the most severe scrutiny.

It is impossible to put a dollar value on a teacher. Gallop cites other fields where starting salaries of college graduates with bachelor degrees are higher than education. These include engineering, physics, chemistry, accounting, economics and finance, mathematics-statistics, business administration and sales-marketing.

Should we thus assume that a teacher in any of these fields has more "value" than teachers in English, history, speech, home economics, agriculture, languages and other fields? Should he or she command a higher salary because he or she is preparing young people for these "higher priced" fields?

If so, the salary schedule based on number of years of education, degrees held and years of experience is entirely wrong. Perhaps the field in which the instructor teaches should be considered. We do not believe that this is right or proper, nor do we believe that Executive Secretary Gallop intended his remarks to be interpreted in this manner.

What about the differences in abilities? There should be no question that certain teachers have greater abilities to impart knowledge than others, and that some are extremely dedicated to their profession while others are simply living off the income it provides. Salary schedules based on education and experience do not take ability into account. In fact, there is really no accurate way to interpret a teacher's effectiveness in the school system.

A salary schedule is actually the easy way out for all concerned. It lumps teachers into neat little boxes, absolves the school board of responsibility in rating teacher effectiveness and guarantees the teacher a stipulated amount for making a daily appearance in the classroom. The good teacher may not be amply compensated, but the poor teacher is accorded a certain measure of protection. A schedule attempts to provide a median salary level.

We believe that our community has been blessed with more than our proportionate share of good teachers. Perhaps many have not been paid what they should have received. Just as the community should consider the value of education to a child, however, the teacher should consider the value of the community to himself or herself.

This may be one of the reasons why a number of teachers are making Thief River Falls their permanent homes; they find the community has been fair to them and is a good place to live. Offhand, we would judge these "permanent" residents to be among our district's best teachers for they understand our children and the problems of our area.

Teachers should not wear shoulder patches declaring their dollar value. Neither should they believe they are carrying a cross.

NEWFOLDEN

Mrs. John Aune, Newfolden, 874-8141

Mr. and Mrs. Gotfred Berggren of Karlstad and Mrs. John Aune and Grandma Berggren, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Larson to Grand Forks on Tuesday where Grandma Berggren consulted the doctor.

The main head lines of the news is snow as most people are digging themselves out of the snow drifts, when the worst storm for many years hit our area and many other places.

John Olson reports about the storm

John said, I have lived on this place for 35 years and this is the worst storm I have seen. I had a snow drift in front of my barn door 10 feet high so was unable to get into the barn to feed my stock, but then we worked around to the other side to another door that led up to the hay loft, so we had to use a step ladder to carry the water by pails up the ladder and then down again to the cattle. But with the help of my wife we managed, but it sure was hard work in that hard storm, and so many days and today Monday and no road open yet, but are waiting for someone to come with a bulldozer to push the snow away. John says, I hope I don't have to see a storm like that for a long time.

Mr. and Mrs. Gotfred Berggren of Karlstad and Mrs. Arnold Larson, Jimmy Sybil and Susan were coffee guests at the John Aune home on Sunday evening after attending the Luther League at the Bethlehem Lutheran church. Betty Berggren also called there briefly on her way back to Thief River Falls. Vernon Aune also accompanied her back to Thief River Falls after spending the weekend at home.

Carl Aune arrived home on Thursday morning by train after spending nearly a month visiting with his sister, Mrs. Mable Carlson and other relatives in Minneapolis and also spent one weekend visiting at the home of his nephew and family the Norris Aune's of Circle Pines.

Mrs. Florence Anderson came back home last Monday evening after spending about 2 months at the home of her son and family the Maynard Anderson's at Columbia, Mo. and also got acquainted with her new grandson born Jan. 3 and named Rodney Lee. The Andersons have a little daughter also. Mrs. Anderson said the weather was nice and no snow.

Mrs. Gotfred Berggren of Karlstad and Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Larson were coffee guests at the John Aune home on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Thorvald Leo, Karin and Timmy motored to Grand Forks on Tuesday where they visited and were guests of Mrs. Alice Knutson and LeRoy.

Clarence Westlin underwent surgery at the hospital in Grand Forks on Thursday. Mrs. Westlin is staying down there to be with her husband. We wish Mr. Westlin a speedy and complete recovery.

Mrs. Elvin Westman returned home last Sunday from the hospital in Minneapolis where she was a patient for some time. Glad to say Mrs. Westman is feeling real good.

Sunday visitors of Elida and Clara Moen were Kenneth Moen, Mrs. Kenneth Hjelle and girls, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Olson and Charles and Bradley and Mr. and Mrs. Pete Peterson, Timmy and Margo of Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Eldor Westman, James and Derril visited on Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Westman and to see how Mrs. Westman is getting along. She recently returned home from the hospital in Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hjelle had to take their litle girl Lista to the hospital in Thief River Falls during the bad storm on Thursday but with the help of the snow plow they made it and little Lisa got help and is feeling much better and expects to be home today Monday.

Mrs. Elida Moen accompanied, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hjelle to Thief River Falls on Monday where they visited at the Pete Peterson home here and the Hjelles went to get their little girl Lisa who has been a palent at the Northwestern hospital since Thursday.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Milford Olson and family of Viking were anxious to see how their mother Mrs. Mable Olson was getting along, so they loaded the snow cat in their jeep and took off for Newfolden and drove as far as up town and unloaded the cat and drove it up to his mothers home. Mrs. Olson also brought along a pot luck supper. Mrs. Laverne Knutson and Bruce also joined them and enjoyed supper with them.

Richard Larson took a ride in his snow cat on Sunday and went for a visit with his uncle Alfred Larson, who now lives at the Lloyd Larson home and later Richard visited briefly with his mother Mrs. Hannah Larson. The snow cats really came in handy many times especially during the terrific storm.

Most of us are familiar with the seven sayings of Jesus from the Cross on the day of the Crucifixion. Though we have read them many times perhaps not all of us are as familiar with the seven sayings to the Cross on that same day. These of course, cause us to look at the Cross at an entirely different angle. The words of Jesus from the Cross were spoken in our behalf. The Words to the Cross were not all so tenderly spoken. The second word will be considered in the theme: "Too Contemptuous to be night musical service. Several will participate in singing solos duets, etc. Many of the old and new gospel songs will be shared centered around the theme of Christ's mission and suffering on the cross. Lunch will be served by Olga Olson, Emelia Rensin, Mrs. Rustan and Mrs. Skallet. The public is invited.

"Remember, you are always welcome at Faith Lutheran Brethren church."

A Friendly church with a Faithful message.

Time, like the big snow drifts we see outside, is made up of many tiny particles. These particles are used by us one at a time in portions we call "now". We can't reclaim the minute that has gone by, nor are we assured of the next one; we only have the one "now". Make sure you use it well, God gave it to you. Why not use some of your time in God's House.

WHERE DO THE STARS GO, MOMMY?

The big brown eyes are thoughtful; the small face earnest as Mary Anne considers the universe.

Sometimes our pint-sized inquisitor's questions are devastatingly funny, sometimes deadly serious; but always important. Harry and I may chuckle over them, but we never forget that these queries reflect Mary Anne's increasing awareness of the world about her. We know that our answers and attitudes are an important part of her development.

Another influential portion of Mary Anne's growth, we feel, has been her regular attendance at Church School. There, Mary Anne's experiences with other children have been related to God's plan. The big kitchen or play corner in the skilled teacher's capable hands become the training ground for Christian behavior.

How glad we are that our church is well equipped to guide us all in her religious growth.

Attend your church. Take advantage of the inspiration and knowledge it is eager to share with you and your children.

News of Past Week from Plummer Area

Mrs. Walter C. Peterson, Plummer, 465-3415

During the blizzard that struck Plummer for four days we are all very thankful for all the help given the community by the Civil Defense workers under the direction of R. H. Pahlen with headquarters at Hesse Grocery. About 20 men and young men took part in helping deliver fuel oil, calling on the folks without phones to see what was needed, delivering food stuff by snow mobile over the high drifts, helping at the mink yard as the mink were smothering by the snow, helping farmers get hay to the cattle and helping them get their milk in to the creamery which stayed open late Saturday evening and all day Sunday so farmers could get their milk in. We are all thankful there were no fires or emergencies during the storm but without the help of all the good men it would have been worse here, that is for sure. SOMEWHERE beneath the drifts in the city parking lot located between LaBree and Horace avenues north of First street were several automobiles. Snow clung to the south side of the building housing a laundromat and several apartments. This photo was taken early Saturday morning when there was virtually no vehicle traffic. Throughout the day the traffic increased as more and more people retrieved their cars from snowbound parking places.

STRANDQUIST . . .

To late for last week: Mrs. Harry Bengtson and girls and Mrs. Florence Clark of Karlstad helped Vanette Lefrooth celebrate her birthday the 17th and in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lefrooth and Greg, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Lindstrom and family and Elaine Lefrooth at the Vance Lefrooth home.

Mrs. Mable Borsvold and Mrs. Emmanuel Nelson were coffee guests at Vance Lefrooths Wednesday afternoon.

Grandma Nelson and Arlie helped Vance Alan Lefrooth celebrate his birthday Saturday afternoon.

There were four that registered in Strandquist for the oral cancer test in Crookston.

Lets hope this 3 day raging snowstorm is the wind up of this winter. Never in all the years we've lived here can I recall the streets being so blocked with so many drifts. We certainly appreciate the service Eddie Nelson gave our residents in delivering groceries and filling their wood boxes. Only one electric wire (a 210) blew down causing trouble with Nelson's freezers and Ed Stennes' cook stove besides leaving Bukowskies in the dark. Besides the school being closed and church services being canceled this community fared well as Philip Haugard and his bull dozer; Carl Johnson with his tractor and bucket; the county snow plow operated by Morris Lindstrom have helped open highways and driveways.

Mrs. Lee Kimbrough came home from the hospital on Wednesday and her daughter, Orpha, Mrs. C. I. Kessler of Miami, Fla., also came back with her.

The American Legion Auxiliary will help the Legionaires celebrate their birthday by having a joint meeting Thursday evening, March 10 at 7:30 and serving them lunch at Boen's Cafe.

Mrs. Ella Thun visited Tuesday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Peterson.

Once again one of our pioneers was taken when Melvin Brekke passed away on Sunday morning at a Grand Forks hospital where he had been a patient for about a month. He is survived by his wife, two sons, Dennis of Strandquist, Milo of Seattle, Wash., 2 daughters, Mrs. Melbelyne Underberg of Longview, Wash. and Mrs. Donald (Marlys) Lefrooth of Davenport, Ia. and several grandchildren, besides sisters and brothers and a host of friends. Our sincere sympathy to the family. Funeral services will be held in the Bethesda church at Strandquist Thursday afternoon.

Everybody is snow bound!

He was content to work in his fields, and care for his splendid herd of cattle. Throughout his busy life there was little time for recreation. There were a few fishing trips, and during the winter months he liked to mingle with his friends and enjoy a curling game, which he played so well. In the community he was known as a builder, one who constantly tried to improve the soil, his livestock and the farmstead. To all who knew him he was a friend. A few weeks ago James realized that it would not be long before he would be leaving us. He foretold almost to the exact time when it would be. To all of us who knew him there shall always be the memory of a wonderful friend and neighbor.

COMPLETE manufacturing capability from raw materials to the finished product has been developed at the Dow Key company plant in Thief River Falls. Component parts for coaxial switches and connectors are produced at the electronics firm which has undertaken three expansion programs since moving to Thief River Falls less than 10 years ago. In the above photo, Kermit Malberg is shown with one of the company's automatic screwing machines.

Dow Key Display Will Show Firm's Capability

Representing the capability of Dow Key company in Thief River Falls for manufacture of radio frequency components, a display arranged by the local company is enroute to New York City for display in the Institute of Electronics Engineers Exhibit at the New York Coliseum. The display features components for co-axial switches and connectors.

Created by the local firm, the display includes a large, oak shadow-box frame with green felt-covered back and components and completed switches mounted and identified by number. Officials of the company noted Friday that the display does not indicate the scope of the company's many models but is merely representative of the diversity of products which the firm is capable of producing.

In addition to the show in New York City, the display will be shown at the Wescon show in California; the Radio Parts show in Chicago, Ill.; and the Nerum show in Boston, Mass.

To anyone without a knowledge of electronics, the Dow Key company operation is a study in incomprehension. While it is impressive to see the activity in the machine shop, the electroplating department, the assembly line and packaging, it is difficult to comprehend just what is actually being done.

Through constant research and development programs, however, the company is keeping abreast of technological advancements in the electronics component field, according to Bernard J. Washlsko, vice president of the company, who is in charge of manufacturing. He noted that the plant has complete manufacturing capability from raw materials to the finished products

4-H Membership Often Lasts for 10-Year Tenure

With so much competition today for the leisure time of teen-agers, it is interesting to note that membership in 4-H clubs often last up to 10 years, reports the National 4-H Service committee.

"For example, in the national 4-H leadership program last year, the average membership tenure of 12 national award winners was nearly nine years," said a committee spokesman.

Long, continuous membership may be partly due to the flexibility of the informal, educational 4-H program, observe adults working with the youth who are between nine and 10 years old. Available today are about 40 different projects or activities.

The national 4-H leadership program is one of these activities. Its purpose is to develop character, self-confidence and an understanding of people and the importance of responsible citizenship.

"Nobody is a born leader", said Charles Freeman, program leader for a 4-H citizenship education and leadership development group which met recently in Washington, D. C. "It (leadership) has to be learned, and it can be learned." He motioned "skills" and "understanding" as prime requisites.

The starting place can be anywhere in the club. Sometimes it is with office holding. Needed is recognized ability in sewing, cooking, electrical or mechanical endeavors, and in other areas such as health and safety.

Adult volunteer 4-H leaders guide and encourage the young people to be active in school and the community as well as in the club. Participation in the leadership program is entirely voluntary. Boys and girls "enroll", and at the end of the club year their contributions are evaluated by themselves, by the adult leaders and by the county extension staff.

Awards are offered on a competitive basis at county, state and national levels. Each year six boys and six girls are chosen from 50 states as winners of $500 scholarships. The highest ranking boy or girl in the state will be named a delegate to the National 4-H Club Congress at Chicago with all expenses paid. Goldfilled leadership medals will be presented to the four top members in the county.

Right now there are more than 150,000 junior leaders helping younger members with their projects. All have been trained in the leadership program. More are needed, says the extension service.

Engineer Corps Continues Study In Flood Control

St. Paul District Corps of Engineers announced today that as part of its continuous study of flood control techniques it is employing a crop dusting aircraft to spread granules of black slag on areas of ice covering Lake Pepin. The Corps of Engineers test is designed to provide information which could be helpful in breaking ice jams when they block rivers and cause floods upstream.

The slag granules will be spread in strips or patches 75 feet wide, three to four hundred feet long, and several hundred feet apart, over sections of the main channel where the ice is heaviest i.e., a six to seven mile stretch between Kings Coulee and Central Point.

The black slag, which is heavy and inert, is expected to be effective in absorbing the warm rays of the sun, but it will not pollute the river. This aspect of the experiment has been coordinated with Minnesota and Wisconsin State agencies. In addition, since the particles are heavy, they are resistant to wind and will not blow away, as is the tendency with fine coal or lamp black.

Tests of various kinds will be made to determine the effectiveness of the black material in melting river ice.

Select "Tender Trap" As Theatre Production

Selection of "The Tender Trap" as the first play to be presented by the Thief River Falls Community Theatre took place at a recent meeting of the organization. William Jensen of the Lincoln senior high school faculty will direct the production which will be the first for the organization as well as the first in the current season.

Next general meeting of the theatre group will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the city auditorium, with persons having Lenten services that evening invited to attend the meeting after attending church. All interested persons who are not yet members of the new organization should bring the questionnaire published with this article with them, or mail it to Helen Wysoski, 323 Knight av. S., Thief River Falls.

Key people will be named by Jensen to work in the various production categories for "The Tender Trap", and assistants will be chosen on a volunteer basis wherever feasible. Department heads will be in direct contact with the governing board member assigned by Merle Kruschke, president of the theater group.

These board members represent the following activities: Pat Anderson, make-up; Virginia Gjernes, publicity; Helen Wysoski, properties; Gloria Bjorkman, wardrobe; Marjorie Hanson, tickets; and James Solsten and James Schob, stage production.

Listed as a situation comedy, "The Tender Trap" reveals the life of a bachelor living in the wilds of New York City. He is visited by a friend from the middle west who is amazed, amused and, occasionally, aghast at the other visitors to the apartment. The sleek, sophisticated feminine invaders are each intent upon marriage and changing the apartment into a snug nest for two.

The bachelor is not adverse to giving up his lonely status but has trouble deciding which one of his admirers will be the lucky girl.

A secondary plot involves the bachelor and his friend, the latter of which has compounded a medicine to cure the common cold. The ways and (devious) means with which they hope to market this multi-million-dollar-maker are unfolded to the audience in piecemeal fashion. The play was written by Max Shulman and Robert Paul Smith.

Persons interested who have not yet joined the theater organization are encouraged to complete the following questionnaire:

KITCHEN KARNIVAL

Features from the Kitchen of

MRS. WILBUR HALLSTROM

Of the large assortment of recipes available in today's cookbooks, many recipes are not used by the average homemaker because of some unusual ingredient listed. When tried, too often the results prove to be disappointing. However today's recipe for chocolate cake, although it calls for potatoes, an ingredient not usually found in cake, has been tried with the results that for the past two years, Mrs. Wilbur Hallstrom of rural Red Lake Falls has won first place with its entry at the Pennington Country Seed and Feed Show. She is sharing her prize-winning recipe with us.

POTATO CHOCOLATE CAKE

- ½ cup milk
- 3 squares unsweetened chocolate
- 1 cup shortening
- 1¾ cup sugar
- 1 cup hot mashed potatoes
- 4 eggs, separated
- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- One-eighth teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ¼ cup sugar

Method: Heat milk slowly in saucepan, add chocolate and stir to melt. Cool. Cream shortening and sugar until light and fluffy. Combine chocolate mixture with potatoes and add to creamed mixture. Beat in egg yolks. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt and stir into batter; add vanilla. Beat egg whites until stiff, adding ¼ cup sugar gradually. Fold into batter and pour into three greased, waxed paper-lined, 8-inch layer pans or a 9 x 13 loaf pan. Bake in a 350-degree moderate oven for 30 minutes. Cool and frost as desired.

Anita, Marya and Daniel are members of the Chapel and Children's choirs.

In addition to their church activities, Mr. and Mrs. Hallstrom are members of the Northwest Farm and Home Development Association, and Mr. Hallstrom is one of its board of directors. Both are adult leaders for the Black River 4-H club with Gregory, Anita and Marya among the members. Mrs. Hallstrom is also a member of the Black River Homemakers group. Although a great deal of her time is devoted to keeping with the family and its activities, Mrs. Hallstrom finds time for her favorite hobby, that of sewing, not only for her own family but also for others.

Rev. Schwarz Gets Adventist Report On Relief Program

The role of the Thief River Falls Seventh-day Adventist church in a vast $2.5 million relief operation involving 30 countries was revealed recently in a year-end report to Rev. Gary Schwarz. Cooperating with over 3,000 Adventist churches in the United States and Canada, the Thief River Falls church funneled money, clothing and supplies into local, state and national warehouses for distribution according to need.

While serving 567 persons in need in the Thief River Falls area the local church assisted seven families whose homes burned, gave away 10 food baskets at Christmas time and gave 17 fruit plates to shut-in persons, and collected $150 earmarked for disaster and famine relief.

Total aid dispensed by the denomination in 1965 amounted to over $2.5 million. Relief activities are administered by the Church's official welfare arm, Seventh-day Adventist Welfare Services, Inc. at the Adventists world headquarters in Washington, D. C. In charge of welfare activities in Thief River Falls are Mrs. Gary Schwarz and Mrs. Floyd Borgen.

Economist Offers Ways to Stretch Dollars for Meat

Learning more about meat cuts is one way to stretch your meat dollar, says Verna Mikesh, extension nutritionist at the University of Minnesota. Instead of buying the most expensive cuts of meat, you can often get a more inexpensive cut which will be just as delicious if cooked properly.

For example, instead of buying costly loin chops in pork, lamb or veal, ask the meat man to cut shoulder blade steaks for you or rib chops, which are less expensive, equally nutritious and flavorful. If you'd like a beef oven roast and can't afford a standing rib, buy a rump roast in Choice grade, Miss Mikesh suggests. A rump oven roast is economical because there's little waste.

To get a good buy in meat, remember that price per pound isn't the best guide; instead, consider the number of servings you can get out of a pound of meat and boned meats—like ham—may seem expensive on the basis of price per pound, but actually may cost less per serving than meat with a great deal of waste such as spare ribs, according to the uni- figure the cost per serving. Some versity nutritionist.

Meat with no bone, little connective tissue and fat like hamburger, liver and boned cuts will yield four to five servings a pound; meat with a little bone, connective tissue and fat like round steak, three to four servings a pound; meat with a medium amount of bone, connective tissue and fat, such as chicken, turkey, sirloin steak, pot roast, two to three servings a pound. Meat with a great deal of waste like spare ribs or short ribs will provide only one to two servings for each pound.

Cooking meat just to the desired doneness and no longer and at low temperatures—from 300 to 325 degrees F.—will prevent the shrinkage that occurs from overly long cooking at high heat. Besides giving you more meat, the low-temperature cooking will also give you a juicier product.

Other ways of stretching the meat dollar are to take advantage of weekend specials whenever possible and to add variety to meals with less expensive protein foods such as fresh, frozen and canned fish; liver; heart; eggs and beans.

3 Cancer Cases Found Among 35 Clinic Suspects

Three cancers of the mouth were diagnosed from 35 biopsies made at the oral cancer examination clinic held February 23 at Crookston's Bethesda hospital, the Minnesota Division of the American Cancer society announced today.

One cancer was of the lower lip, another of the floor of the mouth and a third of the mucobuccal fold. Family dentists and physicians of the three patients with carcinoma diagnosis have ben notified and appropriate treatment has been instituted.

Thirty of the specimens revealed a variety of non-malignant conditions. These patients' dentists or physicians also were advised of the microscopic interpretation of the biopsies and cytology results so that treatment, if required, may be instituted. Two specimens were normal.

The clinic examined 1,516 men and women 45 and older from nine northwestern Minnesota counties—Clearwater, Kittson, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau. It is in this age group that this type cancer is most apt to occur.

The clinic directed public attention to the cancer problem and the need for early diagnosis and proper treatment to save lives. A seminar for dentists and physicians of the area preceded the clinic.

Forestry Division Assists Planting 10 Million Trees

Advice on tree planting and other forest management services were provided to approximately 1,600 private land owners during 1965, the state forestry division reported today. Under the federal government's Agricultural Conservation program, financial assistance is provided for timber stand improvement practices and tree planting.

State forestry personnel examine the site where assistance has been requested, make recommendations and later check for compliance. About 10 million trees were planted last year under the program and timber stand improvement carried out on 2,000 acres of private land.

A forestry official said, "While these improvements may or may not profit the land owner directly during his lifetime, they upgrade the resources of the nation by protecting and improving our soils, waters and woodlands.

"Those who follow will assuredly benefit from the owner's wisdom in implementing these conservation practices on the land.

Airline Plane Has Extensive Service

A distinguished DC-3—venerable but vigorous—recently received a commendation from the men who built her more than 26 years ago. Known as "number 728" from her serial number, N21728, the DC-3, owned by North Central Airlines, was honored by Donald W. Douglas, board chairman and founder of Douglas Aircraft, co., for logging more time in the air than any other airplane in history.

At a ceremony in Palm Springs, Calif., Douglas presented N. N. Carr, president and general manager of North Central, with a bronze plaque commemorating Number 728's durability and contributions to the legend of the world-famed DC-3, Number 728 was used many times on flights into and out of Thief River Falls, according to local North Central personnel.

The North Central DC-3 was produced at the Douglas facility in Santa Monica, Calif., on Aug. 11, 1939. Douglas built almost 11,000 of the twin-engine transports for air carriers and the military.

When Number 728 was retired from scheduled service last April 26, she had logged 83,052 hours and 52 minutes of flying time and had flown more than 12 million miles. Her taxiing alone totaled well over 100,000 miles.

Or, to put it another way, Number 728 had been airborne almost 9½ years, averaging more than eight hours of service daily, and had flown a distance equivalent to 25 round trips to the moon. Despite this, the air frame of the DC-3 is 90 per cent original.

North Central statisticians calculate Number 728 consumed nearly eight million gallons of gasoline and wore out 25,000 spark plugs, 550 main gear tires and 136 engines during her commercial life. The carrier obtained the DC-3 in 1952 from Eastern Air Lines, which logged more than 50,000 hours with her.

Retirement from scheduled service did not mean an end to duty for Number 728, for North Central had another assignment for her. After some modification to prepare her for the new task, the airliner began a second career, serving as an executive aircraft and "flying laboratory" to test aircraft paints and accessories.

In this role the DC-3 has added another 422 hours to her flight record.

The Minneapolis - based airline, which serves 10 midwest states and Canada, has a fleet of 16 DC-3s and 30 Convair 440s. Beginning early in 1967, its prime aircraft will be the new DC-9 twinjet. It has ordered five from Douglas.

But, with the arrival of the new jets, Number 728 will still be functioning usefully, expanding her flight record and, at the same time, adding to the saga of the amazing DC-3.

AIRMAN Alan F. Leigh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Liegh of East Grand Forks, has been selected for training at Chanute AFB, Ill. as an aircraft maintenance specialist. A 1964 graduate of Newfolden high school, he completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Warm Weather Causes Melting; Flood Danger Seen

Above - normal temperatures, reaching a peak Sunday of 47 degrees, have helped considerably in melting the mountains of snow left in the city by the recent three-day blizzard. From a snow depth on the level of 38 inches on Tuesday, the depth has decreased to 12 inches as of Sunday night's measurement. Cities and towns along the Red River are becoming concerned about flood danger caused by the fast melting.

Continued mild weather is the forecast. Mostly cloudy skies north and fair to partly cloudy in the south are predicted, with scattered areas of light rain late today and tonight. Little temperature change range from 38 to 5; lows tonight from 26 to 34.

Temperature and precipitation readings recorded at the airport are as follows: 42 and 21 on Wednesday; 39, 30 and .15 inch on Thursday; 35, 30 and a trace on Friday; 37 and 28 on Saturday; 47 and a low Monday morning of 28.

NORDEN . . .

The regular February meeting of Oak Ridge Ladies Aid which was to have been held March 3rd at the Daryl Lewis home was postponed for very obvious reasons at that time. Also due to the accumulation of snow, it was decided the March meeting be cancelled altogether, the April meeting date falling on April 7. This may also be subject to change due to school Easter vacation, so please watch for further announcements. The ladies are asked to prepare their April lesson for the "Scope" and an attempt will be made to cover both lessons at that time. Meeting place and hostesses tentatively remain the same, depending on road conditions.

Mrs. Omer Olson was released from Northwestern hospital the middle of last week after a confinement of a week and a half, and is steadily gaining strength at home.

PROWLERS' Tommy Cummings (31), in spite of the harassing of the Fisher Flyers' John Peters (15), gets off a jump shot to score one of the eight field goals notched in the first period of the locals District 31 tournament game at Grand Forks on Wednesday night. The Prowlers defeated the Flyers, 66 to 47, and will meet the Warren Ponies tonight, Monday, at 9 p.m.

Play Semi-Finals Tonight

Prowlers Meet Ponies In District 31 Tourney

Winning their first-round games in District 31 basketball tournament play at Grand Forks on Wednesday were Crookston, East Grand Forks, Warren and Thief River Falls. These four teams will meet in semi-final encounters tonight, Monday, and the district finals will be played tomorrow night, Tuesday.

Crookston defeated the Oslo Bobcats, 56 to 51, in the tournament's opener on Wednesday afternoon. East Grand Forks bested Red Lake Falls, 64 to 52. Crookston will play East Grand Forks at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

In Wednesday evening's program the Warren Ponies, snuffing out a fourth-period threat by the Climax Vikings, scored a 56 to 51 victory. And the Thief River Falls Prowlers defeated the Fisher Flyers, 66 to 47. Warren and Thief River Falls will play the second game on Monday night's schedule, meeting at 9 p.m.

Coach Norm Wagner's Fisher Flyers caused the Prowlers some anxious moments on Wednesday night before coach Whitey Olson's squad was able to pull away from the maroon-clad Flyers in the fourth period.

The Prowlers held a 15 to 10 lead at the end of the first period, and a 32 to 26 lead at the intermission. Tommy Cummings, after hitting on a pair of field goals in the opening period, connected for six field goals in the second period.

Opening the third period, Bruce Saustad, Cummings and Mark Stromberg scored field goals to boost the Prowlers' lead to 38 to 26. Mark Brickson scored a Fisher free throw, and after Stromberg had tossed a hook shot into the east basket, Peter Rutherford notched a Fisher field goal. The Prowlers' Karl Poppenhagen was assessed his fifth personal foul with 1:55 of the period to play.

The Prowlers, on Stromberg's field goal in the final seconds of the third period, held a 47 to 36 lead moving into the final period.

Fisher made their final threat to get "back into the game" in the opening minute of the period. John Peters scored a free throw, Jim Cameron hit on a field goal, and Rutherford added two points from the free-throw line, paring the Prowler lead to five points, 47 to 42. But Cummings converted on a one-and-one foul; Stromberg, on a turn-around shot, dropped in a field goal; and Niel Josephson, who tallied eight points in the period, scored on a rebound, and then followed with a pair of free throws. The Prowlers, with a 56 to 42 lead, had control of the game and went on to win by a 66 to 47 margin.

Cummings, with 23 points, was the game's high scorer. The Flyers' Jim Cameron, with 16 points, and Pete Rutherford, with 15 points were the double-figure scorers for the losers.

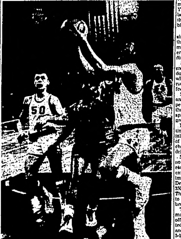
MARK Stromberg (54, of the Prowlers gets off a successful backhand shot against the Fisher Flyers in District 31 basketball tournament play at Grand Forks on Wednesday night. Fisher's Mark Brickson (45) and Jim Cameron, hidden by Brickson, attempt to break up the play. To the left are Prowlers Neil Jospehson and Tom Cummings, and in the lane is the Flyers' fine forward Pete Rutherford. The Prowleds won their opening-round tilt, 66 to 47.



KARL Poppenhagen drives in for a layup in the second period of the Prowlers opening round game against the Fisher Flyers in district tournament play on Wednesday night. At the left is the Prowlers Neil Josephson (50), and too late to stop Poppenhagen's successful shot is Fisher's Fortunato Villegas (21). The Prowlers successfully hurdled the attempts of the Flyers, winning by a 66 to 47 margin.

No Favorite

There was nothing in the play of the four winners in the opening round of the District 31 basketball tournament at Grand Forks on Wednesday that justifies establishing one of these winners—Crookston, East Grand Forks, Warren and Thief River Falls — as a favorite to win the title.

The District 31 tourney resumes play this evening, Monday, on the UND fieldhouse court. In semi-finals games tonight, the Crookston Pirates will play East Grand Forks at 7:30 p.m.; and the Thief River Falls Prowlers will face the Warren Ponies at 9 p.m. The consolation and championship finals will be played on Tuesday night, at 7:30 and 9 p.m., respectively.

A new champion will be named as last season's district winner, the Goodridge Huskies, were sidelined in last week's sub-district tournament. And the winner of Tuesday night's District 31 finals will enter Region Eight play on Friday and Saturday, March 18 and 19. The District 31 champion will play the Karlstad Rabbits of District 32, the winners over Middle River, 66 to 55, in the finals at Roseau. The other regional first-round game will pit the Ada Vikings of District 30 against the winner of the Bemidji vs. Littlefork game of District 29. Bemidji and Littlefork will play this evening at Bemidji.

But to get back to the district's first-round games of last Wednesday, Crookston, after trailing by 12 points at one time, came back to defeat the Oslo Bobcats 56 to 51; East Grand Forks defeated the Red Lake Falls Eagles, 64 to 52; the Warren Ponies defeated the Climax Vikings, 58 to 51; and the Thief River Falls Prowlers bested the Fisher Flyers, 66 to 47.

But none of these teams had a "comfortable" game. Crookston, by reason of its come-from-behind effort, perhaps showed as much tournament poise as any team. And they will need an all-out effort in this evening's game against coach Larry Selk's East Grand Forks squad.

The East Siders have had a pair of wins over Crookston this season, but tournament play is of a different category. It will be Crookston's all-round scoring balance against the two-pronged attack of the Wave's Kim Krostue, who is a threat around the basket, and guard Gary Winkka, who is a sharp-shooter from the outside. Krostue will give the Green Wave a slight edge on the boards, but the Pirates will be the quicker club. An edge for the Pirates.

And the Prowlers of coach Whitey Olson will have to hamstring the play of Warren's Pete Gilbert, who is the sparkplug for coach Irv St. John's Ponies. Gilbert, a splendid all-round athlete, is a scoring threat on drive-ins, being a left-hander; and he sets up the plays for Dave Knutson and Bruce Ranstrom. Knutson is a pretty good rebounder for the Ponies, and he gets assistance from Gilbert and Ranstrom. And Dick Engelstad, one of the smaller players in the tournament, is a nifty ball-handler, and a good shot from just off the lane.

The Prowlers should defeat the Ponies, but not by much, and not unless Cummings and Stromberg get a bunch of points, and with Neil Josephson, Karl Poppenhagen, Bruce Saustad and Bob Brodin contributing some points, too.

That's one of the weaknesses of the district's four semi-finalists, they are all plagued by lop-sided scoring, with one or two players being the prime point-getters. Crookston will rely on Norm Newell, Doug Sorenson, and Bruce Campbell; East Grand Forks has Krostue and Winkka and Rich Anderson; Warren has Gilbert and Ranstrom, with Knutson and Engelstad also threats; and the Prowlers depend on Stromberg and Cummings.

Big Snow Plagues State Deer Herd

State game and fish director Ted Shields reported today that the March 2-5 blizzard left an average of 15 to 20 inches of new snow across the northern deer range. He said that snow has now accumulated to a depth of two or three feet over much of the main deer range and that this is cause for serious concern about the welfare of the deer herd.

Although there have been only occasional scattered reports of dead fawns to-date, Shields said that because of the deep snow which seriously limits deer movements, conditions could become serious in many areas, especially if there is not an early spring break-up.

In areas around Virginia, Cloquet, Grand Rapids and some other parts of the range, deer are still being supported by the old snow crust. In these areas they should be able to continue to move out of yarding areas to obtain food.

Shields said all available field crews are working to cut natural browse for deer feed in critical areas. Four new crews are being employed immediately in the Bemidji area to supplement the 12 N.Y.C. and forestry crews which had been working on browse cutting in the main deer range prior to the blizzard.

Shields urged sportsmen to assist with browse cutting and said they should contact local department fieldmen and county and federal forestry agencies to help coordinate cutting activities.

Sportsmen are urged to use snowmobiles or snowshoes to pack down trails to guide deer to areas where there is food. A circular route leading from the yard to the feeding area and return is best.

Shields said that a loss of fawns and some older deer has been expected in critical areas. He added that if there should be a late spring break-up, deer in other age groups could also suffer mortality.

Department fieldmen will continue with their ground and aerial checks to determine the ability of deer to move about. Ground checks have been hampered by drifted snow.

Shields said sportsmen who have not obtained a copy of the Minnesota plan, for emergency winter care of deer and for deer yard improvement should write to the Department of Conservation, Room 350 Centennial Building, St. Paul. This plan explains the procedure to be followed for emergency deer browse cutting measures.

The blizzard missed most of the main pheasant range, said game officials. But in those areas affected, including the Appleton, Morris and Fergus Falls areas, there was 5-15 inches of snow.

Early indications are that pheasant storm mortality was generally very light. Cover areas such as marshes were almost empty of snow before the storm and the birds were able to find good protection in these areas.

State game managers said it was demonstrated again that wetlands, such as those being acquired under the "Save Minnesota's Wetlands" program, provide good winter storm cover for pheasants as well as breeding grounds for waterfowl and other wildlife species.

Shields reported that the pheasants have had a good supply of food this winter. There was less acreage plowed last fall and there has been some standing corn this winter. In addition there has been relatively little snow throughout most of the Minnesota pheasant range.

North Dakota and north central South Dakota suffered serious losses of pheasants during the blizzard, according to conservation department authorities. However, eastern and southeastern South Dakota suffered only light pheasant mortality.

Many Benefits Offered Under VA Program

Veterans readjustment Benfits Act of 1966 which was signed into law March 3 by President Johnson, provides a permanent program of benefits for veterans who have served or who will serve in the U. S. Armed Forces since Jan. 31, 1955, according to John R. Murphy, manager of the Veterans Administration center in St. Paul.

Chief among these benefits will be education home loan guaranty and the extension of VA hospital benefits on the same priority basis as for wartime veterans. Murphy said that approximately four million veterans discharged from the service since Jan. 31, 1955, ranging from "Cold War" veterans to those now on duty in Viet Nam, become eligible for benefits somewhat similar to those granted the veterans of World War II and the Korean conflict.

At the same time, provision has been made for 600,000 additional veterans who will be returning to civilian life each calendar year to participate in the same benefits.

In all cases, Murphy said, to be eligible, the veteran must have discharges that are other than dishonorable and they must not already have used up their eligibility under previous programs. All the new benefits, with the exception of the educational assistance program, went into effect immediately upon the President's signing of the bill. The educational assistance provisions will go into effect June 1.

Murphy said that the benefits established by the new law are: educational assistance, home and farm loans, medical care, job counseling, job placement, federal employment preference and the issuance of burial flags. Murphy provided a brief summary of each as follows:

EDUCATION. Veterans with more than 180 days active duty, any part of which occurred on or after February 1, 1955, will be eligible for one month of college, vocational or similar education for each month or fraction of a month on active duty. Those taking full-time courses will receive $100 per month if they have no dependents; $125 a month with one dependent, and $150 a month with more than one dependent.

Proportional rates will be paid for part-time courses. The income of the veteran will not be considered. Application blanks and full information will be available at VA offices and at colleges and educational centers sometime in April, well in advance of the June 1, 1966, starting date. The maximum period allowed will be 36 months but this may be reduced by the amount of educational assistance previously received under a VA educational program.

Since the program starts by law on June 1, 1966, there can be no retroactive payments. There is no deadline date to enter upon the educational program and veterans will have eight years from the date of their last discharge from active service to complete their courses; however, the first cut-off date will not be until March 3, 1974.

Veterans interested in the educational benefits are reminded that they cannot start any courses until June 1, 1966, and it will not be until mid-April that the proper forms and instructions will be ready, Murphy said.

LOAN PROGRAM. Veterans with more than 180 days of active duty will be eligible for VA guaranteed home or farm loans or VA direct home loan areas where such loans are authorized. They will have until 10 years after the date of their last discharge from active service plus one year additional for each three-month period of active service to make such a loan, with maximum deadline date of 20 years after the date of discharge from the qualifying service.

For those veterans who have already been out of the service for a period of years, a minimum entitlement date has been set at 10 years. VA guaranteed loans will be made at a 5¼ per cent interest rate. The new law authorizes the administrator of veterans affairs to establish an interst rate as he determines the requirements of the loan market, but not to exceed the rate in effect for loans insured by FHA.

A one-time non-recurring fee not to exceed one-half of one per cent of the loan amount is payable by the veteran but may be included in the loan and collected by the lender. However, it must be remitted to the VA before a guaranty certificate may be issued. In the direct loan program, the new law rises the maximum loan possible from $15,000 to $17,500.

Veterans with unused and unexpired World War II or Korean conflict entitlement will have that previous entitlement cancelled and will become eligible under the new law alone. However, during the period their cancelled entitlement would have been available, such veterans not only need not pay the statutory guaranty or direct loan fee under the new law but they may also secure loans for business purposes as well as for home and farm purposes.

Murphy said that both the educational assistance and loan guaranty provisions of the new law will apply to those persons who remain in the service after two years of military duty.

MEDICAL CARE. Veterans who have served after Jan. 31, 1955, will be eligible for admission to VA hospitals on the same basis as wartime veterans. Murphy said the priorities are:

First—Veterans with service-connected disabilities have top priority for admission; second—Veterans with service connected disabilities but who are seeking treatment for some other ailment will be admitted as beds are available; and third—Veterans without service-connected disabilities may be admitted to VA hospitals if (1) hospitalization is deemed necessary, (2) they are financially unable to defray the cost of the hospitalization, and (3) beds are available.

OTHER BENEFITS. The new law also makes provisions for job counseling and job placement, both of these under the auspices of the Veterans Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor, and Civil Service preference in federal employment. A United States flag will be provided for use at the funeral of veterans who have served after Jan. 31, 1955, and to be retained by the next of kin.

Veterans who believe they are eligible for any of these benefits, except the educational assistance program, can write, telephone or visit the contact office at the VA Center, Ft. Snelling.

State Employment Service Leads in Job Placements

Offices of the Minnesota State Employment service led all states in the percentage increase of placements in 1965, compared to 1964, according to Robert J. Brown, commissioner of the Department of Employment security. The 35 offices of the state employment service placed 111,090 persons on nonagricultural jobs last year, an increase of 23,920 over 1964, to register the 27.4 percentage increase.

Michigan registered the second highest percentage increase of any state, with 16.5 per cent. Only 10 states had percentage increases of 10 per cent or more, and the increase nationwide was 3.1 per cent over the 1964 figure.

Placement increases were registered in most major industrial groups, with an increase of almost 7,000 (24.8 per cent) placements in manufacturing categories.

Brown said that the placement increases were quite general throughout the state with all five employment service districts showing gains. Minnesota also recorded more job placements in each month of 1965 than were made for the corresponding months of 1964, according to Brown.

Placement of youth under 22 years of age registered a 50 per cent increase over 1964; almost 45,000 non-farm job placements were made in this category. The age group 22-44, however, accounted for the greatest number of placements, comprising 42 per cent of the total last year. Eleven per cent were in the over-45 age group.

Almost 18,000 more new applications were taken in 1965 by Minnesota State Employment service offices than in 1964, according to Brown; with over 200,000 new applicants being registered.

Employment service staff also made 21,000 visits to employers of the state in promoting agency services, and made approximately 25,000 telephone contacts in promotion of jobs and services.

Restrictions on Highways in Area Go Into Effect

Spring break-up has made it necessary to place seasonal load restrictions in effect in Zone five on Friday, March 11, and in Zones 6 on Monday, March 14, according to the Minnesota highway department. This means that all roads on the proposed load restriction map for 1966 will be in effect.

Posted signs govern the restriction on each section of highway. Vehicles operating on nonrestricted roads are subject to the usual statutory weight limitations.

No permits for overweight axel loads exceeding legal or posted axel weights will be issued during the period when load restrictions become effective in the various zones.

WILDLIFE WEEK MAR. 20-26

A proclamation for National Wildlife Week was issued by Gov. Karl Rolvaag to state chairman Roger Preuss, of Minneapolis. Errol Olson, left, Parkers Prairie, state president of Future Farmers of America, and state FFA chapters are participating in the statewide observance. County chairmen, sportsmen's clubs, civic groups and the Conservation Department are cooperating in observing the theme "Preserve Natural Beauty." The event is co-sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation and the Minnesota Conservation Federation.

Easter Seals Not Providing Funds To Camp Courage

"Camp Courage and the other services provided crippled children by the Minnesota Society for Crippled Children and Adults (MISCCA) are in no way supported by the Easter Seal society," according to W. B. Schoenbohm, executive director MISCCA.

"This statement is released," Shoenbohm continued, "to answer the many questions we are receiving from Minnesotans who have received an Easter Seal appeal.

"It is important that people realize that the current drive by the National Easter Seal Society does not support any programs sponsored by MISCCA; such as, Camp Courage; rehabilitation centers in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Virginia, Mankato, Montevideo and Duluth; sheltered workshops in Austin and Rochester; MISCCA's loan equipment program; day camping, research and education."

Schoenbohm went on to explain that these programs are supported through the United Fund or Community Chest drives throughout the state, through the Crippled Children's Appeal in non-United Fund areas, and through special contributions. The Minnesota Society for Crippled Children and Adults joined the United Fund Movement in 1961 to reduce fund-raising costs and provide greater service to Minnesota's handicapped. The National Easter Seal society opposed joining United Funds and subsequently disaffiliated MISCCA.

In 1964, the National Easter Seal Society started an Easter Seal campaign in Minnesota. This has resulted in widespread confusion which makes it necessary for MISCCA to emphasize that it is no longer in any way connected with Easter Seals and its program receives no support from the Easter Seal campaign.

Allen Horning Is Crewmember of Broadcast Plane

Aviation Electrician's Mate First Class Allen S. Horning, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin C. Horning of Rt. 2, Goodridge, is a crewmember of the flying radio and television stations in Vietnam.

He is participating in the Oceangraphic Air Survey Unit's Project "Jenny," broadcasting radio and television programs to American troops from three aircraft, two of which have been transformed into flying television stations, and a third into a radio station.

The first use to Project Jenny was the broadcasting of the World Series. The first game was broadcast live, but because of the time difference, the rest were taped by the Armed Forces Radio and Television Service in Saigon and rebroadcast from OASU's "Supper Constallations."

The TV-equipped aircraft are capable of broadcasting two channels simultaneously.

These broadcast services have proven to be such a morale boost to American troops fighting the Vietnamese war that Project Jenny's flying radio and television stations will remain in Vietnam until ground stations are completed.

The Oceanographic Air Survey Unit is normally based at the Naval Air Station in Patuxent River, Md.

North Central Notes Most Profitable Year

In 1965 North Central airlines achieved the greatest year of growth and earned the largest profit in its history, according to Hal N. Carr, president, quoting from the company's annual report. Revenues reached an all-time high of $33,891,031. Net earnings were $1,138,752—35 per cent ahead of 1964.

Carr reported that operating expenses for the year were $31,324,601, with $1,997,488 in depreciation charges, resulting in an operating profit of $2,566,430. After income taxes of $1,013,765 the net profit was $1,138,752. These earnings, combined with depreciation, developed cash flow of $3,136,240.

The airline earned the record profit for 1965 despite a $760,000 return of excess profits to the federal government under the class rate for regional airlines, Carr said. North Central's record commercial revenues—combined with its cost control program placed the company in this profit-sharing position for the fifth consecutive year.

North Central broke all traffic records in 1965 as passenger boardings exceeded 1964 by almost 20 per cent and cargo increased 31 per cent. Some 263,599 more passengers were flown during the year than in 1964—the highest passenger increase ever achieved by the airline.

The Northliners carried a record 1,616,900 passengers in 1965, and flew 273,209,300 passenger miles, a gain of 19 per cent over the previous year.

Substantial gains in cargo were also achieved by the company in 1965 as a record 40,982,213 pounds of air freight, express, and mail were carried.

Total cargo ton miles flown were 3,807,677, an increase of 32 per cent over 1964. Air freight ton miles reached 2,073,559 37 per cent ahead; and air express was 1,023,685, a 32 per cent gain. Mail increased 21 per cent during 1965, with 710,433 ton miles flown.

A 10-jet program was announced by the company in July 1965. The airline has ordered Douglas DC-9 jet aircraft for inauguration of service on its system early in 1967. The agreement with the Douglas Aircraft company includes an initial purchase of five of the new 100-passenger twin-jets, including parts, at a cost of $20 million and an option for five additional aircraft.

During 1965, a $17-million line of credit for financing the airline's jet acquisition program was established with a group of 15 banks at an interest rate of 5½ per cent. This extremely favorable rate was obtained because of North Central's strong financial position—the best in its history.

In line with the company's equipment modernization program, six more pressurized Convair 440 aircraft were added during the year and one early in 1966, bringing the fleet to 30 Convairs and 18 DC-3's. Over 90 per cent of the airline's seat miles are now flown with Convair aircraft.

To selected villages in Vietnam, inhabited mostly by resettlers from Viet Cong areas, CARE gave hand tools to each family and monthly rations of rice and salt to supplement what food they could raise. At the end of 6 months no more rice and salt was given; the recipients were living on their own crops which the CARE tools helped them plant and harvest.

The Coast Guard aviation center in Elizabeth City, N. C. is scheduled to begin construction this year of a round barracks, a "first" in the construction of military barracks.

"It is a pleasant fact that you will know no man long, however low in the social scale, however poor, miserable, intemperate, and worthless he may appear to be, a mere burden to society, but you will find at last there is something which he understands and can do better than any other."
—Henry David Thoreau

An Editor Speaks

Judged as the best editorial in Minnesota newspapers last year was a widely reprinted article by Alan C. McIntosh, publisher of the Rock County Star-Herald at Luverne. Several people who have received reprints or clippings from other papers in which it appeared have asked that it be published in the Times editorial columns. It's a great one—and we clipped it some time ago for future use. Entitled "A Tired American Gets Angry", the editorial is as follows:

I'm tired of being called the "Ugly American."

I'm tired of having the world panhandlers use my country as a whipping boy 365 days a year.

I am a "tired American"—weary of having American embassies and information centers stoned, burned and sacked by mobs operating under orders from dictators who preach "peace" and breed conflict.

I am a "tired American"—weary of being lectured by General DeGaulle (who never won a battle) who poses as a second Jehovah in righteousness and wisdom.

I am a "tired American". . .weary of Nasser and all the other blood sucking leeches who bleed Uncle Sam white and who kick him on the shins and yank his beard if the cash flow falters.

I am a "tired American". . .choked up to here on this business of trying to intimidate our government by placard, picket line and sit-in by the hordes of the dirty unwashed who rush to man the barricades against the forces of law, order and decency.

I am a "tired American". . .weary of the beatniks who say they should have the right to determine what laws of the land they are willing to obey.

"I am a "tired American". . .fed up with mobs of scabby faced, long haired youths and short haired girls who claim they represent the "new wave" of America and who sneer at the old fashioned virtues of honesty, integrity, morality on which America grew to greatness.

I am a "tired American". . .weary unto death of having my tax dollars go to dictators who play both sides against the middle with threats of what will happen if we cut off the golden stream of dollars.

I am a "tired American". . .nauseated by the lazy do nothings who wouldn't take a job if you drove them to and from work in a Rolls Royce.

I am a "tired American" who is tired of supporting families who haven't known any other source of income other than government relief checks for three generations.

I am a "tired American" who is getting madder by the minute at the filth peddlers who have launched America in an obscenity race. . .who try to foist on us the belief that filth is an integral part of culture. . .in the arts, the movies, "literature," the stage and the mobs who see Lenny Bruce as "brightly amusing" and Norman Mailer as "compelling."

I'm tired of these "artists" who scavenge in the cess pools for inspiration and who refuse to look up at the stars.

I am a "tired American". . .weary of the bearded bums who tramp the picket lines . . .and the sit-ins. . .who prefer Chinese communism to capitalism. . .who see no evil in Castro but sneer at President Johnson as a "threat to peace."

I am a "tired American" who has lost all patience with that civil rights group which is showing propaganda movies on college campuses from coast to coast. Movies denouncing the United States. Movies made in Communist China.

I am a "tired American" who is angered by the self righteous "breast beater" critics of America, at home and abroad, who set impossible yardsticks for the United States but never apply the same standards to the French, the British, the Russians, the Chinese.

I am a "tired American" who resents the pimply faced beatniks who try to represent Americans as the "bad guys on the black horses."

I am a "tired American" who is weary of some Negro leaders, who, for shock purposes, scream four letter words in church meetings.

I am a "tired American"—sickened by the slack jawed bigots who wrap themselves in bedsheets in the dead of night and roam the countryside looking for innocent victims.

I am a "tired American" who dislikes clergymen who have made a career out of integration causes yet send their own children to private schools.

I am a "tired American" who resents those who try to peddle the belief in schools and colleges that capitalism is a dirty word and that free enterprise and private intiative ar only synonyms for greed.

They say they hate capitalism but they are always right at the head of the line demanding their share of the American way of life.

I am a "tired American" who gets more than a little bit weary of the claque in our State Department who choose to regard a policy of timidity as prudent. . .the same group who subscribe to a "no win" policy in Viet Nam.

I am a "tired American". . .real tired of those who are trying to sell me the belief that America is not the greatest nation in all the world. . .a generous hearted nation . . .a nation dedicated to the policy of trying to help the "have nots" achieve some of the good things that our system of free enterprise brought about.

I am an American who gets a lump in this throat when he hears the "Star Spangled Banner" and who holds back the tears when he hears those chilling high notes of the brassy trumpets when Old Glory reaches the top of the flag pole.

I am a "tired American". . .who wants to start snapping at those phoney "high priests" who want us to bow down and worship their false idols and who seek to destroy the belief that America is the land of the free and the home of the brave.

I am a "tired American" who thanks a merciful Lord that he was so lucky to be born an American citizen. . .a nation. . . . under God. . .with truly mercy and justice . . .for all.

Government Handouts

Much has been written and will continue to be written about government handouts to communities, organizations, blocs, foreign nations, minority groups and others in some form or another. They find favor with those who receive them, but irk the taxpayer who is required by law to support them.

The following comments, however, are not related to that particular type of handout. We rather refer to the "news release" type of handout which fills our mail each day and which finds it way into many newspapers throughout the land. There is no better name for most of it than free propaganda, and few are the governmental departments that do not submit such items to the nation's editors.

Several of these "handouts" which we have received recently have combined to compel us to write this note of complaint. (And several of the departments or agencies sending the material have received our personal letter registering the same type of complaint.)

The Social Security administration and the Office of Economic Opportunity have solicited newspaper assistance in publicizing the medicare program. Social security officials have sent a number of articles of "general interest" which urge all persons over 65 years of age to apply for "medicare benefits." The Office of Economic Opportunity approved the first program for the local Tri-County Community council office at Oklee—a government-orginated project to send local people to visit others in the community and find out why they had not applied for medicare. Publicity—free publicity—was asked and granted for this "public service" project.

Reams of publicity material were sent, and are still being sent, by the Veterans Administration in regard to several types of GI insurance. We believe veterans to be interested, so we run a few of these articles.

In all these cases, however, we comply with the requests most reluctantly. Why should Uncle Sam get a free piggy-back ride from the news media on hospitalization or other insurance when private, tax-paying companies must purchase their advertising at regular rates?

We receive a flood of "news releases" from the Labor Department, advocating pet programs; the Department of Agriculture, trying to explain its unreadable and unworkable programs; the Internal Revenue service, seeking to lighten its load under the pretext of "public service"; the Peace Corps, Job Corps, Youth Corps and branches of military service, all seeking free space for their recruitment programs; and the list of government sources seeking something for nothing grows day by day.

Two requests received last week put the icing on the "handout" cake. The Department of the Interior, mind you, sent out a mat containing a photo and a recipe on how to prepare a certain type of fish dish. How the Department of the Interior figures in the fish market business is a puzzle to us, but we imagine the supreme court—in a 47-page opinion with 36 pages of dissent—could provide a logical explanation.

Then came a letter from the Civil Service commission, listing a number of job vacancies and the virtues of each position. Any self-respecting private business would consider such material appropriate for the "Help Wanted" column on the classified page, but the Civil Service boys wanted a half-column of "public service" space for free.

This sleight-of-hand performance in the name of "public service" becomes more than a trifle annoying at times. Not only does the government compete with private enterprise in a number of fields, offer itself tax advantages and use public funds to cover its losses, it also expects free publicity. Would anyone but government officials spawn that type if thinking?

The Library Corner

By Flora Allison

A pot-pourri of ideas, with library week slated for the third week of April, today's column will thus touch on many things. Let's start out by talking about bargains, a good topic for any week in the year. We're specifically interested in the big one awaiting our friends in neighboring counties, that of membership in the library, with a small investment bringing such surprising returns in reading pleasure.

You and the entire family can enjoy all that's printed, from the distant years clothed in the shadows of the past, to the exploding brilliance that is Today, and an insight into what lies ahead. Betwixt and between, there's material on and for the retarded, for slow readers, song and game books, party ideas, home decorating hints, pasttime pursuits of all kinds, hints on amusing sick youngsters, books to peer over at the breakfast table, to ride to work by (provided you leave the driving to the other guy); books to lead you into slumber; books to pick up in the night when sleep eludes you.

There are even, we venture to suggest, books to read during sermons (works on concentration, what else?) cook books, craft books, anything to suit your whims. And cook books! Do we have cook books! Remember the foreign dishes Mother used to make? You just might be able to find the recipes here. There's one on wine cookery, where the flavor lingers while the rest is lost in steam, but who cares, it tasts divine!

Fellas, you'll relish one called "The Stag at Ease". Surprising and intriguing title, isn't it? The preferred foods of many of the unforgettable males in history are revealed by the men in question, and their disclosures may surprise you. The men confess all . . in their versatile and amusing individual approaches. There's Robert Benchley contributing, and Franklin D. Roosevelt; Thurston, the magician; Stefansson, the Arctic explorer; Ogden Nash, the controversial poet; and a list of others reading like a Who's Who. You'll like it.

"Children of Allah", by Agnes Keith (whom you'll remember as the author of "Three Came Home", the brutal story of the Bataan death march, which she survived), also writes feelingly and factually of the natives of Libya among whom she lived for nine years. Gaining the respect of the people, she was able to enter otherwise forbidden doors and discover the secrets of the women who still in most cases wear veils over their faces, and to see the fears and the apathy of children living in wind-ravaged tents, many becoming victims of trachoma and accepting their plight as do their elders, as the will of Allah.

She knows the knack of opening these secret doors in exotic lands, having done so in Borneo, the Philippines, and now in the blistering vastness of the country that is between the Sarnha and the son, where a struggle is being made by valiant people and their sympathetic and forward-moving kin in reaching for the light of a better world. Illuminating and movingly human. You'll like this one.

"High Dam at Aswan" by Tom Little is written with authority and impact by a man who walked the deserts of Egypt during his life there and still returns periodically in his wide travels. With a locale steeped in antiquity, the story unfolds the stupendous plan for taming the Nile. Scheduled for completion in 1968, the dam, one of the most ambitious projects ever undertaken, will swamp history that is thousands of years old.

A mammoth moving project is now underway to move these ancient statues, etc., to a new location before the sweeping change that can rewrite the story of Egypt is told in the book, "Abu Simbel", by W. MacQuitty, also at the library. By diverting the waters of the Nile and storing vast amounts for the needs of the years of her new planned growth; the dam will write "finis" to Egypt's dependence on the annual overflow of the vital river waters. It is the dream of its planners that the desert will flourish where now the parched and rainless wastelands are at the mercy of the brutal sun.

We have access to copies of the Readers Digest in large type for those requesting them. They will be supplied to us by the library department at St. Paul and will be available on loan the same as books.

"Eyeball to eyeball" confrontation is the humorous way the author of "Letters to Karen" leads into a chapter in this illuminating book designed as a "how to" for keeping love in marriage. Couched in the language of the day, and written without stuffiness, but with a gloves-off directness that young moderns will "dig", the book can be categorized as a bible for the about-to-be married, newlyweds and those who are old hands at the game.

Written by a clergyman, Charlie W. Shedd, the book is a series of letters to his newly-engaged daughter and reflects love, tact and the realism acquired by years of experience as a father, preacher and counselor. A series of shared confidences, it might have been exchanges over coffee cups in the morning, and is aimed at heading off troubles on the marital sea. Problems discussed are sex, money management, the importance of communication, housekeeping, interests outside the home, weathering the storms of marriage and of life in general, and all come in for the full treatment, with no mincing of words. It's a little marriage manual, a blueprint for the joining of two hearts. Ask for it. It's a gem, and so readable; no preaching.

We're letting you in on a little secret. . .thee'll be story hour again this spring, and very soon, too. Each Saturday, beginning March 26, and throughout the month of April, we'll entertain and instruct your little people from ages three through five in the board room of the library, at two o'clock. It'll be a sit-on-the-floor informal kind of hour, with story telling, finger games, nursery rhymes to learn, and in general, we hope to make it an introduction to the library for the tots and their parents. Afterward, you can bring them upstairs and select, or help them select, books for their reading pleasure. Children under six can borrow books their parents want for them, and they are borrowed on the parents' cards. All kiddies in these age groups are welcome. We'll tell you more about it next week, so be thinking about this in the meantime.

~~As always, see you at the library.~~

Appearing in newspapers of the Minnesota Editorial Association through the cooperation of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture

Probably no single crop has a rosier outlook than soybeans, all to the delight of Minnesota farmers. Nationally, more than 840 million bushels were produced in 1965, of which 57 million were produced in Minnesota alone. That meant $136.8 million in gross farm receipts to Minnesota farmers, an all-time record.

This is an increase from under 44 million bushels and under $100 million from that crop in the state in 1955.

Why so much demand for soybeans? One reason is the overseas market. In recent years whole soybean exports have accounted for about 27 per cent of total U. S. supplies.

Furthermore, about 14 per cent of U. S. Soybean meal output and about 10 per cent of U. S. soybean oil production is exported for dollars. And another 13 per cent of our soybean oil goes abroad under the Food for Peace program.

This world demand is now being studied at the University of Minnesota, under a U. S. Department of Agriculture grant, by economist James P. Houck. Specifically, he will project the demand for soybeans and soybean products in Canada, Western Europe, Japan, Formosa, Israel and other markets for 1967-72.

Earlier studies have shown, according to Houck, that demand for soybean oil is closely linked to demand for other food fats and oils. For soybean meal, demand is tied to demand for other feeds.

Currently, the only negative aspect of the soybean picture is oil, for which there is currently some downward pressure on prices. However, the overall bean price is buoyed up by the soybean meal demand for livestock feed, here and overseas.

At any rate, soybean production is being encouraged this year in various ways. While soybeans are not classified as "feed grains" under federal farm programs, they do figure in the feed grain program this year.

Since the soybean carryover this year will be small, the USDA this year will permit soybeans to be grown on some of the feed grain acreage in the government's voluntary program. For example, a farmer with a 100-acre base can raise soybeans on up to 50 of these acres and receive the support payments for beans (or market payments) and in addition receive a direct support payment for the corn which would have been raised on that land otherwise.

This feature may be of special interest, Houck says, in some southern and northwest counties.

Girls Scouts Will Conduct Cookie Sale This Week

Junior, Cadette and Senior Girl Scouts will participate in the annual cookie sale again, according to Mrs. Gordon Bonde, Grand Forks, council cookie chairman. The sale will commence on Saturday, March 19 and continue through March 26.

The council-wide goal is for each girl to sell 25 packages. However, each troop averaging 15 or more boxes per girl receives a greater share of the profits in the form of an incentive award which it may use to further its own troop program.

Pine to Prairie Girl Scout council uses its portion of the money to further the scouting opportunities for girls through helping to finance camping, organizing new troops, training leaders and paying for expenses over and above those contributed by the United Funds or Community Chests and council campaigns.

Also, the cookie sale provides the opportunity for the girls to learn and put into action lessons in citizenship, salesmanship, courtesy, responsibility and good manners. Average number of packages sold by each girl in Thief River Falls in 1965 was 8.9.

Mrs. Tom Fuller is community cookie captain in Thief River Falls for 1966 and may be contacted for any information.

Mrs. Jaycees To Hold Babysitter Seminar Again

Thief River Falls Mrs. Jaycees will conduct a five-session clinic for babysitters beginning Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the basement meeting room of the Pennington county courthouse. The meeting will last from half an hour to 45 minutes. Registration fee for the five sessions will be one dollar.

Talks will be given during the meetings on March 22 and 29 and April 5, 12 and 19 by nurses, civil defense authorities, fire chief, mothers, police chief, kindergarten teacher and an instructor in artificial respiration.

A test will be given at the end of the course and a list of all those passing the test will be compiled into a booklet together with their addresses and telephone numbers. The book will be distributed to mothers in the Thief River Falls area.

The Mrs. Jaycees committee members suggest that mothers who have a regular babysitter pay her registration to attend the course. Training to be offered will prove valuable to all babysitters attending.

Coop Shows Drop in Sales Of $188,000

In spite of a decrease in total sales of more than $188,000 from the previous year, Consumers Cooperative association in Thief River Falls showed a net margin of $20,709 on 1965 business. This information was included in the annual report presented Saturday at the annual meeting of the cooperative held in the Thief River Falls city auditorium.

Gunsten Skomedal and Silas Hanson were reelected to three-year terms on the board of directors at the annual meeting. At a reorganization of the board the same day, Skomedal was re-elected president; Hanson, vice president; and Harry Solberg, secretary-treasurer. Other directors include Curtis Johnson, Oscar Lundeen, Henry Williams and Leonard Skaar.

Total sales of the cooperative were $875,932 in 1965 as compared with $1,064,236 the previous year. Cost of sales declined to $690,114 from $827,723 to leave a gross margin of $185,818 or 21.21 per cent of sales.

Total operating expenses were $155,066 including $101,335 for merchandising, $25,965 for administrative and $27,765 for general expenses including taxes, insurance, depreciation, interest and other expense. Net operating margin was $30,751 in 1965 as compared with $71,755 in 1964. During the year the cooperative paid out nearly $95,000 in salaries and wages for employees in its several departments.

Current assets of the cooperative total $320,897 while total assets amount to $625,559. Fixed assets include $19,134 in land $120,242 in buildings, $44,827 in equipment, $14,008 in bulk plant and $53,043 in delivery equipment.

School Board Adopts New Salary Schedule

Approval of a salary schedule for 1966-1967 in the Thief River Falls school district, acceptance of five resignations and several other items of business were transacted Monday evening at the regular March meeting of the local board of education. The schedule adopted was virtually the same as that reported in the Times following a special board session two weeks ago.

The board is placing increased emphasis on advanced education for local school instructors. The salary schedule states, "Each teacher with less than a Master's degree shall be required to attend school every four years and receive a minimum of six semester or nine quarter hours of work in order to advance in salary. All such class work should be part of a planned program for an advanced degree."

The schedule further states: "Work done beyond the Bachelor's degree shall be on the graduate level and shall be in the teaching field of the individual. Any exceptions to this rule will be made by the board of education upon recommendation of the administration, (i.e. a teacher who does not meet this requirement and is on the fourth step ($5,800) the salary will remain frozen at $5,800 regardless if the schedule changes in the future or not)."

Annual increments in salary shall be contingent upon satisfactory service and the board maintains the right to withhold increments. Maximum raise for 1966-67 will be $500 excepting for the three-year person going to a Bachelor's degree. It is anticipated that the board will attempt to place all teachers on schedule in 1967-68.

Resignations accepted at the meeting were from Jack Coombe, sixth grade teacher at Washington; Genevieve Hutmacher, business teacher at Lincoln; Thora Skomedal, English teacher at Lincoln; Katherine Ulrick, girl's physical education at Lincoln; and Claudia Paulson, business education at Lincoln.

Supt. M. R. Hankerson reported on a meeting which he and Arnt Aune, director of the vocational - technical school, held with officials of the state department of education relative to local vocational school potential. Present enrollment and facilities were reviewed. State officials indicated that a new building having about 40,000 square feet of space would be adequate to provide room for existing rentals, heating plant, corridors, rest rooms, storage, offices and other needs.

John LaBonte, who has been principal at Franklin Junior high school since Francis Hamerlinck has been serving as administrative assistant in the district, indicated a desire to return to classroom teaching. The board honored the request in accord with an earlier agreement, and the change will be effective beginning the 1966-67 term.

DRIVING under the basket for a reverse layup, Karl Poppenhagen of the Prowlers scores two points in opening period action Monday evening against the Warren Ponies in semi-final action of the District 31 tournament. Peter Gilbert of the Ponies tries unsuccessfully to stop the shot while Dick Engelstad moves in for a possible rebound. A first period lead gained by the Prowlers carried them through the game to a 49-42 victory as Bob Brodin tallied 21 points in the winning cause. Rosengren Heads History Society Insight into activities of the Minnesota Historical society was presented by Neil Mattson of Warren at the annual meeting of the Pennington County Historical society Monday evening in the Odd Fellows hall in Thief River Falls. Mattson is vice president of the state organization.

Joel Rosengren was reelected president of the county society for the coming year and all other remaining officers and directors were reelected. They include Martin Gulbranson, first vice president; Henry Dahlen, second vice president; Ole Lerol, third vice president; Millard A. Nelson, secretary; Paul Roy, treasurer; Ernest Swanson, Art Rambeck, Geneva Overum, Adam Lendobeja and Bert Vigen, directors. Edgar Naplin was elected as a new director on the board.

Secretary Nelson reviewed activities for the past year, noting that progress has been made on the society's plans to secure several old buildings for preservation as historical items. Arrangements have been made to obtain the Lanstad church, former Myrom log house and an old school building. Plans are to furnish the buildings with original items and to place them together in a public area where they can be viewed by the public.

Also mentioned by the secretary were the society's booth at the Pennington county fair, attempts by the organization to find a more suitable home for its historical museum and several special meetings which board members had held or attended.

Addressing the group in behalf of the state historical society, Mattson invited the local society members to visit the state society and to take part in one or more of the many tours when the state organization sponsors. He showed several reproductions of historical paintings which the state society offers for sale.

Noting that the Minnesota Historical society is a million-dollar a year organization, the state vice president expressed the society's appreciation of the work done in its behalf by Rep. Andrew Skaar of Thief River Falls at the last legislative session.

More Than 1,000 "Shots" Given in Local Schools

February was immunization month in Thief River Falls schools, according to Mrs. Margaret Race, public health nurse. A total of 760 booster shots for diphtheria-tetanus were given as well as 420 smallpox vaccinations.

"Each year the third, sixth, ninth and 12th graders are encouraged to bring their protection up to date by offering an immunization program at reduced prices," Mrs. Race said.

"Third graders received their shots at the school, but all older students were considered old enough to receive the immunization at local clinics. Participation in this year's program was exceptionally good; there were 65 more diphtheria - tetanus boosters given this year than last and 80 more smallpox vaccinations."

Percentage of protection through immunization now includes 100 per cent for third graders, Mrs. Race said. Sixth graders are 98 per cent protected, freshmen are 95 per cent protected and seniors are 80 per cent protected.

Polio protection among Thief River Falls school children is estimated at 90 to 95 per cent. Oral polio vaccine is available at local clinics for those who have missed previous clinics, Mrs. Race added.

VICTIM of starvation caused by severe winter weather was this fawn which was found dead Saturday by a browse-cutting crew working on Randen Ridge east of Highway 89. Handicapped by a missing front leg, lost by accident or a poorly aimed rifle shot, the animal was unable to get to food in the deep snow and succumbed. An examination of the bone marrow by state area game manager and biologist Robert Farmes proved that death was caused by starvation. This was one of 10 dead deer found in the immediate area.

projects, he said, is the complete restoration of Ft. Snelling to its original condition. Actual detailed plans of the original fort were found in the national archives in Washington, D.C., he said, and are being used in the 10-year project which is budgeted to cost $1,800,000.

Turning to work on the county level, Mattson told of the Marshall county society's organizational structure and its method of financing. The Marshall county organization received a half mill levy from the county board for his historical purposes, and has received this amount since the Minnesota Statehood centennial year in 1958. It budgets to spend half of the levy annually and has been dedicating the remainder to a building fund for a museum. At present the society has a balance of approximately $25,000 in its treasury.

"It is every bit the responsibility of the county to record the past as it is to take care of the present and prepare for the future," he stated. "There is a tremendous interest in history throughout the state." He encouraged the Pennington county group to continue in its efforts to secure annual funds for operation.

Emergency Deer Feeding Required to Save Animals

by Jim Wills
Times Reporter

Despite concern for the survival of the winter-starved Minnesota deer herd, and the widespread publicity that the plight of the deer has been given, most sportsmen have been more prone to shout "Why don't they do something" than to contribute their time and energy to provide the endangered game with food. During the past week, particularly last week-end, dedicated sportsmen aided by heavy machinery, have made considerable headway in trail-blazing and browse-cutting in some areas, but these men represent a small minority of the state's deer hunters.

Saturday morning a crew of about 20 men, chiefly members of the Pennington County Sportsmen club, journeyed to the portion of the Thief Lake Wildlife area east of Highway 89 on Randen Ridge to help alleviate the situation in that area. Snow was found to be about 30 inches deep, making snowshoes or skis a necessity for foot travel. Several snowmobiles were used to create packed trails through the woods, but they often bogged down in the deep snow. The project was directed by Robert Farmes, Game and Fish division biologist for this area.

Deer trails were found to be numerous and well-traveled in the area of cedar growth, though not as much so as before the recent blizzard. Snow was trampled beneath cedar trees, and branches were mostly out of reach of even the long-legged bucks. Much uneaten browse was noted away from the well-defined trails, making apparent the need for additional navigable trails. Ten dead deer were found, and a number of live ones were seen. Cedars were not cut down due to their value as cover, which is at a premium in this area.

Probably the greatest single aid to the deer's survival was a bulldozer operated by Donald Larson of Holt which appeared on the scene late Saturday afternoon. By Sunday noon the machine had cleared a sizeable network of trails on the wooded slope, packing the snow to a hardened surface and knocking down small saplings. Men who lacked snowshoes were able to walk on the dozer track and cut browse along the trail. Those who made themselves available to do so on Sunday numbered only six, however.

The bulldozer, hired by the conservation department with additional funds made available by area sportsmen, continued to work in the area during the first part of this week. Contributions for payment of the dozer are as follows: Pennington County club, $50; Red Lake Falls, $50; East Grand Forks, $100; Crookston, $25; and the Northwest Association of Conservation Clubs, $50. A crew from the Central Marshall County Sportsmen club in Middle River has worked in nearby areas of deer concentration.

The work that has been done is expected to benefit the deer considerably, but the heavy snow has done a great deal of damage. Many fawns now being carried by does will have been lost as a result of malnutrition, Farmes said, adding that it is too early at this time to predict the effect on next fall's deer season. There is, however, no cause for alarm over the prospect of a closed season, he said.

Suggestions have been heard lately that the conservation department is not doing all that it might in the drive to save the deer. Clarification may be found in the bulletin entitled "Minnesota Plan for Emergency Winter Care of Deer and for Deer Yard Improvement" published by the department. Self-styled experts have suggested artificial feeding of deer with hay, alfalfa and corn. The bulletin gives the following reasons why this is not the best approach and is not recommended:

In the vicinity of hay piles where deer are concentrated, they also feed on any available natural browse and soon eliminate it, causing a rapid deterioration of the area for future natural feeding. Constant upkeep of these areas is important as the deer return to them year after year.

2. When feeding from hay piles, the older deer benefit most and the fawns least. The fawns are pushed away by the older and stronger deer. Pregnant does may may lose fetuses by being butted or kicked when competing for the hay.

3. Only a small number of deer can be reached by artificial feeding. May yarding areas are inaccessible by road. Browse cutting crews can go to the deer yards and cut trees and brush over a large area.

4. When deer are concentrated in small areas as a result of artificial feeding, there is greater possibility for spreading of diseases and parasites, and for attracting predators and poachers. Feeding of deer close to highways may result in an increased number of car-deer accidents.

5. Hay is not natural food for deer, and much of it is wasted. About 80 per cent of timothy-brome hay is not eaten; 40 to 50 per cent of clover; and even for Grade I alfalfa about 25 per cent is wasted. Loss occurs through trampling and because much of the coarse hay and alfalfa stems are not eaten.

For the great bulk of the northern forest deer herd, the only practical solution to a food shortage is the cutting of browse in and around yarding areas, the bulletin states, also pointing out the importance of well-packed trails between the food and the area where the deer are finding shelter. Deer will not travel through deep snow to get to food, either natural or artificial.

Crookston, T.R.F. Win in Monday Tourney Games

The Crookston Pirates and the Thief River Falls Prowlers won their semi-finals games in District 31 basketball torunament play at Grand Forks on Monday night. Crookston, bouncing into an early lead, maintained control of their game to defeat the East Grand Forks Green Wave, 61 to 45. And the Prowlers were hard-pressed to edge out an ever-trying Warren squad, winning by a 49 to 42 score.

Crookston, in the opening game of the two-game program, moved into an early lead, holding a 9 to 2 margin at the end of the first period, and it was not until two and a half minutes into the second period that East Grand Forks was able to garner a field goal with Gary Winkka driving in for a lay-up.

The Pirates, with Norm Newell corraling for seven field goals, held a 25 to 17 lead at the intermission. And coach Craig Johnson's fast-moving Crookston squad increased that lead to 40 to 30 at the end of the third period. Scott McFarlin, who proved adept at recovering and tipping in rebounds, paced the Pirates in their second half scoring, with the Crookston forward looping in eight field goals and five free throws. McFarlin, who was scoreless in the first period had two field goals and a free throw in the second period to provide the Pirates with a 26-point production.

East Grand Forks, forced to play catch-up basketball, never was able to reach the Pirates, although at one time the East Siders pared the Crookston lead to five points, 43 to 38. A Green Wave layup was missed, and from then on the Pirates controlled the tempo of the game.

The Thief River Falls Prowlers were unable to shake off the Warren Ponies in the second game on Monday night's semi-finals, and it was the six-point lead that the Prowlers gained in the first period 14 to 8, that provided the locals with their winning margin.

In that first period scoring, Karl Poppenhagen scored three field goals and Tommy Cummings and Bob Brodin adding a pair apiece. Cummings, incidentally was held to his lowest scoring effort of the season by the tenacious man-to-man defense of Warren's Lee Hoass. Cummings had eight points for the game.

The Warren squad, trailing by a 36 to 29 score entering the final period, made a strong bid to take over the lead when, with 4:15 to play, Bruce Ranstrom, from close in, scored a field goal to cap a seven-point scoring surge by the Ponies that brought the score to 40 to 38 for the Prowlers. At one point midway in the third period, Warren had pared the Prowler lead to a single point, 25 to 24, but Bruce Saustad's field goal, and a free throw and field goal by Bob Brodin shoved the Prowlers into a six-point lead.

But in the final minutes of the fourth period, Cummings added a pair of free throws; Mark Stromberg notched a free throw, and, after Dick Engelstad had hit on a long shot for Warren, Poppenhagen scored a Prowler field goal. Hoass with 1:50 to play, looped in a fielder from the left corner; but Brodin, who was the game's high scorer, marked up four free-throw points, getting the final two points with but 30 seconds to play, and the Prowlers had a hard-earned 49 to 42 win.

Open House Slated At Wildlife Areas

In conjunction with National Wildlife Week and Minnesota Wildlife and Conservation Week the Minnesota Conservation department will hold open house Sunday afternoon at several field headquarters including the Thief Lake, Red Lake and Roseau Wildlife areas. Purpose of the open house event is to show the public the installations and type of work being carried out by the department's divisions at the local level.

The National Wildlife Federation has selected "Protect Natural Beauty" as the theme of the week. Mining, overgrazing, poor agricultural practices and construction work often opens soil to erosion, the federation points out. Natural beauty is preserved and the siltation of streams is reduced when soil scars are healed by the planting of suitable trees, shrubs and grasses.

Prowlers Nip Pirates For District 31 Title

Three times this season Thief River Falls has defeated Crookston by one-point margins in basketball, but it was on Tuesday night that the Prowlers produced the biggest point as they edged the Pirates, 48 to 47, in the championship finals of the District 31 tournament that was played on the UND fieldhouse court in Grand Forks.

Coach Whitey Olson's Prowlers, as the District 31 champions, will now enter Region Eight competition, meeting coach Jim Musburger's Karlstad Rabbits from District 32 in a regional first-round game at 9 p.m. on Friday night, March 18. Karlstad gained the regional by scoring a 66 to 56 win over the Middle River Skippers in the District 32 finals.

The other Region Eight first-round game on Friday will find the Bemidji Lumberjacks of District 29, the defending regional champions, meeting the Ada Vikings of District 30 at 7:30 p.m. Bemidji defeated Littlefork, 76 to 50, to win the District 29 title; and the Ada Vikings defeated Bagley, 70 to 51, for the District 30 championship.

In Tuesday night's dramatic championship finals, the Prowlers had to overcome a sluggish first period, which found Crookston moving ahead by as much as seven points at one time, and with the Pirates holding a 16 to 13 lead at the end of the period, Bob Brodin kept the Prowlers within reach of the Pirates during the period by dropping three field goals into the west basket.

Crookston held the lead until the final seconds of the second period when Tommy Cummigs, from close in, scored to give the locals a 27 to 26 margin at the intermission.

The game rocketed along at an even pace during the third period with field goals by Norm Newell and Ron Mutcher giving the Pirates a 38 to 36 lead with a minute to play. Cummings dropped in a pair of Prowler free throws, and the game was in a 38-all knot entering the final stanza.

Newell scored on a reobound with 6:45 to play, and Crookston took over the lead. But Mark Stromberg, on a reverse hook, looped in a field goal. Mutcher, fouled by Neil Josephson, made a pair of free throws, and the Pirates regained the lead. Cummings, with 1:59 to play, hit on jumper. Mutcher notched a Pirate free throw, to again give Crookston a lead.

But Karl Poppenhagen, making the first of three baskets that he tallied in the final minute and twenty seconds, scored on a rebound. And then Poppenhagen, taking a pass from Brodin, scored on a layup. Mutcher, with 42 seconds to play, scored on a jump shot from the lane; but Poppenhagen, with 25 seconds to play, scored from close in and the Prowlers had a 48 to 45 lead. Mutcher's field goal, with 10 seconds to play, pared that lead to one point, 48 to 47.

In a consolation game, the East Grand Forks Green Wave scored a 71 to 57 win over the Warren Ponies.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

It's on to the Regional

The basketball Prowlers with an all-out team effort, and three fourth-period clutch baskets by Karl Poppenhagen, defeated the Crookston Pirates, 48 to 47, to win the District 31 title. It's the 22nd district title for the Prowlers since basketball was organized on a state-wide basis back in 1913.

The Prowlers will begin their Region Eight play by meeting the Karlstad Rabbits of District 32 at 9:00 p.m. on Friday night, March 18. The Bemidji Lumberjacks of District 29 will play the Ada Vikings of District 30 at 7:30 p.m.

But of all the high school sports activities it is difficult to surpass the thrills and excitement of basketball on the regional tournament level. District play provides thrills and excitement, but in regional play the stakes are much higher, with a state tournament berth for the winner. And the games are usually bitterly-contested.

The Region Eight tourney that opens on Friday will be the 36th annual tournament. Actually it will be the 42nd annual regional tourney, but from 1925 through 1930, Thief River Falls, Crookston, Warren and other teams in this area, belonged to Region One. And this Region One comprised an area along the western border of the state, with such teams as Moorhead, Elbow Lake, Benson, Hancock and others in the region. Since 1931 the present setup has been in use.

And during these many years there have been some hectic and thrilling games. One of the highlight games was the regional finals in 1938 between the Prowlers and the Bemidji Lumberjacks, and which found the Prowlers (who went on to win the state tourney), make a strong rally in the fourth period to overcome a Bemidji lead and win by a 35 to 32 score.

And who can forget that 1941 regional, played here, when coach Glenn Barnum's Bemidji club had to play, and win, two overtime games. The 'Jacks defeated the Prowlers, 35 to 34, in an overtime game in a first-round game, and then had to play double overtime to edge out Hendrum, 30 to 28, in the finals. It's no wonder that Barnum quit coaching and went into the business of selling silverware.

You surely miss something if you fail to make the short jaunt to Grand Forks and the regional tourney.

No Surprise

The world hockey tournament was concluded at Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, on Sunday, and to no one's surprise the Russian squad, with a record of six wins and one tie, good for 13 points, won the tourney.

In second place was Czechoslovakia with six wins and a loss that being a 7 to 1 defeat by Russia on Sunday. Canada was in third place with five wins and two losses; Sweden in fourth place with three wins, three losses, and a tie (that with Russia); East Germany had a record of two wins and five losses, as did the United States team.

The surprise was that the United States squad, which was a hastily-organized club, was forced to win its final two games, against East Germany, by a 4 to 0 score, and Poland, by a 6 to 4 score, to remain in the Class A group of the world tournament. If the United States team had lost these games the Americans would have been shunted into Group B, containing such teams as Romania, Austria, Hungary, Great Britain, Norway, Switzerland and others. That surely would have been a "falling off" of a team that, in 1960, won the Olympic hockey title.

It is evident that the United States must put out more effort in building a squad for international play. And the fact is that the international setup is against the Americans and the Canadians. Said Gary Begg of Winnipeg, who was named, along with Russia's Aleksander Ragulin, as the tournament's all-star defensemen: "Before I come back to Europe to play, somebody will have to shake these people up enough to let them know they can't push us around anymore.

"As it is now, it's Canada and the United States against the rest," concluded Begg.

And speaking of hockey, the Warroad Lakers and the Winnipeg Maroons are all tied in their best-of-seven Manitoba Senior Hockey league semi-finals, with each team having won a pair of games. The Maroons edged the Lakers, 4 to 3, at Winnipeg on Sunday evening. The fifth game of the series is scheduled, weather and ice conditions permitting, for the Warroad arena on Thursday night, March 17.

The winner of this series will meet the winner of the Selkirk vs. Dryden series for the right to represent the league in the Allen Cup playdowns. The Lakers have persuaded the 43-year old Bill Juzda to come back into action, and the veteran proved to be the game's most effective blue-liner on Sunday.

Medics Win in Bowling Tourney

The women's city bowling league concluded their annual tournament at the Family Bowl lanes on February 28, with the team event being the concluding event. Eighty-six bowlers participated in the doubles event; eighty-four bowlers competed in the singles event; twenty-eight teams were in competition in the team event; and seventy-one bowlers participated in the all-events.

In the team event, the Medics, with games of 754-798-731, and with handicap of 420 pins, had an aggregate of 2,694 for first place.

Barbara Olson won the singles event by posting scores of 178-152-165, and with a handicap of 94 pins, had an aggregate of 589 pins. That score was two pins better than the 587 score recorded by Evvie Womack.

In the doubles competition, the duo of Lu Ekeren and Sam Rasmussen, with an aggregate of 1,095 edged out the Ruby Huseth and Beverly Ranum combination, who had 1,094. Lu Ekeren had an aggregate of 554 pins, and Sam Rasmussen had a total of 541 pins.

Mary Washnesky, with a total of 1,674 pins, won the all-events competition. Hildie Hamre posted a 1,6?? to gain runnerup honors.

"Natural Beauty" Is Wildlife Week Theme

National Wildlife Week, to be observed March 20-26, has as its theme the "Preservation of Natural Beauty"—about-facing the spreading image of an ugly America. Members of the Minnesota Conservation federation, co-sponsor with the National Wildlife federation, believe this is something every outdoor enthusiast can actively do something about.

County chairmen will cooperate with sportsmen's clubs and the department of conservation in promoting the statewide observance under direction of nature artist Roger Preuss, state chairman.

"Anyone can do something about it, if only by policing his own habits, and thereby setting an example for others," said the chairman.

Preuss pointed out that new state and federal laws and programs will be of value in cleaning up or screening ugliness which mars the scenic beauty along highways, but it will largely be up to the individual to preserve the natural beauty which makes the outdoors so enjoyable. Most conservation practices also improve natural beauty.

In other areas the chairman urged an increasing public awareness of the problem of pollution of both water and air. And need for concern with proper planting on highway and utility rights-of-way, to set out varieties which offer important food and cover habitat for wildlife.

"Prevention is of course the best cure to any blight of Minnesota's out-of-doors," the chairman said. "But an effective program will depend on virtually unanimous recognition of conservation measures, rather than on the efforts of a dedicated few."

National Wildlife Week has been held each year since 1938.

Expect '66 Teal Season Following 1965 Experience

Details of Minnesota's 1965 experimental teal season have now been released in a report by the U. S. Dept. of Interior. It was found that 67 per cent or about 37,000 of the 5,000 hunters who received special permits last fall actually went hunting.

"On the basis of available information Minnesota is tentatively planning to participate in a special teal season again this year." (An experimental teal season in 1966 has been authorized by the U. S. Department of Interior for the Mississippi and Central Waterfowl Flyways. This will be the second season of the three-year experimental period originally planned.)

Hunters bagged 150,000 teal during the two and one-half day season last year, almost all of them blue-winged teal.

The total kill of 191,000 birds included 20 per cent which were crippled and 8,200 protected ducks. Thirty-five per cent of the teal hunters took their daily limit of four teal.

The kill of protected ducks was calculated to be about four per cent of the total duck kill, and included about 3,600 wood ducks, 2,000 mallards, 1,000 widgeon, 500 redheads and a few merganser and other species.

Ted Shields, director of the division of game and fish, indicated considerable pride in the fact that Minnesota teal hunters had been as careful as they were in shooting only teal. Hunter performance in Minnesota in selectively shooting teal was better than average for the states participating in the teal season. Credit for this also should be given to the game wardens who made a special effort to enforce the regulations.

However, Shields was also quick to point out that even this good hunter record could be improved upon. Wood ducks, for example, were found to be the most frequently killed of the protected ducks during this season. Mistakes of this kind should not occur since wood ducks are one of the more distinctive birds. Also, it was found that many hunters in the field frequently shot at protected birds. Hunter performance varied considerably throughout the state, some areas having had excellent hunter performance and others not.

"There are some aspects of the teal season that we are still uncertain of," Shields indicated. "We do not have complete information from banding reports to indicate what the resident teal harvest was, and it is still too early to measure changes that may occur in our resident breeding populations this spring.

1966 RRV Sports Show Starts March 18 in Crookston

Maggie, a 94-pound trained chimpanzee from Africa, will be one of the star attractions at the wild animal display at the 1966 presentation of the Red River Valley Sports Show. This year's three-day run will be held March 18-20 at the Winter Shows building in Crookston with doors being open all three days from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Advance tickets are now on sale, which will be honored all three days of the show. According to Freeman Smith, chairman, tickets purchased the day of the show will be good for the day only. Tickets are available at Crookston Electric Motors and Marine, Scott's Sport Shop and Eagle Drug, all of Crookston, and the Grand Forks Tent and Awning company of Grand Forks.

This year's wild animal display will include bears, a timber wolf, two spotted fallow deer, an elk and two rare peacocks. The wild animals will be brought from the Pinske farm at Gary.

Editorials . . .

"It is no easy thing to tell a story plainly and distinctly by mouth; but to tell one on paper is difficult indeed, so many snares lie in the way. People are afraid to put down what is common on paper, they seek to embellish their narratives, as they think, by philosophic speculations and reflections; they are anxious to shine, and people who are anxious to shine can never tell a plain story." —George Borrow

Law Can't Make Jobs

This year an effort will be made to further increase the federal minimum wage. A good many people favor an increase on purely humanitarian grounds. They want to see the lower-income groups in our society helped. This is a tribute to their hearts—but not to their heads, and there are several reasons why that is true.

For one thing, an arbitrary boost in wages that is not accompanied by gains in productivity must produce one certain result—higher prices, more inflation. And the burdens of inflation fall heaviest on people of small means. It obviously does no one any good if we put a little more money in one of the worker's pockets—and then take it or a greater amount out of another pocket in the form of increased living costs.

For another thing, wage increases which are not accompanied by higher worker productivity compel employers to reduce their labor force to the limit. There are businesses which have room for beginners, the unskilled, the marginal and part-time workers.

Retailing is an excellent example of this. But retailing is also an intensely competitive business in which profit margins are generally low. Most stores simply can't absorb wage increases without raising prices. So, as the wage and hour laws are used to force wages higher and higher, the retailer has no choice except to employ as few of the unskilled and little-skilled as possible. Then these people are denied the opportunity to gain experience which would qualify them for more responsible and better paying jobs.

The law can be used to fix wages at any level, but it can't create the jobs to go with the higher pay.

Wise Words

In spite of huge costs to the nation being created by the escalating war in Viet Nam, the administration in Washington seems determined to pursue its course for ever-expanding and highly questionable welfare programs within the nation. We approve of the comments by Charles Stevenson in an article published in a recent edition of the Reader's Digest. He states:

"Isn't it time for us to stop kidding ourselves that politicians' statements of noble purpose, combined with phony 'gifts', consitute a substitute for achievement?" Isn't it time for us to insist that the politicians make old welfare programs work before they plunge us into a host of new ones?"

"The record shows that the inherent wastefulness of government spending programs is invariably compounded by inefficiency. Still more of the same will waste the taxpayers' hard-earned money while risking national ruin by inflation and taxations. And it will turn a nation of self-reliant people into a nation of individuals so dependent on government handouts that they have neither the will nor the capacity to endure."

God Bless America

The following editorial appeared in the Washington Executive:

The other day a New York City detective sang "God Bless America." There's nothing remarkable about that. Policemen sing "God Bless America" every day. But this uniformed thrush made the grievous error of doing so before an audience containing a high concentration of kooks and exhibitionists attending a "read-in" at Town Hall.

The self-ordained intellectuals were participating in a familiar ritual—condemning U. S. nastiness to the Communists in Viet Nam. The detective is a member of the bomb squad. There had been a telephone threat to bomb the building. He was sent to inspect the place and to make sure the audience wasn't blown to smithereens. He was detailed to stay on and protect the crowd. He couldn't believe his ears — and now he's in trouble. At last report he was scheduled to be hauled up on departmental charges, and that can be serious, indeed, when you consider the highly liberal complexion of the new faces in New York's City Hall.

The way the impromptu concert broke out, 1,500 do-it-yourself foreign policy experts were squatting in Town Hall waiting to hear Joel Oppenheimer. He's what you might call an intellectual's poet, complete with tangled, shoulder-length hair. Joel was waiting in the wings to wow the audience with golden Oppenheimerese when out popped the detective singing "God Bless America."

If the fellow had burst out with the thrilling notes of "The Internationale" things might have gone differently. But "God Bless America"?

Poet Oppenheimer was equal to the occasion. Sensing that something ineffably evil was taking place he yelled: "Get off. What do you think you're doing here? We have been hearing that song long enough."

Having heard somewhere that all intellectual-type liberals are passionately devoted to freedom of expression, the detective appealing to let me be heard?"

In true intellectual - type liberal fashion, ed to them: "Can I be heard? Are you goback came a resounding "No!"

The detective walked off the stage, and we suspect he's still walking — pounding a solitary beat somewhere in the outer reaches of New York City. For the vengeful Town Hallers were not content just to get the detective offstage. They made it plain they'd have him arrested unless they were assured he'd be hauled up on departmental charges.

The moral: don't sing patriotic songs to intellectuals.

Wildlife Week

Protection and preservation of natural beauty will be emphasized during National Wildlife week to be observed March 20-26. Although the term "wildlife" seems somewhat restrictive, the week-long observance is dedicated to the cause of conservation in its many forms. The event is sponsored by the National Wildlife federation.

Beauty is not an easy thing to measure. It is not subject to scientific analysis and has no monetary value in its most true sense. To different people beauty means different things. While one person might consider New York City beautiful when viewed at night from the top of the Empire State building, another might believe there is more beauty in the geologic conditions of the Grand Canyon.

The difference here lies in the close-up view. Few would find beauty in the filth and clamor of New York City when viewing it up close, but many would find beauty in a close look at the Grand Canyon's beauty spots. The National Wildlife federation is concerned about the natural beauty of the nation and man's seemingly intense pursuit of desecrating it.

As more and more of the nation's people are jammed into the crowded metropolitan areas, less and less of them by percentage come to know the true beauty of our country's great natural resources. It is impossible to create artifically the beauty in a silent forest, a swift-running stream of clear water, a deep breath of fresh and unpolluted air, the delicacy of a tiny wild flower, the graceful movements and color of our wild birds and animals.

It is good for us to reflect during wildlife week on the heritage of nature's beauty which our nation contains, and to rededicate ourselves to the task of preserving this beauty for future generations.

What man has done to nature is amply covered in a poem, "America the Ugly", by Brent Renfrow, a Boy Scout from Moorestown, N. J. It was published in a National Wildlife federation publication on Wildlife Week, and is as follows:

Oh pitiful for smoggy skies
For jungles made of stone.
For blazing mountains tragedies,
Where bubbling brooks did roam.
America! America!
We shed our trash on thee,
And now regret the mess we made,
From sea to shining sea.
How terrible the picnic trash,
The beer cans by the road.
The sewage pipes that feed the streams,
Their deadly, smelly load.
America! America!
With lakes of glistening foam
And airplanes spraying poisons on,
The dear land we call home.

Who Will It Be?

Both political parties in Minnesota are trying to make up their respective minds as to what course they should take in wooing the voters in the November election. Although there are almost all offices up for election this year, the major interest centers on the top state office—that of governor of the land of 10,000 lakes.

For the DFL—which finds a number of widening cracks in its gubernatorial wall—the question will be whether to repair the wall or start building a new one. The old wall—in the form of incumbent Karl Rolvaag—has indicated he intends to remain standing, but there are powers in the party who would like to see a little political urban renewal in that section of the DFL. Among these are Lt. Gov. A. M. Keith, who offers ambition if nothing else, and we believe he offers nothing else.

Meanwhile, the Republican party finds itself in the position of having a golden opportunity to push down the wall from the outside, but doesn't have the tracks on its bulldozer. The GOP machine is getting a lot of noise from its engine but is making no real progress in moving against the wall.

For at least the last six months the Republicans have been saying they have the candidates, and to date they have failed to produce anything that looks like a real threat. Several prominent names have been mentioned, but one by one they have indicated they feel more secure in their present offices and would rather not vacate a sure thing in pursuit of another office which might produce only an arm-load of campaign expenses.

We shall be forced to wait until the parties hold their conventions and select their candidates before we can become very excited about the candidates. Our money will ride on Gov. Rolvaag for the DFL endorsement. If the GOP wants a good chance to regain the top state position, however, it will have to pry loose at least one of the better-known party members who have so far declined to seek nomination. The governorship won't come by default; the wall will not crumble entirely of its own accord.

NOW...THROUGH MINNESOTA BLUE CROSS & MII
THE MOST COMPLETE MEDICARE
SUPPLEMENTAL COVERAGE AVAILABLE!

Medicare benefits provide excellent protection. But many persons eligible for both Part A (hospital services) and Part B (physicians' services) of Medicare, will want to supplement this protection.

Now, Minnesota Blue Cross and MII are making available three options of coverage which those persons eligible for and covered by Medicare benefits can purchase to provide the most complete supplemental benefits available today.

Generally, Option #1 provides benefits from the 91st day (where Part A of Medicare leaves off) . . . Option #2 fills the gaps that Part A (hospital services) of Medicare does not cover, PLUS an additional 90 days of benefits . . . Option #3 provides $10 a day, commencing with the first day of an accident, and the 8th day of sickness for 365 days per confinement, as defined in the contract.
NO PHYSICAL EXAMINATION . . . NO HEALTH HISTORY FORM

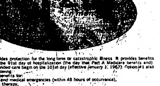
OPTION 1:

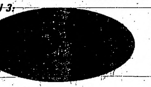


Option #1 provides protection for the long term or catastrophic illness. It provides benefits beginning with the 91st day of hospitalization (the day that Part A Medicare benefits end). Benefits for extended care begin on the 101st day (effective January 1, 1967). Option #1 also provides the following:
(1) Outpatient benefits for:
a. accident and medical emergencies (within 48 hours of occurrence),
b. radiation therapy,
c. physical therapy,
d. minor surgery
(2) World wide coverage.

OPTION 2:

Option #2 is the BLUE CROSS COMPREHENSIVE approach to supplementing Medicare. It provides for the $40 deductible not covered under Part A of Medicare. It also provides for the $10 a day coinsurance from the 61st to the 90th day, required under Part A of Medicare. Option #2 also provides the following benefits NOT covered or partially covered under Medicare.
(1) Outpatient benefits for:
a. accident and medical emergencies (within 48 hours of occurrence),
b. radiation therapy,
c. physical therapy,
d. minor surgery.
(2) Up to 90 days of hospital care in addition to Medicare.
(3) Additional days (up to 180) in approved extended care facilities (effective January 1, 1967).
(4) In-hospital dental care required to safeguard health, i.e., fractures dislocation of jaw, extraction of impacted teeth under direction of Doctor of Dental Surgery who is a member of the hospital staff.
(5) World wide coverage.

OPTION 3:



Option #3, the Medicare Supplemental Indemnity protection, provides $10 a day for 365 days . . . the money is paid directly to you to be used as you see fit . . . from the first day of hospitalization for accident cases, and from the 8th day for sickness or illness. This benefit is paid in addition to any payments you are entitled to through Medicare or any other program.

You can choose any one option, or a combination of either Option #1 or Option #2 with Option #3

Blue Cross Medicare Supplemental coverage (Options 1 and 2) are not designed to provide benefits for:
1. Workmen's Compensation cases.
2. Service in a veteran or other federal hospital or for injury or sickness resulting from war.
3. Professional Physician or private duty nursing service, except for Physicians services for anesthesia, radiology, pathology or physiatry when furnished by and billed through a Hospital.
4. Dental care, except as specifically described in the benefits.
5. Service furnished primarily for examinations or diagnostic study except when necessary due to symptoms of injury or sickness.
6. Services and supplies not used in the Hospital, blood and blood plasma, eye refractions or examinations or orthopedic shoes.
7. Pre-existing conditions until covered for six (6) months (the six months is reduced by preceding prior Blue Cross coverage).
8. Non-Acute Care Facility services furnished prior to January 1, 1967
9. Benefits payable under any other program.

MII Medicare Supplemental (Option 3) coverage is not designed to provide benefits for:
1. Workmen's Compensation cases;
2. Injury or sickness resulting from war;
3. Dental treatment or simple rest cures;
4. Pre-existing conditions until covered for six (6) months (this six months is reduced by preceding prior MII coverage).

If you are 65 or older, or are helping support someone who is, there are many advantages in Blue Cross-MII Medicare Supplemental coverage. NO physical examination required, regardless of age. NO medical records to provide. If you are already a Blue Cross member, there will be no red tape in converting to either of the combinations of options. Most important, your coverage will be backed, as always, by Blue Cross and MII integrity and efficiency. You will have the peace of mind that comes with knowing that Blue Cross and MII supplemental benefits combined with Medicare will provide you with the BEST possible protection at the lowest possible cost.

Patrol To Emphasize Major Law Violations

Plans for a traffic safety enforcement program in which all police agencies in the state would cooperate to make drivers more aware of the major violations that cause accidents has been announced by the Minnesota highway patrol.

The program calls for enforcement officers to place emphasis each month on one of the leading causes of traffic accidents. It will get under way in March, with the participants placing emphasis on the violation "following too closely" which is winter's leading cause of traffic collisions, according to Leo M. Smith, chief of the highway patrol.

Other causative factors to receive emphasis in coming months will be improper speed, vehicle condition, driver condition, pedestrian violations, improper passing, disregard to traffic control devices and failure to yield right of way.

The program is called "Operation Enforcement" and although the patrol as a state agency is initiating the program, the program will only succeed with the cooperation of all law enforcement agencies in the state, Smith said. While the patrol covers the 12,000-mile trunk highway system, it will be the job of the other police agencies to cover the great bulk of the state's roads and streets.

The program is the one phase of the state's total traffic safety program that is prepared especially for police officers. It is being initiated in accordance with a joint resolution adopted by the U. S. Congress in August, 1965, which calls upon all states to have a total safety program by 1967.

Each month the highway patrol will publish a special bulletin to go to all police agencies in the state. The bulletin will explain what the patrol plans to do during the month and will request all police to cooperate by following the same plan.

Although special emphasis each month will be placed upon the enforcement of a specific traffic law, this in no way means that other violations will come in for less attention than in the past, Smith said.

Litter Removal On Highways Is Down by $43,466

Cost of removing litter from the state highways was substantially reduced during 1965, reports the Minnesota highway department.

The total cost for last year of $188,006 is $43,466 below the previous year and reflects a favorable response by the public to antilitter appeals.

"If the present trend continues," Commissioner John R. Jamieson said, "we can continue to reduce littering costs and thereby provide more money for highway construction."

Jamieson ventured that congratulations seem to be in order to the motoring public for its conscious effort to reduce the needless eyesore of highway litter. "If more people will join those who are litter-conscious", he said, "we can realize an even greater reduction in this expense."

Foreign Sugar Imports Can Hurt Domestic Growers

Congressman Odin Langen warned recently that recent department of agriculture actions allowing unlimited imports of foreign sugar during the first quarter of this year could hurt domestic sugar producers.

In a letter to the secretary of agriculture, Langen said the department's "shotgun attack" in its campaign to roll back recent refined sugar price hikes in a few Northeast states could have repercussions in the rest of the country that would slash income for American producers of sugar crops in more than 25 states including the Red River Valley sugarbeet area of Minnesota and North Dakota.

Congressman Langen said the the gates to more foreign sugar department's actions in opening for the Northeast have driven down the raw sugar price to 12 cents below the "target" set by Congress, without reducing the price of refined sugar. He explained that the raw sugar price underpins the entir sugar price structure of the United States. The "target" price, defined by Congress in the Sugar Act, is geared to farmers' cost of production.

Langen first questioned USDA's actions last month when the department first added 100,000 tons to authorized imports for the first three months of this year. The authorized tonnage had been set at 700,000 tons. Langen said he now notes that the ceiling has been entirely lifted on foreign sugar for the first quarter.

Langen's letter to Secretary Freeman, in which he was joined by other members of congress from sugar-producing states, urged the dpeartment of agriculture to "practice greater restraint in its price-influencing quota actions in the future, and to strive for the party relationship in raw prices that was being achieved in 1965."

WHAT DOES HE SEE ?

What a birthday present! Young Dan can see all sorts of things with that telescope that are invisible to the naked eye. The sky, with its stars and its moon, seems so much closer.

Yet, there is still so much that remains unseen. The best instruments man can make are insignificant when measured against the scope and depth of God's universe.

That's where faith comes in. We know that there are other galaxies that can't be seen through even the most powerful of telescopes. And we know, too, that faith, though invisible, is the greatest power of all.

If faith is something that doesn't quite come across to you, the Church is the best place in the world to help you solve its mystery. If faith is already yours—what better way is there to reaffirm it than by going to church this Sunday?

In South Vietnam elementary schools, children often use a single notebook all year, erasing the pages and re-using them time and again for lack of ten piasters for another notebook. Each dollar given to CARE (125 E. Wells St., Milwaukee, Wis.) provides two kits of school supplies to Vietnamese village children. Printed on each notebook is a message telling the child his kit was provided through CARE by a private American citizen who wants to help him with his school work.

SOIL testing service

Determine the Need of your Soils and Crops with a Soil Test

Doctors never prescribe medicine without making a diagnosis first. The same principle can be applied in treating your soil. Making a soil test will tell you what plant food elements are low — what Smith-Douglass fertilizer is needed to bring the supply of plant food into proper balance for high crop yields.

We are ready to assist you with a soil test, and make recommendations which will enable you to apply Smith-Douglass fertilizer economically, to produce more profitable crops.
